

It's repair time at local schools

by Loren Bliss

By next June, the buildings and grounds of Federal Way's public schools should look about $500,000 better than they do today.

The reason is the 1979 Legislature's decision to fully fund basic education — which meant a $7.7 million shot in the arm for the local school budget.

One of the immediate results of the new money is that the district's maintenance staff has begun to catch up on long-overdue repairs, work that couldn't be done in the past because of sharply curtailed budgets.

The man who is directly responsible for this renewed activity is Joe Sienko, the district's physical plant director.

Recalling the days when a five-year succession of failed tax levy proposals cut maintenance, repair and groundskeeping staffs to a bare-bones minimum, Sienko said "It used to be like a graveyard around here, with everybody gone. But now it's starting to pick up."

A crew of trainee painters, hired through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) program, is already at work on the exteriors of a number of school buildings.

AND IN THE fall, when the additional funding becomes available, the maintenance department will hire a painter, a carpenter, a laborer, three grounds-keepers and a person who may be either an electrician or technician.

"A lot of people who voted against the levies didn't realize that when the budgets were cut, it affected every department," Sienko said. "They thought they were just voting against teachers' salaries — so we used to get phone calls asking why the grass wasn't cut at the schools."

The list of newly-scheduled projects, he said, is long and growing. It includes:

- New classroom partitions at

Brigadoon, at Continuation High School, at Sunnycrest and at Lake Dolloff;

— Catch-up maintenance at Nautilus, Twin Lakes, Brigadoon and two junior high schools, Sacajawea and Kilo;

— A new roof for Totem Junior High School;

— Roof repairs at Lakota Junior High School and at Olympic View and Mirror Lake;

— Security fencing designed to keep unauthorized vehicles off the campuses of Lake Dolloff, Wildwood and Thomas Jefferson High School;

— Construction of wheelchair ramps at Thomas Jefferson;

— New burners for the furnaces at Star Lake and Woodmont;

— Repairs to the safety matting at school playgrounds and painting of the elementary school play sheds.

"THIS USED to be one of the better districts in the state as far as physical plant maintenance was concerned," said Sienko, "and eventually it will be again."

"But I hope people realize it will take a couple of years at least," he added.

Sienko believes that if budget cuts had not hamstrung the district's maintenance program, the cost of necessary repairs would be about half of what is anticipated.

"For example," he said, "you have to paint the exterior of a school building about every seven years. But there are some that haven't been painted for ten."

Some of the work is so long overdue, he said, that the district is having it done by contractors — despite the fact that it's cheaper for the schools to do it with their own personnel.

Another problem, said Sienko, is vandalism. "It happens everywhere," he said, "and we repair the damage as soon as it's reported because if you leave it, it attracts other vandals."

He asked that persons who spot acts of vandalism call the school security department at 927-1266.

Charter signing

Soine buys pen with $500 bid

Malcolm Soine was supposed to instigate a bidding war, but he ended up winning it.

The Redondo resident and president of Abacus Realty made the final bid for a pen used by more than 100 people to sign the Federal Way City Charter during ceremonies Thursday night at Twin Lakes Country Club.

Soine raised five fingers, signifying $500, and nobody else made a sound or motion until the gavel fell.

"Ross Davis (a member of the Federal Way City Committee) came over and told me to bid people up; I guess I did a pretty good job of that," Soine recalled, cheerfully accepting being the victim of his scheme. "Actually, I don't mind. I'm a collector. I have a whole house full of memorabilia. I suppose the pen will have historical significance someday."

Although he moved from Tacoma to his Redondo Heights condominium just last December, Soine has had business interests in Federal Way since 1965 when he opened Soine's Junior Boot Shop in Federal Shopping Way. He sold the business in 1971.

HE OWNS Red Wing Shoe franchises in SeaTac Village and Tacoma. Soine became secretary treasurer of Abacus Marketing Associates, Inc. when the local based company was formed in 1977. The next year he took the helm of Abacus Realty, a subsidiary of Abacus Marketing.

Through his business relationship with the Federal Way community, Soine has been aware of local incorporation developments.

"The major advantage of cityhood is that more localized government would be more responsive to the peoples' needs," he said. "As a developer, I'd say there would be certain advantages. It would probably speed up the legal process you have to go through before you can get started. I have no quarrel with the county, but their system is slow."

However, Soine has "reservations about problems concerning running the City of Federal Way:

"It's biting off a pretty big chunk. There are an awful lot of bases that have to be covered to make a new city work. You're not starting out with 2,000 or 3,000 people, you're talking about 60,000. There's quite a difference there."

Soine is cautiously optimistic that governmental structure problems could be worked out. He pointed to the "tremendous job" done by the Federal Way City Committee as an example of local people forming and working well together.

Federal Way also has an edge economically, he added:

"There's no blight here. That's why I enjoy living in Federal Way."

We, the people of Federal Way, endeavor to create a more habitable living environment which will enhance both our work and recreation. We believe that our efforts will succeed with formation of a City of Federal Way. Through cityhood we will: take away control of our destiny from distant and foreign communities; consolidate our many local governing bodies into one that is smaller, locally based and accessible; insure that the special needs of Federal Way are addressed in a more responsive and responsible manner. We, the undersigned, are among the first citizens to support self-government for the communities comprising the Greater Federal Way area. We want to save and improve the environs of our home.

MORE THAN 100 Federal Way residents signed the City Charter petition Thursday night at a $25 a plate fund raiser at Twin Lakes Golf and Country Club. The charter will hang in the Federal Way City Hall if the incorporation drive is successful.

THE FIRST THREE signers of the Federal Way City Charter petition were long time resident Nellie Fleming, incorporation proponent Art Brown, and land developer Andy Cratsenberg. Brown led the first incorporation drive nearly a decade ago.

Port moves to evict legislator

by Carolyn Logan

The Port of Seattle filed the first step in eviction proceedings against Rep. John Jovanovich, D-31st District, in King County Superior Court late Friday afternoon.

The complaint for unlawful detainer asks for possession of the Jovanovich home, north of Sea-Tac Airport, and for about $4,000 in back rent.

The home, located in the north clear zone, is one of about 400 homes bought by the Port in the home-acquisition program.

Jovanovich, a sharp critic of the Port on several issues, challenged the Port in court after the Port condemned his property in 1977.

He said the Port increased its original $42,000 offer for his home to $71,500 after he retained a lawyer and went to King County Superior Court. "The jury gave me $75,000," he said of the June 1978 settlement. By law, an occupant is supposed to vacate the premises 90 days after the Port deposits the payment into the registry of the court.

Port officials say Jovanovich has cashed the $75,000 check.

Jovanovich admits he was informed he was supposed to vacate the home after the 90-day period ended in November.

"I WROTE them in February, saying I couldn't find housing, and (asking) 'What were they going to do?'" he said. "They said start paying $500 a month, back to November." He said he received a threatening letter in June and ignored it.

Jovanovich charged that the Port hasn't helped him relocate, as mandated by the acquisition program. He signed the appropriate form asking for assistance, Port officials confirmed.

In rebuttal, James Dwyer, Port senior director of development and relations said, "It's difficult to assist him with relocation when he's out-of-town (during the January-near June legislative session). We're holding a relocation payment for him for when he buys and occupies another home."

But Jovanovich said the Port could certainly have helped his wife — who was not in Olympia — with relocation.

"By God, we've been looking; we have real estate people looking," he said, declaring that it is hard to find suitable quarters within the 31st District boundaries.

"THE BIGGEST hardship is that we aren't going to move into a junker. This is a nice home," he said of the three bedroom home occupied by the family of six. If he finds suitable housing, he said he'll have to move out and pay the back rent.

"I'm not trying to make extra money; I'm trying to make a point. Somebody's got to dig their heels in," said Jovanovich. He suspects the Port plans to use his 2001 S. 142nd St. property for an industrial park.

An attorney general's opinion specifies that it's unconstitutional for the state to lend its credit for private purposes, according to Jovanovich. He spoke of community suspicions that the Port had planned to use condemned, private home property for the proposed Boeing and Weyerhaeuser developments. The Port has long denied that it had preconceived ideas for those proposed commercial uses.

Dwyer retorted that most of the lawmaker's property would be used for a green belt.

Rep. John Jovanovich

Long unhappy with Port operations, Jovanovich said he might run for Port Commissioner.

He is directed to appear in King County Superior Court at 9:30 a.m. July 25 to show cause why he should not vacate the premises and pay rent back to Nov. 13.

Yes. I do not think he is as effective as he could be. The U.S. is looking very weak in foreign affairs right now, and I think it is because of him. He is not taking effective action.

Yes. He is a big nothing, a zero. He has goofed on everything. There are domestic problems at home, and he is running around the world doing nothing.

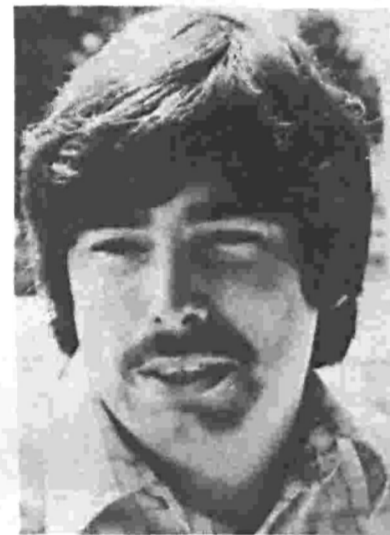

No. Usually (presidents) get elected a second time. And I do not think the Republicans have anybody that strong to throw up against him.

No. He will be a two-term president. Being an incumbent is a big advantage. His popularity ratings in the polls are down now, but remember Harry Truman and how far down in the polls he was.

Will Jimmy Carter be a one-term president?

Helen Halford

Lynn Templeton

Vivian Olson

Dick Speer

Yes. He hasn't done the things he was hired to do, such as correct the problems of the economy, inflation and energy. It seems that he has not done much.

