A 'happy daze' among local education ranks

by Loren Bliss

The scars left by five years of consecutively failed tax levy proposals are gradually beginning to disappear from Federal Way's once-beleagured school system.

And in their place you can sense a new kind of optimism quietly developing amongst school board members, administrators and teachers alike. The reason, of course, is the 1979 Legislature's decision to begin immediately the full funding of basic education - one year ahead of the schedule that was thrashed out by the legislators in 1977.

For Federal Way this has meant a $7.7 million shot in the

Miss Des Moines takes top billing

by Nathalie Weber

The first thing the new Miss Washington Janelle Martz plans to do when she returns to her Normandy Park home this weekend is go fishing.

But until then she will spend this week in Vancouver, Wash., adjusting to her new role as the state's representative, later to compete in this year's Miss America pageant. Martz, the former Miss Des Moines, was selected as Washington's ideal Saturday night in Vancouver.

"It's wonderful," the obviously overwhelmed 22-year-old said just after the announcement of her selection. "I had a ball. I said I was going to have fun doing it and I did."

Martz acknowledged being extremely tired Saturday night after a week of intense preparation for the pageant, but the evening had only begun at 11 p.m. Receptions and the coronation ball left only two hours for sleeping before Sunday's activities began.

By Monday morning, however, Martz was refreshed and ready to go again. "I went to bed at 6 last night and got 13 hours of sleep." she explained in a telephone interview Monday.

But, in addition to her prizewinning performance of rieg's Piano Concerto in A Minor, Martz said she had an edge because she didn't let the pressure of the week unstabilize her plan to use the position so people will come and talk to me," she said. And, of course, the experience will be a learning one, further fulfilling another of her goals

THE NEXT THREE months before the Miss America pageant will be largely spent preparing for that competition. There are clothes to buy, piano to practice and always appearances to make and Martz said she's ready to jump right into it.

"I'm aiming for the top 10 (in Miss America competition)," she said. "After that, nobody knows. But I can visualize being there, being positive and sure. That's all I can do."

In recognition of her achievement, Martz received a $2,100 scholarship, use of a car during her reign, more than $1,000 for wardrobe, diamond and gold jewelry, the trip to Atlantic City for the Miss America pageant, a total of $475 for her talent award and other prizes.

Other details, A-3.

Three locals "Everybody realizes that there is a tremendous amount of work marz ATTRIBUTES her place in

Three of the top five contestants recognized last weekend in the Miss Washington pageant are South King County residents. In addition to Miss Des Moines Janelle Martz, who was crowned Miss Washington, representatives from Kent and from Whatcom County and a Burien resident who attends school in Bellingham also were among the four runners up. Miss Kent, Barbara Gregory, who performed on the banjo as her talent, placed as second runner up and will receive a $500 scholarship. Miss Whatcom County, Nora Martin, a 1976 graduate of Highline High School who performed ballet as her talent, was named fourth runner up and will receive a $300 scholarship. Miss Burien, Joleta Willott, who sang "Don't Rain on My Parade," also competed in the pageant.

arm, an increase in the 1979-80 education budget from $21 million to about $28.7 million.

"We're all in a kind of happy daze," said Ron Johnson, the district's assisting superintendent. "And the thing that makes everybody feel best is that now we're going to be able to add back some of the important classes we had to cut out.'

BUT THAT'S only a part of what's happening. Grounds maintenance, reduced almost to nothing by the funding cutbacks of recent years, will begin again late this summer.

And Totem Junior High School is getting a new roof.

'We'll replace about half of the roof by next year," said Jim Rowlands, the district's publicist. In addition to all this, he said, "extensive interior and exterior painting is going on at Federal Way and Thomas Jefferson high schools and at several of the elementary and junior high schools as well.

And then there's the re-opening of Panther Lake Elementary School.

"Panther Lake was closed in 1975 because of levy failure," said Rowlands. "When we open it in the fall we'll be able to reduce the enrollment at Twin Lakes from 700 to about 500 students.'

Last year, he added, Twin Lakes was overcrowded by about 200 kids.

"That's really going to take some pressure off Brigadoon Elementary School too," said Johnson, elaborating on Rowland's statement.

BECAUSE OF all the reconstruction - about 100 newteachers will be hired by fall morale is "about the highest I've ever seen it, at least during the last five years," Johnson said.

involved, but it's the kind of work people are enthusiastic about doing because it's building something," he said. "It's not go-ing in the other direction, like we were for so long.'

Johnson says that as a result of the funding boost, "programs will be better, facilities will be more useful and everything will look a lot more attractive."

All of this, he says, "will have a positive impact on everybody in the district, teachers, parents and students alike."

Nevertheless, Johnson warned the public against expecting too much too soon. "It's not going to happen all at once," he said, " but at least we now have a running start on it."

A STATEMENT of delighted reaction also came from the Federal Way Education Association, the teachers' union.

Its president, John Metcalf, hailed the funding increase and said of the new optimism that "it's good."

He said that a fair share of the credit for keeping the program functioning as well as it did during the lean years "must go to the teachers who...accepted salary increases that didn't keep up with the increase in costs of living." "We welcome," he said, "the chance we have to restore programs and have smaller classes.'

The problems which plagued the local schools began in 1974, when the first of the consecutively defeated levies was turned back by the voters.

As the district's financial situation worsened, the state Supreme Court ruled in a Seattle case that financing schools by means of levies was unconstitutional.

At the same time it ordered the legislature to write a definition of basic education, so the state could take over the responsibility for funding.

The 1977 legislature complied, writing a law that phased in full funding over a three-year period. At the request of Gov. Dixy Lee Ray, the phase-in period was shortened so that 100 percent financing became a reality this year.

"I just take it a day at a time, that's my philosophy. Don't worry about tomorrow," she said.

Looking toward the future, which also holds the Miss America pageant in September, Martz said she wants to achieve three things: that others would come to her if they need help or advice; that she be afforded the opportunity to continue learning, including improving her piano talent; and that some day she owns a private home, "nothing fancy, just private," she said.

Her role as Miss Washington will enhance some of those goals. Martz said, because such a title lends credibility to a person. "I

Building restrictions seen for hazard areas

by Darlene Himmelspach

An ordinance that some developers claim will make it impossible for owners of one or two lots in a possible landslide or other sensitive area to develop their property has been delayed for two weeks by the King County Council.

The council is considering the new regulations to protect wetlands, earthquake areas, coal mine hazard areas and other sensitive lands which "support unique, fragile or valuable natural features.'

Builders told the council there springs or seeping groundwater. were 2,200 houses built last year in the county by "people who only build one or two. They would be hit by this," he said. Harris said forcing a small developer to have a geological test of the lot before a building permit was issued would be financially prohibitive.

A Bothell home builder called the ordinance "overkill" and said problems with erosion could be mitigated merely by planting grass on the site. Don McDonald also criticized the provisions in the proposed law that would restrict development on landslide

Terre Harris of Seattle Master hazard areas characterized by Areas deemed sensitive by the county would require special studies to determine their suitability for development before building, grading or other permits would be issued by the county.

A recent cave-in during development of Fairwood Park near Renton followed soils studies done for the developer, according to Hugh Goldsmith, engineer for the project. The subsidance occurred two weeks ago over an abandoned coal mine. Goldsmith told the council he would like the section requiring evelopers in such areas to insure maintenance or repair for any damage that would occur for 20 years after occupancy is certified removed from the ordinance.

Councilwoman Pat Thorpe, whose district includes Fairwood Park, asked what the Fairwood developer's liability would be if the "subsidance had occurred five years after it was occupied?" "Probably none, currently," Goldsmith responded.

The council voted to allow staff two weeks to include some of the amendments proposed Monday in the ordinance before considering it again July 9.

The council voted to establish a five-person arson squad to help investigate and counteract fires which did an estimated damage in unincorporated King County last year of $8.543 million.

The arson unit will include two King County police officers and two fire marshalls and will be located in the county fire marshall's office. The estimated first year expense for the project is $175,000. The council appropriated $121,616 to get the program moving.