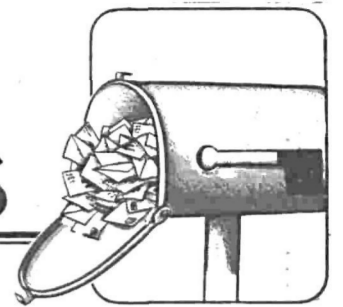

It is difficult to predict what is going to happen to the presidency. I do not think anyone could have predicted what happened to Kennedy, Johnson or Nixon. Making presidential predictions is risky.

Yes. The majority of the people think that a lot more could have been done in many areas, such as foreign policy and the Panama Canal.

He probably will be a one-term president because he has not been worried about his image enough. His critics say he is not an adept politician. He is trying to do what is best for the people.

Cityhood effort inept

Editor:

The incorporation effort represented by the letter-petition enclosed in your June 24 edition is the most inept attempt at public hoodwinking that I can remember. One can only assume some of the "Federal Way City Committee" (self-appointed?) have aspirations of becoming "first" council members of the proposed city, and are therefore brushing up on chicanery.

The language of the lead-in letter to the "petition" is a poorly disguised mass of double-entendre, contradictory statements, and even contains errors in spelling of a critical word. The "committee" could have at least consulted a dictionary.

The lead-in letter, and your page 1 article, say the petition is imply a document requesting "public hearings and discussion" of incorporation arguments. The language of paragraphs one and five of the petition give the lie to that statement.

The petition itself is a legal joke. The legal description of the reverse of the letter may (or may not) be an accurate description of the proposed city boundaries.

However, the accompanying map is minuscule and illegible. If this was intentionally done in an attempt to frustrate property owners in their efforts to "see" the true boundaries of the proposed city, the attempt may succeed.

Although your article says almost no organized opposition exists to the incorporation drive, one would hope this particularly amateurish committee will meet effective opposition in their "bum's rush" approach to incorporation.

I want it clearly understood that I don't necessarily oppose incorporation, only the poorly-run effort being currently publicized. I also hope for "public" discussions. But before signing any petition.

T.W. Brewer

(Note: Having looked up the names of your paper's staff, I see no evident "relative" connection with the "Federal Way City Committee." I assume that your paper is nominally "neutral" in its journalism. So I hope you will publish this article in the spirit in which it is written - from another viewpoint.)

'Ignorance is bliss'

Editor:

This letter is a response to the "et cetera" column by Darlene Himmelspach, published in the Sunday, July 1 issue of your newspaper.

In that article, the writer claimed she was addressing all those people who "apparently subscribe to the theory that 'ignorance is bliss.'" She also stated that "It would be more productive if they subscribed to the newspapers, 'the best source of information available.'"

This letter is being written for those people who subscribe to the theory that, you shouldn't believe everything you read in the papers, and that, there is probably a lot of news out there that probably never got printed in the papers. This letter is being written whether or not those people subscribe to their favorite newspaper. It is also being written to bring some attention to a few points that a few people seem to be ignoring.

It is a good thing that I was present at the Federal Way Community Plan Revision meeting that Tuesday evening, last week of June, because I found it very difficult to obtain a clear picture of what actually occurred from the Federal Way NEWS, which I incidentally subscribe to. In one article, Ms. Himmelspach wrote that the revised plan met with praise from the audience, and in her editorial it is nearly depicted as an angry mob scene, with "angry people" who "claimed that the revision was news to them." She also devoted four entire paragraphs mocking one confused resident who spoke.

Does it not occur to Ms. Himmelspach that the meeting's importance was undermined and perhaps not publicized enough? And what about those other earlier meetings--where she ridicules the residents with their "skimpy attendance." Shame, shame, Ms. Himmelspach for not doing your homework. Do you realize that many of the very interested citizens who showed up for that last meeting just moved in? Why, our development, Twin Lakes Vista alone, had very few residents at all until April and May of this year, many of whom are from out of state. Surely, they are not to be ridiculed for their lack of attendance.

Furthermore, the County did not do its homework. Our development borders on one of the proposed revision sites, the land bordering us and Dash Point Park. We were not sent any county mailings, due to "computer error," as one member of the committee stated to me.

Ms. Himmelspach also has one very important point incorrect from her first article on the meeting. That point is, that not of the edges of Federal Way are being preserved by the revised plan. On the contrary, it is the original "Federal Way Community Plan Map" which does that. I have obtained a copy of the old plan from the county and realized much to my surprise that the land bordering Dash Point State Park was zoned a definite low density, with only one and two dwellings per acre. The new plan alters that zoning to partially low density (one to three homes per acre) with over half of it being zoned at medium density, ranging from three to nine units per acre. Our community feels very distraught about this and are trying to bring our dissatisfaction to the attention of the Planning and Community Development Committee.

Another point that has been ignored is the Planning and Community Plan Revision Committee. Ms. Himmelspach treats them in her editorial as if they were hard-working martyrs who only meet with harsh criticism from the "ostrich-like" and babied citizens. What seems to be overlooked here, is that we the citizens and residents of Federal Way are the government...It may well be true that most of the committee are themselves Federal Way residents but if I understand correctly, they were not chosen by the people, but appointed by the county or councilmen. Thusly, they should regard it as their privilege, a special treat that they even have such important power as helping to determine our community's zoning. So if they seem to be meeting with criticism from the residents, whether or not they be well informed, they should rightfully open up and listen to the residents, not merely trying to play the part of Mr. Compromise between what we the people want and what large out-of-the-area developers want.

When Ms. Himmelspach speaks of "extraordinary effort" by the bureaucrats and the Federal Way NEWS to keep "the public informed on the controversial topic of land use," I must close my eyes with embarrassment. If this be extraordinary coverage, then Websters needs to change their definition of "extraordinary."

Besides that, Ms. Himmelspach, if the topic is that important, and I believe it is, why should the residents all have to flock to the library, (which does not open until 11 a.m.) to get the facts? Why doesn't this community newspaper take it upon themselves to really do something "extraordinary" and publish an edition with the old plan and the proposed new zoning plan right on the front pages in black and white, with proper explanation to go with it? Now, that might be hard to ignore. Of course, Ms. Himmelspach, you must also understand that it is very easy to ignore important items, when it appears that those "bureaucrats" you spoke of are very extraordinary at ignoring us.

Dancing bug bites

"Dah, doo bah doobie doo, la dum dedum dumm doobie doo deedle dee," I said to Spouse the other night.

"Oh, no," he groaned, "you've been bitten by the dancing bug again."

"True, true, very true," I said.

"Just give me the facts," he said. "Just tell me when and where and try to remember that I am not yet fully recovered from the last time we went dancing."

Spouse and I suffered some discomfort the last time we went dancing because we found the dances were too fast for us, and the smoke filled rooms and the loud music put us in a kind of shock. It had been several years since we had done any dancing and it might have been even longer if I hadn't caught "Saturday Night Fever."

Our experience was a poor one. We didn't dance the night away and we went home and threw darts at a picture of John Travolta. But John and Margie, some friends in our age group, had invited us to dinner at a great place, they said, where we could dance after dinner.

"Where is it?" said

Spouse.

I told him that Margie called the place Woodgate, "It's in Woodinville, I think."

"Woodgate or Watergate?" Spouse was very suspicious.

Once at John and Margie's we learned that John did not look forward to a big evening of dancing. "The food there is good," said John. "We don't have to stay for the dancing, you know."

Spouse was pleased to see that he was not alone in his wish for a danceless night on the town. I knew that he didn't care if we went out to dinner when he suggested that we just "pick up a bucket of chicken."

Margie and I had on our dancing shoes and made it clear that dancing was foremost in our minds.

The Woodgate is a pleasant restaurant in Woodinville and has a lovely large dancing room. When we arrived we were seated near the dance floor, handed menus and had just ordered dinner when a kid in a white suit came out on the stage.

"Margie," I said, "are you sure this kid plays 'our' kind of music?"

Margie kind of smiled which I took to be a positive answer but Spouse looked at me with his perfected "I told you so" look and started eating the rolls and butter.

The young man, slender, looked about 16. He said a few things to the audience, welcomed the rest of his group to the stage - I think they called themselves "Gentle Persuasion" and they began playing one of those typical, crashing sound songs that kills all dinner conversation.

The salad arrived and the young man named Brad Davidson began to sing. The tune was a familiar one. "I know that tune!" I exclaimed. "So do I," Spouse remarked.

"I can understand the words," I added. "Me too," Spouse agreed.

The waitress began serving our dinner, and we had just tasted our salads when the little kid in the white suit belted out another old favorite and my feet demanded to dance. Surprisingly enough, Spouse put up only a token fight, and soon we were on the dance floor, gliding smoothly to the lovey tune.

Spouse was actually reluctant to leave the dance floor when the musicians struck up another familiar tune - all music we could dance to. "You should get out there and dance," he told John. "That's great music."

We were back to our table just as the main course was being served when the band began playing some wild and crazy disco music. I sighed, sat down and stabbed at my dinner. Across the table, Margie was getting out of her chair and assisting her was Spouse. Spouse! He smiled at me and the two of them began whirling about and bouncing around the dance floor.

Spouse, it seems had caught it.

He had been bitten by the dancing bug.

And Brad Davidson, the boy who looked just 16, was just what the doctor ordered.

Guard dogs: Not a thief's best friend

They pace to and fro while keenly eyeing their surroundings as sensitive ears are attuned to unfamiliar sounds. Sharp ivory teeth flash ominously, and ferocious barks will repel the fainthearted. Like security men, professionally trained guard dogs protect property and lives from assailants.

"Only a fool would attack a guard dog," said trainer, Terry Webb, a burly, muscular man who can masterfully control his powerful dogs.

Webb, the owner of Temporary Dog Security in Midway, has been training guard and attack dogs for 10 years. As a dog groomer, his associates would bring him the hard to handle pets. He gradually worked into dog obedience and training. Now Webb trains and rents dogs for security work in private business and for personal protection.

He owns 14 dogs, primarily Doberman pinschers and German shepherds.

"I prefer Dobermans as attack dogs because they are more dependable and I know their temperaments," he said. "They are tenacious, and because they aren't afraid of pain they have a fighting personality."

German shepherds, on the other hand, will back away from pain. "They make better guard dogs in my opinion," Webb said.