Editorials Squeaky wheels getting the diesel

Who should get top priority on diesel fuel? Independent truckers? Loggers? Fishermen? Mass transit? Farmers? Emergency vehicles?

There's no easy solution as all are vital to the economy and to the citizens of the country. The administration's approach seems to favor those who scream the loudest.

Farmers and fishermen need diesel to harvest their crop. Independent truckers need it to move the crop to market. Loggers need it to harvest and move their crop to the mill. Mass transit needs it to carry gas line weary passengers to work. Metro is the fastest growing transit system in the country. Emergency vehicles simply can't run on empty.

The Carter administration had placed top priority for loggers, fishermen and argiculture. Under pressure from truckers, they've removed the prioritization.

This "squeaky wheel" approach overlooks the obvious: There simply has to be enough diesel to go around. The oil company trend to hoard diesel for home heating next winter simply doesn't wash.

Refineries have the capacity to produce enough diesel to meet today's needs. The administration has the muscle to see thay they do, and they ought to get on with it.

homes. A club provides many children with the type of companionship they can't get at home.

The clubs are unique in that the hours of operation are set to fit the children's schedules. For example, during the school year, the clubs open after school and operate into the evening. In the summer, the clubs are open all day and until 8 or 9 p.m. Boys' clubs are funded by the community for the most part. The main source of funding is United Way. The successes of the Des Moines and Federal Way boys clubs are due largely to the support received from the community. The Des Moines club floundered until the Des Moines - Zenith Improvement Club got behind it

Reflections

by Jim Shahan

Ah, American ingenuity. By now I'm sure you've all heard or read about various gas line capers — gas station operators and independent entrepreneurs - all making a buck and taking advantage of the desperate motoring public.

But they've only scratched the surface and the potential for hustling a gas line is mind boggling.

There have been stories about gas station operators selling five gallon cans of gas for $10 to $25. Boy scouts have set up $1 car washes to raise funds, and some operators have reported offers of sexual favors for a tank of gas. They never say whether the woman intends to pay for the gas too, but that's real bartering in the market place.

Here are some other ideas from "Gas Line Capers Inc.," Jim Shahan Esq., president and chairman of the board.

1. Set up a coast-to-coast franchise of sports stadium type hucksters. There's a guy in Port Townsend making a mint selling hot dogs, clam chowder and coffee to waiting ferry patrons. The same could happen with gas lines

2. Youth opportunities for those old enough to drive car sitting. For a price a kid could pick up your car, take it to the station and return it full of gas.

3. Gas line lottery. Sell tickets for $1 each on how many cars will get gas during a given period. Winner gets a full tank, no waiting. Void where prohibited.

4. Tee shirt sales. "I've been had by Union 76." "When guns are outlawed Standard Oil will own the world." "You like this station? Well I paid for it last week." "Dirty old men need gas too." "All Arabs have gas."

5. Non-profit sales and petition signing. Gas lines

District eyeing increased busing

One of the final recommendations by school superintendent Vic Heinlen was that the district return to its pre-levy failure bus transportation of one mile for elementary school children and one and a half siles for secondary students.

Heinlen, who is retiring Friday, recommended that the board make a decision at the July 9 meeting on the busing question in order to allow transportation planners time to lay out new routes.

The district cut back on school bus runs, over protests of several parents, as an economy measure three years ago. The present policy is two miles for all students. The district is receiving increased support this year from the state for transportation.

In other business the board ratified a contract with the 34 members of the Association of Federal Way principals. The new one year contract calls for an 8.5 percent pay raise and an increase from $72.50 to $90 in insurance benefits.

District negotiator Bill Kildahl said that the state had designated Federal Way as a district which could give 8.5 percent pay hikes as a "catch-up" move to other districts and thus the pay raise does not violate the President's percent guideline.

Crime report: Three jailed in assault; vandals inflict big loss

Three Auburn men were arrested early Sunday morning following a bizarre incident in which two others, one of them a woman, were brutally assaulted at a Federal Way residence.

The victims, an 18-year-old Auburn woman and a 21-year-old Federal Way man, told King County police they were watching television at the man's 8th Avenue Southwest residence when they got a threatening telephone call at about 3 a.m. Sunday.

About 30 minutes later, they said, two men kicked in the front door and began beating both of them. The woman, police reported, was the more severely beaten of the two and suffered cuts and bruises on her face and head. She was also bitten on the face.

An officer who was apparently called to the scene by neighbors - some details of the case remained unclear Monday morning arrested one man outside the house after he reportedly acknowledged taking part in the attack.

The suspect, who was booked on charges of burglary and aggravated assault, is a 20-year-old Auburn man.

An hour or so later, as King County Officer R. E. Green was seeking the second suspect in Auburn, a 1968 red Camaro pulled up beside his patrol car. The driver of the Camaro, Green said. waved as if he were seeking assistance.

Green recognized the driver as . a man who had been at the assault scene, but when Green slowed, the Camaro sped away, he said.

A chase ensued that officers estimated reached 118 miles-perhour at one point, all of it on the streets of Auburn.

During the chase, the driver of the Camaro stopped once in a closed gas station, but then roared away again as Green approached. A few minutes later, the Camaro failed to negotiate a turn and slid down an embankment on A Street Southeast.

The driver fled on foot, but a few minutes later Green captured a 19-year-old Auburn man whose connection with the assault and burglary remains unknown.

Police booked the suspect at King County Jail, charging him with auto theft, reckless endangerment and reckless driving

The Camaro turned out to have been taken from a Tacoma woman who said that she had not reported the theft to police.

Police arrested the second suspected assailant, a 21-year-old Auburn man, at his girlfriend's house in Auburn. He was also booked on charges of aggravated assault and burglary

Detectives explained that though nothing was stolen from the scene of the assault, the burglary charges resulted from the forcible manner in which the assailants entered the house.

An investigation, they said, is continuing.

The first incident occurred at Neighbors later identified the two as, brothers aged 16 and 17 who live nearby. Police cited the pair into King County Juvenile Court and released them in the custody of their parents.

A similar incident occurred Sunday at a 21st Place South residence, when a member of the household returned in midafternoon.

Two boys were cited into juvenile court, both of them tenyear-olds.

Five larceny arrests were reported, three of them in connection with shoplifting incidents and the others in the wake of gas thefts.

A total of nine burglaries and 10 larcenies were reported. None of the larcenies involved loot of $500 or more, but several of the burglaries topped the $1,000 mark.

The largest occurred Friday during daylight hours when goods valued at $1,765 were taken from a Military Road South residence. The loot included photographic equipment and firearms.

Heidi Rifenberick and her mom Bettie enjoy working together on their projects.

Molding clay helps shape young minds

herited four ceramic molds from p.m. an aging relative, she developed a plan that would follow her through her next five years in the Federal Way School District.

Why not use ceramics as a method to inspire students with learning disabilities to put out more work was the gist of it.

A teacher at the Illahee Junior High Learning Center, she scrounged up additional molds from garage sales and and Goodwill, and was in business.

"I knew I had a hit when the regular kids used to come in and ask me how many classes they had to fail to get into ceramics," said Sandy laughing.

When Sandy Michalski in- that was held Thursday from 2-5

In addition, it created a situation where kids and parents and younger children had a chance to work together and become better acquainted through a mutual interest.

AS A MOTIVATOR the student project has been a success. Sandy credits the project with decreasing the drop-out level. Last year, with 12 less students, there were 17 drop-outs. This year, there were seven.

In the project, where Sandy said 75-80 percent of the 50 boys and girls were involved, students were given points for finishing reduced the cost from $3 per gallon to 75 cents.

The failures, pre-fired projects that either cracked or were broken can be recycled. "If the kids make something they don't want, it goes back in the machine and we grind it up," she said laughing over the appearance of the mud-splattered machine that sits near the wash basin.

Well supplied with glazes and fired samples, Sandy has a file cabinet filled with partially filled bottles that were donated by Betty Wadsworth from Betty's Slip-Inn, 8111 Pacific Highway E., Tacoma. "Without friends, we'd be dead in the water," commented Sandy looking at her sup-Instructor Sandy Michalski provides a supply of glazes donated by a frind.