The trainer begins working with young dogs from age eight weeks to six months. Training may last from two to six months. During this time he will educate the dogs to be either guard dogs or attack dogs.

The dogs are taken through simulated attack situations, where Webb and his assistants threaten with sticks, clubs and guns (with blanks).

"We teach the dogs to go first for the arm, since that is usually holding the weapon," Webb said. He and his assistants use heavily padded sleeves, but the trainer has a few scars from where his dogs caught him unawares.

Some dogs are taught to attack without barking, they can silently prove menacing, said Webb.

"For personal protection, the bark can prove more terrifying," he said. "The younger dogs are usually more flashy. When they jump around, bare their teeth and bark — only a fool would keep coming towards them."

He teaches his dogs not to eat or drink while they are on nightly guard duty. "Many times people try to poison the dogs, so it's for their own good," Webb said.

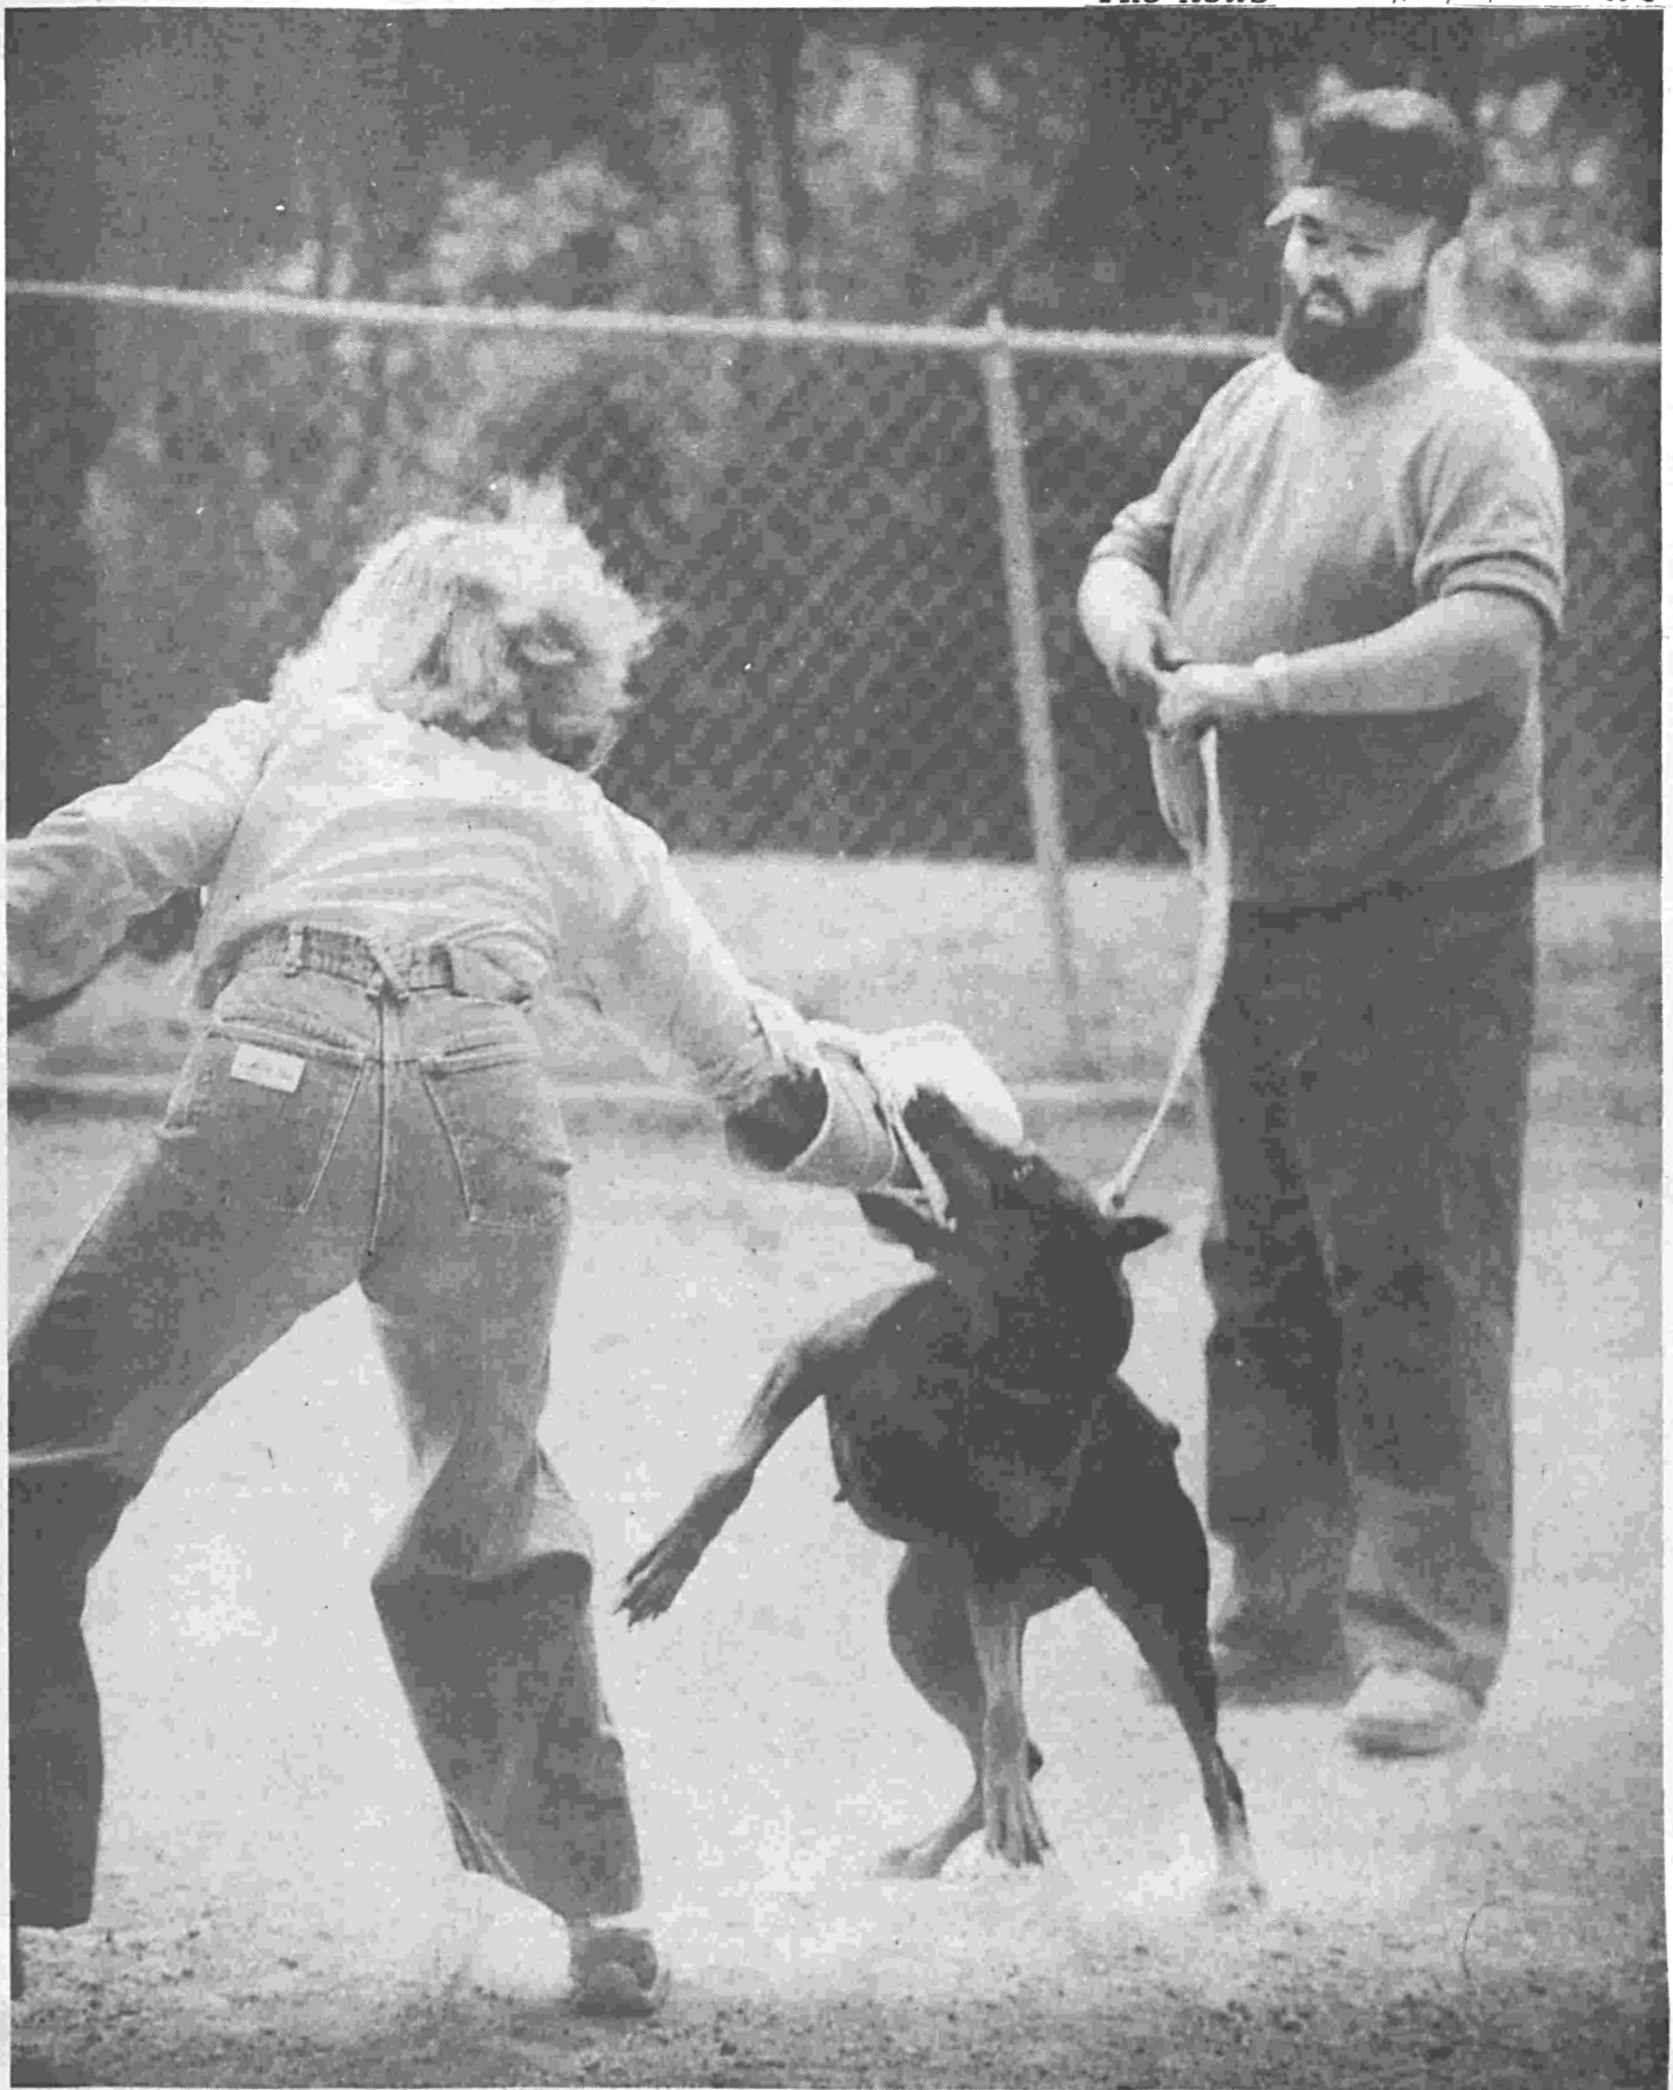

The dogs are highly competitive when displayed for visitors. Their noisy behavior is a sign they're on duty. Says Webb, "Competition makes them work better. They're quite proud to show-off."

The guard dogs are at their prime from ages three to five, however, Webb said the dogs never really retire. As they grow older they are placed in less demanding jobs. He also will place them in homes where they have room to run.

"One important aspect of training a dog is to make the animal transferable to other owners" Webb said. "Because of poor training a dog may not adapt and behave with the new owner. Because I take my dogs from place to place, they learn to accept new surroundings."

Each evening and morning Webb delivers and picks up the guard dogs from the businesses. He charges a rental fee of $250 a month for each dog.

As to the animal's effectiveness, Webb says, "If I were a thief and it came to being caught by the police or the dog, I'd choose the police."

Man's fast footwork leads to three burglary arrests

Fast footwork by the friend of a South 296th Street resident and some subsequent sleuthing by King County Detective Doug Jackson resulted in the arrest last week of three local teens in connection with three recent burglaries.

The episode began Monday, when the friend, watching the resident's house while he was away, saw a spilled bottle of whiskey and became suspicious that the place had been burglarized.

Thinking that the burglars might return, he hid in the place, and as he was waiting, heard a bedroom window being opened. But he wasn't sure which bedroom, and opened the wrong one by mistake.

The burglars heard him and started to flee, but he opened another bedroom door — this time it was the right one — and spotted two teens climbing out the window.

So he darted outside and grabbed the closest of the pair. The other boy escaped, but the man later discovered the two are brothers.

Police records indicate that the man at first tried to resolve the case by discussing the incident with boys' parents but eventually called officers.

AT THIS POINT Detective Jackson became involved. He said he questioned the two brothers — one is 13 and the other is 15 — and another 15-year-old and eventually recovered part of the loot.

The recovered goods, he said, include a .22-caliber handgun, an air rifle, fishing gear and records.

Jackson said the loot had been stashed in the woods near where the boys live.

A total of $445 was also taken in the burglaries, of which about $40 was recovered.

The three were released in the custody of their parents.

THE RESIDENT of a South 352nd Street house heard the family dog barking Thursday night, went outside to investigate and got knocked down by a prowler.

The resident got a scratched elbow and a bump on the head in the incident, which occurred at about 10 p.m.

FIVE INCIDENTS of burglary and seven larcenies not including the burglary which resulted in the arrest of the three teens — were reported late last week.

The largest of the burglaries occurred at a Military Road South residence, from which $1,435 worth of firearms were stolen. The house was also ransacked.

Investigating officers said the front door had been kicked in sometime between Monday and Wednesday.

Losses in the other burglaries and in the larcenies were all less than $500.

THREE YOUTHS, all of them 14, were charged with malicious mischief Wednesday after an altercation with a neighbor boy, 13.

Police said the dispute between the 14-year-olds and the 13-year-old has been going on for some time.

'Money' column to appear

If the stock market's ups and downs seem confusing, or investing in stocks, bonds and securities is a guessing game, then begin reading John Weaver, Jr.'s financial column "Your Money" which will begin appearing in the week's Wednesday Business page.

Weaver, a Federal Way resident, is associate vice president of investments for Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. in Bellevue. With 11 years in the investment field, Weaver's expertise centers on tax shelters, stocks and bonds, government securities, real estate investments and financial planning.

In his column, Weaver will discuss issues concerning financial planning an investments, information on local businesses and give insight into the workings of the stock market. He will also address questions submitted by readers.

Old Timers Picnic Aug. 4

Those residents who have lived in the greater Federal Way area for 25 years or more are invited to attend the Old Timers Picnic beginning at 1 p.m. Aug. 4 in Steel Lake Park.