Since then, Sandy has moved, ceramics and all to Thomas Jefferson High School where she works with the pre-vocational students, mostly in math.

This past school year, they are currently just winding up sessions, she's instigated two programs-one for the students and the other for parents and friends.

"When the parents heard about what a good time the kids were having, they wanted to join in," she said. Students who needed additional time to work on projects, often joined the after-school class assignments. After receiving 50 points, they were given one hour of free-time to work on ceramics. It was possible to earn one hour of free-time every two weeks.

Students have been expected to pay for the cost of the mud; other expenses have been absorbed through donations from Sandy and friends. The school provides $5 per month for crafts, but it doesn't go far.

Too cut costs, Sandy uses an old-fashioned ringer washer given to her by Lake Dolloff basic skills teacher Mildred Westerland. She buys dry slip (mud), adds chemicals and has plies.

Sandy estimates their sizable mold assortment to be worth nearly $3,000. Collected during the past five years, Sandy said she's always on the look-out for a bargain or a deal and broken bolds are her specialty. "I've glued many a mold in my day," she said chuckling. Sandy, who purchased the kiln this year donates its use as her contribution.

HAVE THE CLASSES BEEN worth the effort? Sandy said she is sure of it. "When you get students, sisters and parents involved...It all helps.'

Federal Way bursts out of slump with 13-7 win

by Harry Brooks A losing streak ended, while another continued Sunday afternoon.

Federal Way Concrete Pacific earned the better end of that deal by out-muscling West Seattle's Hideaway Restaurant, 13-7, at Sacajawea Park. Federal Way victory snapped a string of five consecutive losses, which included a 13-0 whitewashing by Paintings Unlimited the day before. West Seattle, which began its rookie WIL campaign by winning three of its first four, withstood its fourth straight setback Sunday.

West Seattle coach Orville Marsh pointed to his team's unsettled play in the field Sunday as an example of Westside's dismal turnaround.

"We've had so many injuries that we have people playing out of position in key spots," he said. "We can hit well, but we've been losing the other teams on the bases.'

West Seattle aided Federal Way's cause by committing six errors, four in the first two innings. To make matters worse for the Westsiders, they lost consistent-fielding third baseman Bart Foster to a severe finger sprain during Sunday's contest. THE FEDS took advantage of the West Seattle miscues, but their 15-hit attack was the prime mover. In retrospect, Federal Way only mustered three hits in Saturday's outing. However, FW coach Ron Bendorf noted that Saturday's output was an exception in Federal Way's overall offensive production this season. "We've been hitting pretty well all the way along," he said. "We've been getting three or four runs ahead and then stopped. We didn't do that today. We kept the pressure on all the way."

Federal Way, 2-6 after Sunday's win, met Adairs yesterday (results unavailable at press time). The Feds host South County tomorrow at 8 p.m. at Sacajawea and will enter the Pacific International Baseball Tournament in Vancouver this weekend. West Seattle, 3-5, traveled to Everett yesterday and will host Paintings Unlimited tomorrow. The game will begin at 8 p.m. at Moshier Field in Burien.

Dale Winebrenner, Doug Mc-Cracken, Rich St. John and T.R. Bryden highlighted Federal Way's attack Sunday. Winebrenner stroked three singles and took two walks in five chances at the plate. He scored twice and knocked in a run. McCracken popped three hits in five at-bats. The center fielder drove in two runs and scored twice. Bryden was two for five with rounded the bags three times. St. John had two hits in two trips, drove in two and scored once.

West Seattle's Drew Ackerlund had the best poke of the day, a two-run homer that cleared 330 feet to left in the second inning. Marcel Moran, who came in on Ackerlund's blast, struck three hits in five tries. Leadoff hitter Leo Lloyd brought home two teammates with a single and a double.

Federal Way keyed on Westside-issued errors and walks to take command in the early innings. Singles by Kevin Vallala, Bryden, Greg Murphy and Tim Swanson - plus two WS fielding blunders - gave Federal Way a three-run first inning.

Ackerlunds' round-tripper and Lloyd's RBI double knotted the score halfway through the second, but the Feds, again taking advantage of Westside's shakey defense, pushed a run across without notching a hit in the bottom of the second.

Federal Way used three straight two-out walks off of WS starter Brian Burke to fuel a three-run third inning rally. A single by Jerry Bendorf and Mc-Cracken's lined double to left produced the scoring. In the fourth, West Seattle closed the score to 7-5 by using two walks followed by Lloyd's and Foster's RBI singles, but the Westsiders didn'tcross the plate again until the eighth inning.

BY THAT TIME, Federal Way jumped its lead to 10-5. The Feds used a three-run sixth inning for that margin. Murphy smacked a two-run single, and St. John drove in the final tally with a base hit.

Singles by Bob Clements, Steve Schrette and a Dale Marsh double gave Westside a two-run eighth inning, but Federal Way countered with three in the bottom of that stanza. McCracken, Bryden, St. John and Winebrenner contributed hits to the insurance tally.

The Mariners ended the season with a perfect 15-0 record, only the second time in Highline South history that a team has gone undefeated. Extending back into last season, the Mariners have won 29 straight games.

The Cardinals performance in the championship game, was highlighted by some fine defensive plays by shortstop John Wiggins.

Tom Williams picked up the pitching loss for the Cardinals as he went the distance allowing nine hits while striking out six. Williams scored the only run of the contest for the Cardinals, in addition to going 2-3 at the plate. In the most exciting contest of

Landlord Insurance

Choosing the right policy

Three different kinds of landlords are offered three different kinds of insurance by the big insurance companies. Jack Stanford, of G. Allan Craig and Associates, suggests letting an insurance agent or lawyer, or both, check over the existing policies and the appropriate leases for gaps.

For the landlord of a dwelling occupied by four or more families (called four or more units in the industry), the appropriate insurance policy is a commercial building policy. It does not cover the tenants at all, but insures the landlord's property in the building itself, the rugs, drapes, refrigerators and everything else.

Usually such a policy does not cover the tenants, and the leases should make that clear, so that the tenants know they need homeowner's insurance. The appropriate policy is called an HO 4.

Many people in this area are renting out one or two houses. They also need insurance on their property, but a different kind. For dwellings of less than four units, the owner usually has a fire insurance policy, called Dwelling Fire Insurance.

That kind of insurance does not cover water damage and other kinds of damage, so Stanford suggests considering a special policy which could add on other coverages up to an all-risk policy which has only the regular exclusions.

"A landlord can extend his liability coverage from his own home to the homes he rents out very cheaply," Stanford points out. "It costs about $8 per year per dwelling. It's important because the landlord isn't there all the time and has no direct control over what goes on. Negligence is a factor in liability, and that's where the lawyers come in, but it's certainly inexpensive to have the coverage added to one's own homeowner's policy."

Owners of commercial space are the third big group of landlords. Usually their leases spell out the coverage they carry and the coverage they require their tenants to carry, but not always. Stanford says the new leases usually carry a waiver of rights, in which each party agrees to accept responsibility for its property.

When drawing up insurance for landlords and tenants of office space or other commercial property, Stanford likes to look at the lease himself to make sure all the areas of exposure are covered. He suggests that whether one is a landlord or a tenant, it makes sense to show the lease itself to the insurance agent, or the lawyer, or both.

Del Bianco DiPietro breaks record

April was nothing short of a stellar month for Del Bianco Realty, Inc.; two salespeople on the realty's staff broke company records for volume sold in one month.

Marian DiPietro was responsible for $480,000 of real estate volume for the month of April, setting a record for all of the Del Bianco offices. Her total surpasses the old mark of $384,000 set by Tom Monahan, who has recently been promoted as the head of Del Bianco's Burien office.

Adding to Del Bianco's record volume was Dianne Waechter, whose volumesold total of $346,000 constitutes the third highest for all Del Bianco offices.

The two records are even more impressive when it is taken into consideration that most realtys are very pleased if their salespeople can break $100,000 in volume sales. To have two totals above $300,000 in one month is extraordinary.