The picnic will be potluck with coffee and ice cream provided. Those attending are asked to bring some type of food, dishes and silverware. Old photos and clippings of the area are welcomed.

For more information call 838-0367.

The three are accused of kicking in a garbage can at the 13-year-old's residence, doing about $5 damage. They were cited into juvenile court.

TWO EPISODES of vandalism, both of them involving smashed windows, were reported.

One occurred Tuesday evening at a 24th Avenue Southwest residence, while the other happened Thursday at a Military Road South house.

BB guns, police said, appeared to have been used in each incident. The damage amounted to about $200.

The Modern Mom

by Betty Woolley

What is it with husbands? Why don't they ever notice what wives are wearing? The last time my live-in lover commented on my attire I was waddling around in maternity clothes, which, because of my outlandish size, had been designed by Seattle Tent and Awning. It wasn't so much that my roommate Romeo admired my apparel; he just wanted to know if he could have my dress when I was finished with it. He thought the green and white stripes would be great for recovering the outdoor umbrella. Other than that his fashion consciousness, where I am concerned, has been nil.

If I am feeling particularly perverse and determined to force a comment out of him, regarding my appearance, I block the doorway with my body. If he wishes to leave the house he knows he'd better say something so he tosses out, "I like your new dress."

Now I have been wearing that particular dress for three years and even though he has finally looked at me, I know that once he turns his head away he hasn't the slightest concept of whether said item is purple, green or pink.

His Christmas present last year bears testament to my complaint. As I unwrapped the package he said, "I bought it because it looked so much like you."

He was absolutely right. It was the mate to the robe I'd been wearing to the breakfast table for the past six months.

When I ask him to retrieve my coat as we leave a party I am constantly intrigued with what he brings me. Unfortunately, I've never had the courage to walk off with the items he drapes over my shoulders. His taste is good, it's just that the coat's never mine.

However, when he is readying for a social event he exhibits an attention to detail that would overtax a computer.

"Where's my blue shirt?" he yells.

"There are three blue shirts in your closet."

"I do not wish the blue stripe, the solid blue or the blue dotted one. I want the blue on blue."

"What's the difference? Blue is blue."

"Your lack of attention to detail is appalling," he scolds. "You know very well that the blue on blue shirt is the only one that complements my gray slacks with the subtlety I wish to capture."

By the time he has ransacked three drawers in search of the exact shade of socks and the right hue of handkerchief I am ready to capture HIM with a butterfly net. He views himself in the full length mirror, flicking a piece of imaginary lint off his navy blazer.

"Do I look all right?" I ask, having purposely yanked my half slip down a full two inches below my skirt.

"Yes, you're fine," he says, without so much as a glance in my direction.

My subsequent scream caused the cat to vault out of its favorite chair.

"Look at me," I yelled. "For once, look at me!"

Since my wild outburst of temper he has been trying; he truly has. The other day he scrutinized me carefully and asked, "What room are you planning to redecorate? I see you're wearing painter's pants."

I didn't say a word. I just turned around so he could read the designer label on the pocket of my new Calvin Klein white jeans.

Tanker fire no threat chief says

by Nathalie Weber

If the gas tanker that burst into flames Tuesday on I-5 was to have exploded within Federal Way Fire Department's boundaries, there is some question as to whether that department could have extinguished the blaze.

The situation is not unique to Federal Way. Even Tukwila, who responded to the blaze, said it would have been very difficult to extinguish the blaze had Sea-Tac's unit not arrived on the scene. That unit, equipped to extinguish airline and other vehicle fires, was the major reason the blaze was brought under control within 15 minutes, according to Tukwila Assistant Chief Dwight VanZanen.

As is customary in a fire of Tuesday's magnitude, all six surrounding fire districts—some 65 firefighters—responded to the truck that exploded when a broken drive shaft punctured at least one of the fuel-carrying compartments. The fuel leaked into the drain system at the side of the freeway, spreading flames for thousands of feet. Without the mutual aid from Sea-Tac, VanZanen said they could have had real problems. "We carry the foam, but it only pumps at 250 gallons per minute," he said. "That's nothing compared with Sea-Tac's crash truck."

FEDERAL WAY Fire Chief Bud Thorson said Federal Way's trucks could pump up to 1250 gallons of foam per minute, but whether or not Federal Way could handle a tanker fire would depend upon how fast the fuel leaked and how large the tank rupture was.

Thorson did not express strong concerns about being prepared for such an emergency because they occur "once in a blue moon," he said. "If we're going to prepare for something like that we should also prepare for a 747 coming down in Federal Way by parking 15 or 20 ambulances in the back of the station. It's a question of how far you go."