DiPietro has logged 14 years in the real estate field, including three and onehalf years with the Del Bianco firm. Waechter is new to the business by comparison; she started in real estate three years ago with Del Bianco.

Waechter currently resides in the Five Mile Lake area, having moved from Des Moines. She feels that Federal Way is "A great place to live and work," as does DiPietro.

"Federal Way is a wonderful place to live, raise families and invest in; and Del Bianco is a great company to work with," DiPietro said.

management and development company with real estate activities throughout the Pacific Northwest, including several parcels of commercial real estate in downtown Seattle, the Denny Regrade and First Hill.

Master Canners can help you out of a jam

by Sandra Thew

Ah summer, the wonderful season filled with ripe, declicious fruit and vegetables. Now is the time to preserve that freshness for the coming winter months.

Since more people are becoming aware of the advantages to home food preservation, the King County Cooperative Extension saw the need for a free hotline service that could answer the nultitude of questions concernng proper canning and Jehydrating technquues.

This year 37 volunteers underwent extensive training in the field of food preservation as part of the King Country Master Canners Hotline program. In exchange for. free training these men and women will offer 50 hours of their time to man a hotline and talk to groups on food preservation methods.

Two local Master Canners, Amay Graham and Maxine Gorsline joined the program because they had each used the services several times in the past and wanted to contribute something in return.

"I learned so much valuable information that will last me forever about preserving fruits and vegetables and the only thing the progam asks in return is a few hours of our time spent helping other people," Mrs. Graham said.

She and Mrs. Gorsline said canning procedures have greatly changed since grandmother canned her preserves and more attention is now being given to updating those old family favorites.

"The most important thing for a beginner to remember is to follow directions exactly or call the Master Canners if there are any questions." Mrs. Gorsline said.

"Beginners should concentrate on their canning project and not have their minds on something else. They should plan to spend the day canning and not doing other projects."

These warnings are important since food spoilage or ruined batches of preserves can happen because of three basic problems:

The organisms which cause food to spoil are yeast, mold, bacteria and enzymes that are found in the fruits and vegetables. By employing proper canning procedures the organisms are destroyed and the enzyme action stopped.

As a result of improper cooking and canning methods, the organism known as Clostridum Botulinum spores, which creates the deadly toxin botulism, may occur.

For this reason, the Master Canners stress placing canned fruits and pickled vegetables in boiling-water baths for five minutes and placing all vegetables, meats, poultry and fish in a pressure cooker-canner. The high heat will kill the Clostridum Botulinum.

When using jars for canning, the two women instructed that jelly glasses be used for only jelly; for preserves and soft jams use canning jars with lids that can be tightly sealed.

"Don't use other types of food jars for canning since they will not stand up to the high temperatures," Mrs. Gorsline said.

All jars and closures should be checked for cracks and chips; defects that allow air to seep in should be discarded.

Glass jars should also be sterilized in boiling water for 10 minutes, Mrs. Graham said, since the dishwasher does not reach temperatures that are hot enough.

A tight seal on the jar is also very important for protecting the food. When using paraffin for sealing jelly, the Master Canners advise against recycling the wax. Instead, they say use fresh paraffin each time.

When pouring paraffin, they recommend applying the first layer one-eighth-inch thick. After it has cooled, repeat the process for a second time, thus insuring a double thick protection.

To seal jars containing jam, place them in a water bath. This will help insure a tight seal.

"If jars do not seal properly

ioneer tales rekindled through recipes

by Sandra Thew

Collecting recipes has always peen a hobby for Martha Fehlman who started saving them since she was 12 years old and living in the western town of Big Piney, Wyo.

Recently visiting her son, Byron Fehlman and his wife Susann, of Des Moines, the lively pioneer baked up a batch of her favorite cinnamon rolls and sat down to talk about her cookbook, Martha's Wyoming Pioneer cookbook.

"I believe it's a great pity that the creation of fine foods is often lost when the life of the cook is gone," Mrs. Fehlman said with regret.

So rather than be secretive with her own prize winning recipes, the experienced cook decided to write down what she knew in a cookbook.

The final result was a book filled with more than 1,000 recipes and a blending of western history and sage advice for making food and life sweeter.

She firmly believes that recipes must be followed exactly to achieve a perfect dish.

"So many recipes today do not have complete instructions, but I tell how to do it."

A small notation in the cookbook reads:

Use a recipe? Never! My mother-in-law said.

She gets all her measurements from right out of her head. Just add a speck more and it will be all right.

And lo and behold her rolls are so light.

So I tried this method of using my head,

When I made my hussband my first batch of bread.

And even for luck on wood I did knock.

And guess what I got - bread hard as rock.

Mrs. Fehlman has divided her book in 10 sections including everything from soup to dessert. Along with each section she relates stories about growing up in Wyoming.

For example, she recalls her parents did not can fruits and vegetables, instead they stored dried fruits, apples, cabbage and carrots in the family root cellar. As a youngster, it was a big treat to visit her grandparents in Caldwell, Idaho and taste her first canned fruit.

While attending high school, Mrs. Fehlman and her sister, Mae, operated a candy and grocery store. Here they made their own confections and ice cream. Many of these sweet recipes are included in the cookbook.

"We didn't have electricity or running water," she recalled. "We had pot-bellied stoves that burned coal."

"My customers would always tease me by saying 'Martha every time you make a sale you put a lump of coal in the stove.' I did this because I would have to go up to the front of the store where it was cold."

The weather in the winter would get as cold as 30 to 35 degrees below zero and store was not insulated.

After marrying her husband, Byron Fehlman, the couple bought land in Cody, Wyo. where they built a motel and ran a small cafe. Here Mrs. Fehlman would serve-up her light and delicious rolls and juicy apple pies.

"However, World War II came and we had a hard time getting meat so we had to close," she said.

Although, the seasoned cook has seen a wide degree of changes in kitchen equipment, from coal stoves to microwave ovens and pre-packaged mixes, Mrs. Fehlman dislikes the convenience foods. She still finds a sense of accomplishment and enjoyment in making an angel food cake from scratch. And for her it's just as quick and simple as from a box.

She notes many young cooks are geeting back to the basics and making their own breads. Recalling her mother's method of baking bread, "She could make the most delicious breads. She could make six huge loaves at one time and in those days the flour was good hard wheat flour, nothing extra added. like we have now."

She remembers her mother would save some of the dough and fry it, then serve with sweet whipped cream, "It was pure ambrosia!

Country life isn't what it used to be, but I still love it, the greenery, trees, flowers and now the garden produce.

RASPBERRIES are just beginning to ripen. We eat them right off the bushes, or can possibly get enough to top a fruit and cheese salad or a sundae. As soon as I can manage to pick a 059 cup of them, or possibly a mixture of raspberries and cascade berries, I'm going to cook up a rare treat to go with hot rolls or breakfast toast, a small bowl of fresh jam.

Raspberries, picked slightly green or mixed with a few cascade, marion berries or small wild blackberries, have enough natural pectin to jell without any added commercial pectin. especially if jam is made in small quantities such as with one to four cups of fruit. Here's how:

they come to a boil again. In one to five minutes depending on the quantity, the juice will cling to the edge of the spoon in a sheet, and the mixture is ready to jell.

If you have more than enough to put in one jar in the refrigerator, pour into hot, sterilized jars which will take a vacuum seal. Fill to one half inch of the top, adjust lids and process for five minutes in a hot water bath.

VERY RIPE RASPBERRIES will need a commercial pectin if you want your jam to have a jellied texture, and it's best to follow directions to the letter as to quantity as well as proportions and timing. If you try to double or triple the recipe you throw the timing completely off and destroy both flavor and pectin before the mixture jells.

Last week we published a recipe for strawberry Bavarian cream, a good way to stretch first-of-theseason berries into a dessert to serve the whole family. You can use raspberries the same way, and if you want to make a pie instead of a dessert piled in sherbet glasses, just pour the partly congealed Bavarian cream into a baked pie shell or a graham cracker crust.