Foam is expensive and requires special storage, Thorson said. Although they do carry 30 to 50 gallons of the extinguisher, he emphasized that having large amounts of foam or wet water—both used in extinguishing chemical fires—on hand is not a district priority.

"We have to be prepared for things that normally are needed within our budget, things we can work with."

THORSON ALSO rejected a suggestion at last week's commissioner meeting that the fire department monitor the cargo carried in the trucks that pass through the Federal Way Truck Village in south Federal Way.

There is no law that mandates such action, Thorson said, and the fire department does not have the manpower to monitor that magnitude of cargo.

County proposes suburban bus routes

by Darlene Himmelspach
Federal Way would be one of the chief beneficiaries of a proposed increase in suburban bus routes made Friday by the county planning staff.

Last month Metro Council amended the 1980 budget to provide for 100,000 hours of additional bus service outside Seattle in the coming year. According to the preliminary plan presented to the county council Friday, Federal Way would receive about 18,000 hours of the total. Only eastside bus patrons would do better.

The largest chunk would be on Routes 174, 175 and 176 with an estimated 17,040 bus hours added at a cost of $429,960. Route 174 would be extended to West Campus. Route 175 would operate on a daily basis and extend to the Jovita/Auburn area. In peak hours the route would operate from Auburn to Federal Way park-and-ride then to Seattle. Off-peak hours would require a transfer at the park-and-ride to Seattle.

Route 176 would move between Twin Lakes, Sea Tac Mall and the park-and-ride on a daily basis improving the local circulator service.

Another 500 hours would be added to Route 130 extending the path from South 240th Street to serve Saltwater State Park and the Huntington Park community. Service would be seasonal and operate on a two-hour cycle during the off-peak periods and weekends and cost about $13,000.

Route 240, which connects Burien with Renton and Bellevue, would receive about 35,000 new bus hours but all beginning at the Southcenter junction moving east.

All proposed changes are subject to approval by Metro Council.

Adelaide condos proposed

A deluxe 44-unit condominium to be called "Stones Landing" currently is being proposed for 15 acres above Adelaide Beach.

The design theme for the $12 million project focuses on diversity, including north-west contemporary, colonial, tudor and provincial tudor units.

The units will range from $225,000 to $300,000 each.

Included in Stones Landing are two single-family houses, nine duplexes, five triplexes, one fourplex and one fiveplex. Each unit will contain an attached garage that will accommodate two automobiles; an additional two-guest parking spaces will be provided for each unit, according to plan.

The project currently is waiting for approval of a Planned Unit Development (PUD) by King County; if constructed according to established blueprints, the construction will remain within existing zoning RS 15,000.

Stones Landing developer is Williams Brothers Development Company. The architect is Louis Schafer and landscape architect is Jongejan-Gerrard Associates. The engineer is John R. Ewing and Associates.

Dial Extension tapes for parents

If a gray, wet day is keeping the youngsters inside wondering what to do, DialExtension may help put an end to the wondering.

DialExtension is a library of audio tapes from King County Cooperative Extension Service and Washington State University. By calling 344-7984, a parent will have access to a number of different subject areas, one being "Parent and Child."

Tape topics from Parent and Child include: Tape 931, Encouraging Children to Learn; Tape 932, Selecting Books for Children; Tape 933, Rainy Day Activities for Young Children; Tape 941, Choosing a Day Care Facility, and Tape 774, Home Safety for Small Children.

Each of these tapes are from three to five minutes long and are full of suggestions and ideas on raising children. All calls are handled by an operator, and DialExtension is open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday, except holidays.

Besides the subject of parent and child, DialExtension also has nearly 250 tapes on gardening, food preservation and nutrition, energy conservation and on the 4-H youth program.

There are toll-free numbers for those communities outside of the "344" call area but inside King County. Federal Way, Auburn, Black Diamond and Enumelaw, the number is 939-5255. These toll-free lines are open until 4:30 p.m. every day except weekends and holidays.

To get a complete listing of tape topics, call 344-7984 and ask the operator for a catalog. Or write to: DialExtension, 312 Smith Tower, Seattle.

Gas crunching local auto sales, owners say

by Nathalie Weber

There's some finger drumming in the car business these days as shiny new compacts, luxury models and trucks are a little slower at moving out of stock and into the nation's gas lines.

Federal Way is no exception as the area's two major car dealers patiently wait for the present gas crunch to normalize—but selling cars and coping with the gas crunch appears to be about all Herm Swanson and Dick Balch have in common right now.

Dick Balch

Because Swanson, owner of Swanson Ford, recently entered the market in Federal Way, he is working from an entirely different angle than is veteran Balch. And, of course, the two dealers view the gas situation with somewhat contrasting philosophies.

Swanson, who entered the market as the gas shortage began to look its gravest, said he has sold 147 vehicles since he opened three months ago. At full strength, he should sell 250, Swanson said.

"THAT'S STANDARD for a new store," he said. "We're just not typical now." Swanson said that despite the nationwide lull in car business, his company is continuing to hire new employees and realize a greater income because it is still growing. "But no one opens business and expects it to be profitable at first," he said.

Balch, on the other hand, laid off 15 employees when the gas shortage began, but now says he's doing better than he anticipated at that time. Business is down, he said, but buyers are not flocking to the small cars. "The startling thing to me is we continue to sell big, medium and small cars but the trade-ins are smaller cars," Balch said. "People are buying what they think is a good buy, not just for the gas mileage."

Swanson agrees, but says the first thing customers still ask is what gas mileage a car receives. The public is leaning more toward the medium-size cars for the time, leaving the luxury models behind, but the small economy cars aren't setting any records either.

"THERE'S ONLY so many things you can do with two seats and four wheels," Swanson said. Balch pointed out that in many cases the mileage is not that great between a very compact car and, say, an El Camino or a Monza, both roomier cars. "If the price tag's the same, which one would you buy?" he asked.

Looking to the future, when both dealers anticipate greater business, Swanson says the car of tomorrow will be smaller and lighter weight but not necessarily unattractive. Most of his recent sales have been Mustangs, Fairmonts and Pintos, cars that border on the "small car" line. Less than 20 percent of his sales have been Thunderbirds and LTDs, Ford's traditionally larger luxury cars.

Swanson also sees the future as holding more government controls over the automobile industry, a practice he sees as ineffective and unnecessary. The government requires seat belts, many motorists don't use them. The government requires unleaded gas, motorists remove the converters from their cars.

"The people who are telling us how to run the industry are politicians and you can bet the majority of them haven't been in the car business," Swanson said. "The American people are told what they can buy and then they go and change it. Government has just gone overboard in the last 10 years."

BALCH SAID he views government controls as part of the American institution. "It's always the game of let's get the public. Sometimes it's the government, sometimes it's the oil companies. What difference does it make?" he asked.

Both Swanson and Balch are optimistic that the gas crunch will be over soon. Balch said that as soon as the government tells the public that there's going to be gas—regardless of the price—people will start buying more cars. "Right now the market is just uncertain," he said.

Swanson expects relief by October. "Car buyers just don't like to stay out of the market that long. They've been out three months already and that's a long time not to buy a car when you want one," he said. "Besides, elections are coming up this fall and the politicians won't let the situation get much worse. They'll do something about it."

Until then, it's moderate business at Federal Way's car dealerships.

GREG J. DUPONT, car salesman for newly-opened Swanson Ford, tries to interest potential buyers in one of their medium-sized but stylish models. Swanson says those are the cars that are selling the best these days, but Dick Balch, owner of Dick Balch Chevrolet, says he's selling all sizes. The past few months have brought less gas to the nation and less business to car dealers, but Federal Way's two top dealers are optimistic that the lull in business soon will be over.

Mac attack smokes out dirt and grease

by Ann Hagen

Malayna Burns is having a Big Mac attack and it has nothing to do with hamburgers.

The 17-year-old Fife High School student spends her afternoons working toward her dream, to own a Big Mac truck, a double trailer diesel with a sleeper and shiny stacks.

Working with two men, she scrubs down trucks at Urban's Truck Wash on 348th and 99 every night from 4 to 9 p.m. or "whenever the truckers stop coming in."

She said it gives her a chance to get acquainted with truckers learn tips of the trade and to "s, to find out about all kinds of trucks."

"I love it," she said smiling enthusiastically. "The warm smell of diesel smells good."

The job is not an easy one. It takes approximately 25 minutes per truck to scrub and polish the trailer and tractor (cab). Dressed in waterproof rain gear, Malayna climbs on ladders to get near the grillwork, windows and stacks. The trailer sides are sprayed with chemicals and scrubbed with longhandled brushes.

"Lots of drivers are really nice," she said. "But they don't want you to miss a bug. They pay a lot ($32 for tractor and trailer) and they want it spotless."

Bugs, she said are a real hazard in the southern states where they combine with sulphur in the air to corrode the chrome. "When the truckers get here, they want them off."

Malayna estimates the cost of her dream truck to be in the neighborhood of $50,000. To earn money, she also works mornings at a race horse stable and rides her horse Buffy in Jack-Pot rodeos where she competes for dollars.

Though a strong competitor in barrel racing, goat tying and roping, she said by the time she pays the entrance fees she doesn't come out too far ahead. But, Malayna's not worried. She's got a plan that should put her in the driver's seat by the time she's 25 or at the latest 30.

She recently enrolled in Bates Vocational where she will spend half a day during her senior year in a diesel and heavy equipment mechanics class. "I can't drive until I'm 21 so I'll be a mechanic until then and get a job with a local firm."

So far, she said, she's the only girl signed up for the class, but that doesn't bother her. "I don't care," she said. "The guys are usually pretty cute."

A background in mechanics should stand her in good stead, she said. "Trucks break down about once in every trip you take. If you can at least fix the minor problems on the road, it helps."

In the future, Malayna said she hopes to tie in her interest in rodeos with trucking. Her boyfriend wants to be a stock contractor he would provide stock for rodeos throughout the states and she if all goes according to plan, would do the driving.

How does her family feel about her chosen professions? "I'm always by bruised up from rodeos anyway. What's a little grease," said Malayna. "They don't really expect me to become a Suzy Homemaker. If this is what I want to do, it's fine with them."

Well on her way toward her goal, Malayna said she's loved the big trucks since she was a child. "You have everyone off your back and you can just take off."

Public housing in good shape

by Darlene Himmelpach

The second largest county housing authority in the country is flourishing but needs to expand the executive director told the King County Council Friday.

Jim Wiley, armed with a documentary film about the Housing Authority of the County of King (HACK), told the council committee of the whole the difference between his operation and the less successful housing projects in major eastern cities is HACK's insistence on tenant cooperation.

"Anyone who doesn't believe that people respond to their environment doesn't belong in the public housing field," Wiley said. "We don't assume they're (the tenants) are irresponsible."

The movie showed projects in West Seattle, the Ballinger area and the eastern part of the county with thriving, well-kept lawns and gardens and happy children using nice recreation areas. There are also three buses that transport senior citizens from the projects to shopping centers and other facilities.

By contrast, three high-rise developments in Boston were shown in obvious disrepair, without recreation grounds and the target of vandals.

There are 11,000 people housed by King County in 4,200 units of public housing. Another 250 units are under construction, Wiley said. HACK also subsidizes the rent of low income persons in privately owned housing throughout the county. The waiting list for senior citizens is up to four years, he said.

Leasing existing housing is becoming increasingly difficult, just not out there anymore." He said there is a "distinct trend" in housing the low-income and elderly in privately owned units which "has hurt public housing," Wiley said. He indicated that clustering people increases the efficiency of public housing.

The key to the success his agency has enjoyed is being "firm but fair," Wiley said. "We are not going to house anyone who is a problem because that would impact on the rest of our tenants," Wiley told the council.

RICK CLARK and David Upshaw, Southern Baptist Seminary students, are spending the summer doorbelling residents of Buckley to explore the possibility of establishing a mission which would be sponsored by Federal Way First Baptist Church. Prospects look good, and they are now holding regular Sunday services at the Senior Citizens Center in Buckley.

Southern Baptist have many missions

by Ruth Jurich
Federal Way First Baptist Church has taken on a big summer project, but it's up to a couple of Southern Baptist Seminary students to do the leg work.

Church members voted to explore the possibility of establishing a mission in Buckley, which will be sponsored by Federal Way First Baptist if it appears feasible. So seminary students Rick Clark and David Upshaw are canvassing door to door throughout the town to find out how many people are interested.

"We don't want to pull people away from other congregations, but we do want to make sure that everybody has an opportunity to find a church home," Clark said. Upshaw added that, "Sometimes we get a negative response, but other times we're invited in for tea and to talk religion with people of other faiths."

They are enjoying the project and are among 108 Southern Baptist seminary students from throughout the United States who volunteered for it.

Rick Clark, who was raised in Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga., was graduated from the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga before enrolling in Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky. where he is now a student.

David Upshaw is from Richmond, Va. and was graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University before enrolling in Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary at Wake Forest, N.C. where he is now a second year student.

They have already contacted enough families in Buckley that they are holding regular Sunday services in the Multi-purpose room at the Senior Citizens Center. They take turns preaching and sometimes have guest speakers as well as a film to show later this month.

The Southern Baptists constitute the largest Protestant denomination in the world, and one reason is that they are strong on missions, both at home and abroad with missions in 94 countries. The Rev. Gordon Green, Pastor of Federal Way First Baptist Church, is well qualified to help Clark and Upshaw in their summer Buckley project. He pastored a mission in Renton which has now become the Coal Creek Baptist Church.

Pastor Green said, "The experience has helped me in this project in which the

John Knox presenting concert

John Knox Presbyterian Church will present the music of Ellis and Lynch in concert at 7:30 p.m. July 18 in the John Knox sanctuary, 109 S.W. Normandy Road. Ron and Nancy Ellis and Mike and Collene Lynch have their musical roots in St. Patrick Parish in Seattle and have been performing for Northwest audiences for years. Their songs are scripturally based messages of joy, wisdom and praise before holding meaning for people of all ages.

There is no admission charge, but a free will offering will be taken.

Methodists plan vacation school

Federal Way United Methodist Church at 29645 51st Ave. S. has planned a week's program of fun and inspiration for Vacation Church School to be held Monday through Friday, July 23 to 27. "Sharing God's Gifts" will be the theme of the classes that will be held daily from 9:30 a.m. to noon. Classes will be available for kindergarten through sixth grade.

Volunteer staff members who are prepared to teach the children are Jan Baertschiger, Irene Burtis, Jan Crews, Pat Domalski, Marilyn Gibson, Alayne Hudspeth, Bud Kunder, Jurt Kunder, Mayme Montgomery, Barbara Neymeyer, Annette Tabor, Sue Vincent and Pat Wilson.

For more information, contact the church office at 839-9220 or Susan Osborn at 839-0739.

YWCA workshop on teen futures

For teenagers who are considering what the future holds in terms of life and career choices, East Valley YWCA will present a free workshop series for four days, beginning July 24.

The "Career and Life Planning for Teens" workshops will be conducted from 9 a.m. to noon Tuesdays and Thursdays at Renton High School.

The 12-hour program will help teens look realistically at the limits and potentials of a variety of life and career possibilities, and plan appropriately according to individual needs, wants, abilities and ambitions.

To examine and determine personal career goals, students will take part in exercises that include role playing, decision making, problem solving and values clarification.

Pre-registration is requested by calling or visiting the East Valley YWCA, 231 Williams Ave. S. in Renton, 255-1201.

Missionary of Japan

Rev. James Olson, a missionary to Japan, will be the guest speaker at the 10:30 a.m. service of the Redondo Community Church, 27908 Tenth Ave. S., Redondo, on Sunday, July 15.

Rev. Olson, a seminary classmate of the Redondo pastor Rev. Torger Haugland, has served in Japan for more than 20 years. He has recovered from a heart operation that forced him to reschedule his earlier speaking engagement with the host congregation.

Rev. Olson's wife Evelyn will make a mission presentation during Sunday School and provide a vocal solo during the worship service.

Rev. and Mrs. Olson will be the guests of the congregation at a picnic that will be held at the parsonage that afternoon. If there is rain the picnic will be held at the church.

Ex-Mormon leader to speak

Ed Decker, leader in "Ex-Mormons for Jesus," will be the featured speaker at the Church of the Nazarene, 1525 S.W. Dash Point Road on July 22 at the 10:50 a.m. service.

Decker spent almost 20 years in the Mormon church as a

New Life Pre-School, a ministry of New Life Christian Academy, is now taking registrations for 3- and 4-year-olds for the 1979-80 school year.

The children will attend two- and one-half hour sessions twice each week.

The goal of the preschool is to prepare the child for kindergarten by helping him to learn to get along with others, to listen and to follow directions and simple rules. The child also will be taught responsibility for clean-up, and care of equipment, personal hygiene and completion of activities.

The curriculum will include creative activities, active play, sharing time, snack time, Bible story, discovery time, music, and finger play, story time and field trips.

New Life Christian Academy is at 21650 24th Ave. in Des Moines. Application and more information can be sent to interested people by calling Gerry at 878-1181.

Unity Church to hear author

Dr. Marcus Bach, author, educator and founder of Fellowship for Spiritual Understanding will speak July 22 at both the 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. services of the Unity Church of Truth, 200 8th Ave. N., in Seattle.

Dr. Bach has spent more than 25 years studying religion and religious experiences. He is considered the foremost authority on contemporary religious movements and is listed in Who's Who in America and in Who Knows and What. He is the author of some 25 books. Most recently Dr.

Bach has turned his attention to the holistic health movement: The development of the total person, body, mind and spirit. His latest books include Power of Total Living. Questions on the Quest, and I Monty.

Dr. Bach will speak at the Unity Services in conjunction with a three-day workshop on holistic health. His topic on Sunday will be "The Games God Plays."

For more information, directions or carpooling information, please contact the Unity Church of Christianity in Burien at 243-6510, or Unity Church of Truth downtown, 622-8475.

Recycle motor oil
 Motorists can recycle waste motor oil at Northwest Reclamation, 10426 16th Ave S.W., Mondays through Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.
 Recycling is being urged by the Washington Energy Extension Service.
 Without recycling, millions of gallons of oil are dumped in vacant lots and down storm sewers across the county, according to the Energy Extension Service. "The culprits? Do-it-yourselfers," said an extension service spokesman. "People who change their own motor oil are literally throwing away valuable waste motor oil which could be recycled into useable petroleum products."
 By refining it, waste motor oil can be turned into high quality lubricating oil products or used in commercial heating systems. It can also be used in road repair and the manufacture of asphalt.
 For more information, contact the state recycling hotline, 1-800-RECYCLE.

Not Just for Emergencies

That's why as Federal Way's Emergency Center, we've changed our name and expanded our services. In the past 4 months that we've been in Federal Way, we have handled many kinds of emergencies, from common colds to broken bones to heart attacks. We've saved a few lives and wiped away a few tears, and discovered an additional need in our community.

Our Medical Emergency and Family Care Center now offers continuing health care for your entire family. From physical examinations, family consultations, treatment of minor ailments, to serious emergencies, we offer the best health care in the area. Ten doctors, a staff of nurses, and the best medical equipment are ready to provide continuing medical service for Federal Way families.

Century City expands with new buildings

Century City shopping center is in the process of receiving a contemporary face lift.

Two buildings will be added to the shopping area's south side. The new retail area will include a 24,000 square-foot "L" shaped building and a 44,000 square-foot two story structure.

The existing buildings will receive new marquees, and a curved canopy covering the walkways. The parking lot will be landscaped with trees, plants and shrubs. New light fixtures will also be installed. The $2,500,000 project is scheduled to be completed by the middle of August.

Century City's refurbishing was preceded by Safeway's remodeling work. The store added 10,500 square feet to the existing area giving a total of 37,136 square feet. The $1,120,000 addition will give Safeway a new flower shop, and expanded dairy-deli, non-food and wine cellar departments.

Architects for Century City and Safeway were Charles Kobay Assoc. The general contractor for Century is W.G. Clark Construction Co., Seattle, and for Safeway, Lunde Construction of Bellevue.

Sewer commissioners approve assessments

Despite the objections of several residents in the area, the Des Moines Sewer District Commissioners passed a resolution confirming the assessment roll as originally planned covering all parcels in U.L.I.D. 29.

Several persons expressed their objections at a public hearing on June 27 and again at last Wednesday's hearing continuation. Among those present at the recent meeting were Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Brown, Thomas Downey, William Crumbaker, the Fisher Brothers Corporation and their attorney, Clark Snure.

Most of those protesting the property assessment indicated they believed they already had properly functioning septic tanks and didn't need a sewer.

According to superintendent Bill Beattie, the majority of those registering protests were residents on South 234th Street.

The rate at which the residents of U.L.I.D. will be assessed, Beattie said, is the one set when the improvement district was formed in 1975. Thus the assessments should be lower than if they were figured at today's prices.

A number of those attending the meeting indicated they would appeal the decision. An appeal may be filed in Superior Court within ten days after the sewer district publishes a notice of the assessment roll. The notice is expected to be published today.

The appeal may cause a delay in the start of construction until next year, Beattie said.

In other business, the Commissioners awarded a contract to King Construction Company for their low bid of $106,945. The contract is for the installation of sewer lines in U.L.I.D. 38 located at Zenith between Marine View Drive and 7th Avenue South and South 236th and South 240th Streets.

King was the lowest of five bidders. The District also awarded a contract for $607,221 to Story-Armstrong Construction for dewatering at the wastewater treatment plant site. The company, which are well-drillers, will pump water from underground artesian wells in preparation for the construction of the secondary wastewater treatment facilities.

The pumping will serve to dry up the ground so the builders will have a firm foundation when construction begins, Beattie said.

The contract was awarded after the District received authorization from the Environmental Protection Agency. Work is expected to start immediately.

Grass Roots Gardening

by Ginna Koontz

Slugs enjoy tender garden vegetables so should be controlled. First keep the garden weed free and remove lower leaves so there is no hiding place for slugs. A three foot wide band of sawdust or ground bark is an excellent slug control. Slugs don't like to scratch their tender tummies on the gritty surface. Everyone knows a dash of salt destroys a slug. It is not recommended the slug bait be used near vegetable gardens. If used, select a liquid slug bait and draw a perimeter line, four feet from the garden. Slugs are killed as they come in contact with the poison. As cauliflower heads develop and begin to show through the leaves blanch the curds by drawing the leaves over the curd. Hold closed with soft twine, a pick make of wood or wire laced through the overlapped leaves or with old nylons. When growing brussel sprouts it is important to snap off all leaves from the bottom third of the plant stem. Sprouts continue to develop until frost. Summer squashes and zucchini should be picked while skin feels soft and rubbery and fruits are four to seven inches long. Once the skin feels slick the squash is past its prime but can be grated and used for cakes and breads. Acorn and butter-nut, the most popular winter squashes are picked when skin is waxy and hard to the touch. Winter squash can be left on the vine until cold fall weather. Then pick with the stems attached and cure in a warm dry spot. Store at room temperature and they keep from three to five months. Snap beans are edible and tasty when the bean is about half developed in the pod. After they attain full size they usually become soft and leathery. Pick tomatoes when solid red and firm. Stored in a cool dry spot tomatoes keep five to seven days. To avoid woody flavorless beets, turnips or kohlrabi harvest when three to four inches in diameter. Head lettuce and cabbage are picked as soon as heads are firm. To delay harvesting cabbage and to keep heads from splitting gently twist the plant a quarter turn to break some of roots to retard further growth. Snap over onion tops to allow onions to mature for later digging and storing. Our mild climate dust to the rows and long growing season allows the advantage of double cropping. As summer crops are harvested crops. Finely till the soil can be again cultivated and fertilized with 5-10-10 fer-tilizer and other crops as beets, carrots, hard headed broccolo, brussel sprouts, cabbage, and Swiss chard, chives, onions, leeks, endive kale, kohlrabi, head lettuce and parsnips planted for winter harvests. Remember to rotate crops to prevent disease and fungi build up that some vegetables are susceptible to. It is wise to add Diazanon vegetable dust to the rows before planting root crops. This helps eliminate wire worms that prey on root crops. Finely till the soil in the root crop rows so vegetables don't have to wind around stones and packed soil ap-proccolo, brussel sprouts, cabbage, and contorted when pulled. Few things are more enjoyable to vegetable gardeners than to dig up root crops in winter to make a salad or home made soup to nourish the body and delight the gardener's spirit.

Fruits and vegetables are exceptionally abundant and large in size compared to recent years. A stroll through any garden shows ripening tomatoes, huge squash, giant turnips and tall green corn stalks. Mr. Sun has contributed the main ingredient, light energy, to produce record harvests but gardeners must routinely assist nature in the garden patch. Deep thorough watering weekly is essential to vegetables. Lack of water can cut harvests a third or more. After watering a couple hours dig down with a shovel to determine how deep water penetrated. Handpick cabbage loopers, diamond back moth worms and imported cabbage worms or spray the culprits with a microbial insecticide, thuringiensis. (Trade name: Dipel or Thuricide) Carefully follow insecticide label directions.

Dog gone--a mystery with confusing clues

by Pat Jenkins

Seymore is missing. His owners know it. So do employees of the King County animal shelter in Kent from which he mysteriously vanished.

No one can explain what has happened to the English sheepdog that belongs to a Normandy Park family, and out of the animal's disappearance have come conflicting accounts of security at the shelter, adding more pieces to the puzzle.

The supervisor of the shelter is sure Seymore is part of a long line of thefts and escapes of animals from the facility. His superior is just as sure that if Seymore was stolen or ran away, it's an unusual case.

And Bruce and Linda Hempel can only guess about the fate of their 4-year-old pet.

The Hempels haven't seen Seymore since May 8, when Linda and her children found him in a pen at the Kent shelter. He had been taken there by a county animal control officer, who nabbed the unlicensed dog in the Hempels' neighborhood.

LINDA CLAIMS she and an officer at the shelter agreed that Linda's husband would return the next evening to pay the fine and take Seymore home, a plan duly noted on Seymore's admittance papers by the officer.

But the following evening, when Linda called the shelter to determine the amount of the fine her husband would have to pay when he went to claim Seymore, she was told "our dog wasn't there."

Linda, accompanied by her sister-in-law, Paula Hempel, immediately went to the shelter to try to straighten out the matter. Office workers, however, were unable to find any paperwork documenting what had happened to the dog. Their only explanations, Linda related, were that he had escaped while kennelmen were cleaning stalls, or that he had been stolen by someone who had entered the kennel area through the public entrance and exited through a rear door left unlocked as a fire escape.

Unsatisfied with those explanations, Linda and Paula left, but returned the next morning to ask about the fate of a dog that had been sharing the pen with Seymore, thinking that might give some clue to Seymore's whereabouts.

THEY WERE TOLD Linda said, the other dog had been put to sleep several days before she saw it with Seymore. Linda said that account was changed twice before a shelter officer decided the dog had been destroyed the same day Seymore disappeared.

Shelter personnel continued to maintain, though, that Seymore had somehow disappeared and not been destroyed.

But Linda and Paula still were not convinced. Finally, Linda recounted, "Paula and I thought of one last possible solution, and that was to check out the kennel tag number of Seymore."

The numbered tags are attached to animals when they're admitted to the shelter, and Linda and Paula reasoned that if Seymore had run away or been stolen, his number "would not be around."

They found the tag, however, hanging on a line with other tags. A secretary confirmed that it was indeed the number—number 6722—that Seymore had been wearing when last seen by Linda.

"That was proof enough that Seymore didn't run away (and wasn't stolen)," Linda asserted.

WHAT, then, has become of Seymore?

Quite probably he was stolen, said Sgt. Bill Popp, supervisor of the Kent shelter. The thefts "happen all the time," he said.

"People come in and take animals whether they're in a pen that's locked or isn't locked. If it's locked, they'll climb inside, hoist the dog over the top, then climb out and head out the back door with the dog."

The 150-pen kennel seems ripe for an enterprising dognapper. People may enter without supervision, the area is often left unattended, and two outer doors that serve as fire escapes must always be unlocked on the inside and are often left open during the day.

It's not unusual, Popp said, for persons to enter through the shelter's front door, walk past office personnel seated at their desks, tour the kennels unattended, and exit through the rear with a dog.

"We've caught people red-handed many times," Popp said. "Sometimes, two guys will go in through the front. A little later, only one comes back out. We get suspicious, go back into the kennels, and find a guy with a dog outside the pen waiting for his buddy to pull around in back with a car."

SOURCES close to the shelter claim the thefts could be halted by having additional personnel on duty during business hours and by increasing the amount of fencing around the building. "But when you start talking about those kinds of things, you're talking about money," one source said. "There's only so much the budget can afford."

Assertions of inadequate security at the shelter are refuted by Bill Gerard, supervisor of the countywide animal control service. Furthermore, he denies that animal thefts occur regularly at the Kent shelter, which serves the Highline area and other south county locales, or any of the county's two other shelters.

"A theft happens every once in a while, but no more than three or four times a year," Gerard said. "I don't know who says they happen all the time, but I'm not aware of any unusual amount."

Gerard said the Kent shelter has a staff of "four or six," making it impossible for them to avoid all thefts.

"We couldn't station a kennelmen in there (kennel area) all the time" for supervision purposes, Gerard said. "For the thousands of dogs that come through there in a year, it's not surprising a few disappear."

GERARD ADDED, "It's usually the people who own the animals who steal them." Their motive is to avoid paying a fine for their pet, he said.

Gerard said the disappearance of the Hempels' dog is "unfortunate."

"But I don't know what to tell you about it," he said.

Meanwhile, questions continue to nag the Hempels.

(1) If Seymore was stolen or managed to escape, why was his kennel tag left behind?

"I wish I could answer that for you, but I just have no idea how it happened," Popp said. He said kennelmen often find tags lying on the kennel floor or outside, apparently discarded while a bandit is making his getaway.

Gerard said the numbers are affixed to a thin chain that is hung around a dog's neck. He said they can be broken easily by a dog scratching its neck, and they "could certainly come off when someone is reaching into a pen to pull out an animal."

(2) DID Seymore escape his pen and flee the kennel unseen through an open fire escape door? To escape his wire pen, he would have had to manipulate a latch in order to push open the door, provided the door was not locked. If it was locked, his only other possible escape would have been to climb or jump over the door, which is more than 6 feet high.

Popp said he has witnessed dogs scale and leap over the sides of a pen. As for pushing open a pen's door, one animal control employee said that would be next to impossible for a dog to accomplish; another employee, however, said they can, "and do all the time."

Linda Hempel doubts Seymore, who she said was in low spirits when she saw him in the pen, would have attempted an escape.

(3) Could Seymore have been mistakenly destroyed?

"There is no way," Popp scoffed, "that dog was put to sleep. And I'm not going to lie to you about that. Why would we kill a dog when we still have a fee to collect on it?"

POPP SAID he has offered the Hempels a replacement for their dog another sheep dog that was released to the shelter by its owner.

"But she (Linda) didn't want it," Popp said. "We don't have to offer a replacement, but I know how people can get attached to their pets."

The Hempels, after contacting the county ombudsman's office, plan to file a claim with the Risk Management section of the county administrator's office. If the claim is allowed, the county will be required to pay the claim's negotiated value of the Hempels' dog. If the claim is disallowed, the Hempels have the option of filing a lawsuit against the county, according to a spokeswoman for the prosecuting attorney's office.

Foreign students need host homes

Families from all over South King County can participate in a international student exchange which starts soon.

High school students from all over the globe will be arriving in Seattle to attend school and to live in host family homes. The program, which has been in progress for several years, allows local families to be U.S. ambassadors in their own homes.

There are local families that are currently waiting French students for a one-month stay, beginning August 6th. On August 25, high school students from Argentina, Brazil, Germany, Yugoslavia, Japan and other countries will be arriving for either a six-month or one-year stay.

All of the students are fluent in English.

Pacific International Exchange is looking for more host families to accommodate foreign students who are studying in this country.

PIE is also accepting applications from American high school students who want to go abroad for study.

For information, call Mr. Almuht Dear at 523-4300 or Nancy Siegenthaler at 284-7232.

McMicken annex hearing planned

A public hearing on the issue of annexation of Crestview (northern McMicken Heights) to Tukwila will be held in the Tukwila area, with a date to be announced later.

That resulted from the County Boundary Review Board taking jurisdiction Thursday because the board felt there were issues that warranted further public input.

Hideaway cooks Federal Way, 7-5

by Terry M. Sell
Federal Way's Concrete Pacific baseball team helped end a five-game losing streak, but unfortunately it did not belong to them.
CP dropped a 7-5 Western International semi-pro baseball decision to Hideaway Restaurant of White Center, last Thursday night at Moshier Field in Burien. The game ended a prolonged losing skid for the Restaurateurs and added to the minus side of CP's now 2-14 record. Federal Way has three other games this weekend, one each yesterday and Friday night (results unavailable). Today they host Hideaway at 2 p.m. at Sacajawea, and face league-leading Adairs Wednesday night, 8:00 at Moshier.

CP played well throughout the game, but the chips fell in Hideaway's direction most of the night. Manager Earl Holloway's charges played nearly errorless ball throughout the field, hit well enough to win, and still lost more 910 add1.

"It was a good game, really," said Holloway. "They got a couple of breaks, and we didn't."
"We've been in a majority of the ballgames we've played, but we haven't got the breaks."
Perhaps the biggest break came in the bottom of the seventh inning, with Hideaway nursing a slim 5-4 lead. Tim Riffelin managed to protect a 3-3 night at the plate when FW reliever Mark Koult hit him with an errant pitch.

Dale Marsh sent Koult's next pitch into rightfield for what appeared to be a clean single. But the ball bounced in front of Pacific rightfielder Tim Swanson, and then about 12 feet over his head. Marsh took third on the play, and Riffelin scored stand-ding up.

Bart Foster came up next, taking a strike before laying down a terrific drag bunt down the third base line, sending Marsh home with a 7-4 Hideaway lead.
"The bad-hop triple, that's what really hurt us," lamented Holloway. "If they hadn't got those two (runs) we'd still be out there playing."
Federal Way came up with a run in the top of the ninth that would've tied the score but for those two runs. Kevin Valalla knocked in Valalla laced his third single of the night to score that one, but Jerry Bendorf tried to stretch his single to center into a double, and was picked off at second.

Concrete Pacific led earlier in the game, erasing a 1-0 HR lead with a three-run outburst in the fourth. TR Brydan started the inning, reaching first on Hideaway shortstop Drew Ackerlund's throwing error. Brydan stole second, and was joined when HR pitcher walked Rich St. John.

Mark Textor doubled into the hole in right-center, sending Brydan back to the plate. Swanson grounded out for the second out, but Dave Hoene blooped a double into short centerfield for two more runs.
Hideaway came back with three runs in the bottom of the stanzas off FW starter Ron Mack, on doubles by Ackerlund and Dave Callow.

Valalla tied it up again in the fifth, singling to left more 910 add 3-3 and scoring on two scarfaces and an error.
Hideaway sent Mack to the showers, if there were any at Moshier, in the bottom of the inning, on Riffelin's infield single, Marcel Moran's long fly to right and a single by Bob Clements.

Higgins settled down after that, giving up only two hits over the final four innings. Koult came on in the sixth, fanning five HR batters in the final four innings, but suffered the bad hops in the seventh.

"Terrible Ted" enters local media scene

by Kevin Stauffer
Atlanta tycoon Ted Turner is a man of many interests.
Those include ownership of the Atlanta Hawks basketball team, the Atlanta Braves baseball team and television station WTCG in Atlanta. Turner also is a renowned yachting skipper.
He touched on all of these subjects while speaking to a handful of media personnel in a press conference at the Red Lion Motor Inn Wednesday, interjecting humorous quips and a touch of Southern flamboyancy with regularity.
The conference was called together by Teleprompter of Seattle, the cable TV company which will add Turner's station to their cable service beginning July 1.

serious side to his ideas on his station's programming concept, particularly on the increasing violence in the film industry.
"We're trying to have a brighter outlook on life," Turner said. "How many of you saw 'The Deer Hunter'? I had to hold my hands over my eyes, I swear; my father shot himself, and I can't stand that blood and guys holding guns up to their heads."
Along with bringing 24 hours of family-oriented programming into the area via Teleprompter, Turner's station also features live telecasts of Atlanta's five major sports teams, which will now be on display for the Seattle sporting public. Turner feels that the addition of Atlanta sports on Seattle TV will not affect local attendance figures, including Seattle Mariner crowds.

pitiful scene; they stole your Marvin Webster for an $800,000 contract, and y'all was overpayin' him before.
"When guys in a small town beat the big guys, I think that's great," Turner continued in praise of the Sonics. "I was so tickled when y'all won it. There's was only one other team I would have liked to see win it more, and that's my own."
Turner's station picked up the Atlanta Hawks as the first sports team to be televised on WTCG, which Turner founded 10 years ago.
"The Hawks were the first team originated by WTCG about seven years ago," Turner informed. "The market for them was non-existent; in fact, the Hawks were more endangered than the bald eagle; but we got the DDT out of the water and things started to pick up."
Turner also had some interesting comments on the state of the nation's number-one pastime, baseball.

"I've never known this man to be at a loss for words," said Joe Johnson, general manager of Teleprompter of Seattle, in introducing Turner. The Southern businessman backed up Johnson's statement by expounding on sports and television with equal enthusiasm.
"What I'd like to do in my work with cable television is to improve the flow of information," Turner said. "The major networks have not informed us of what's going to happen because it would be bad for their advertisers; I knew 10 years ago that we would have an oil shortage."
Turner's station has opted to run older programs in lieu of the newer and often times more violent television programs and movies.

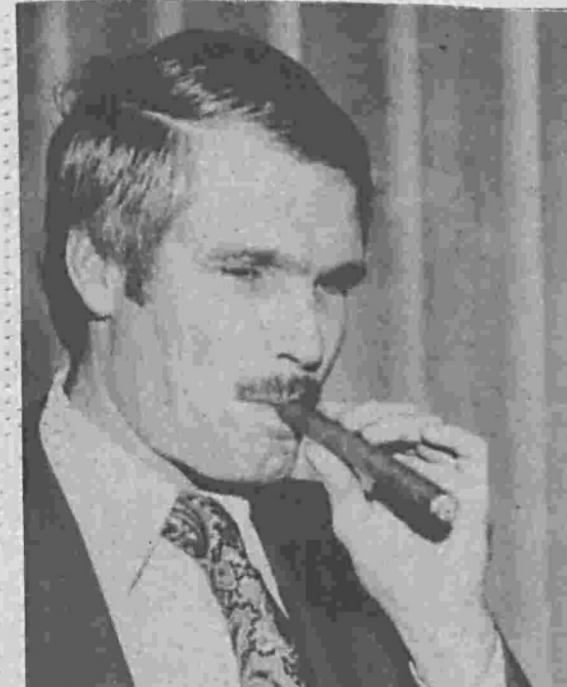

"We ain't gonna hurt the M's anymore than they're gonna hurt the Braves," Turner commented. He also feels that baseball is and will be successful for cable TV because "The real baseball fan can't get enough information."
"Our channel went to televising home games two years ago, and the Braves' attendance went up. Some people are grumpy about everything and that's easy, particularly if you're a loser."
Turner's outspokenness on the sports scene drew the most attention from the press, which delighted in the Southerner's outlook on the world of professional athletics.

Turner also had some interesting comments on the state of the nation's number-one pastime, baseball. "They talk about baseball being a sports loophole, and it is. I don't see how they can say baseball is in trouble when they pay people a million dollars apiece; don't get me wrong, though, because I like baseball," Turner said.
In fact, Turner divides his sporting loyalties between the diamond and the basketball court, not to mention the yachting. Turner was skipper of the yacht Courageous when it won the 1977 Cup races.
"The typical question from sportscasters is, 'What sport do you like best?' My answer is that in summer I like baseball and in winter I like basketball," Turner said.

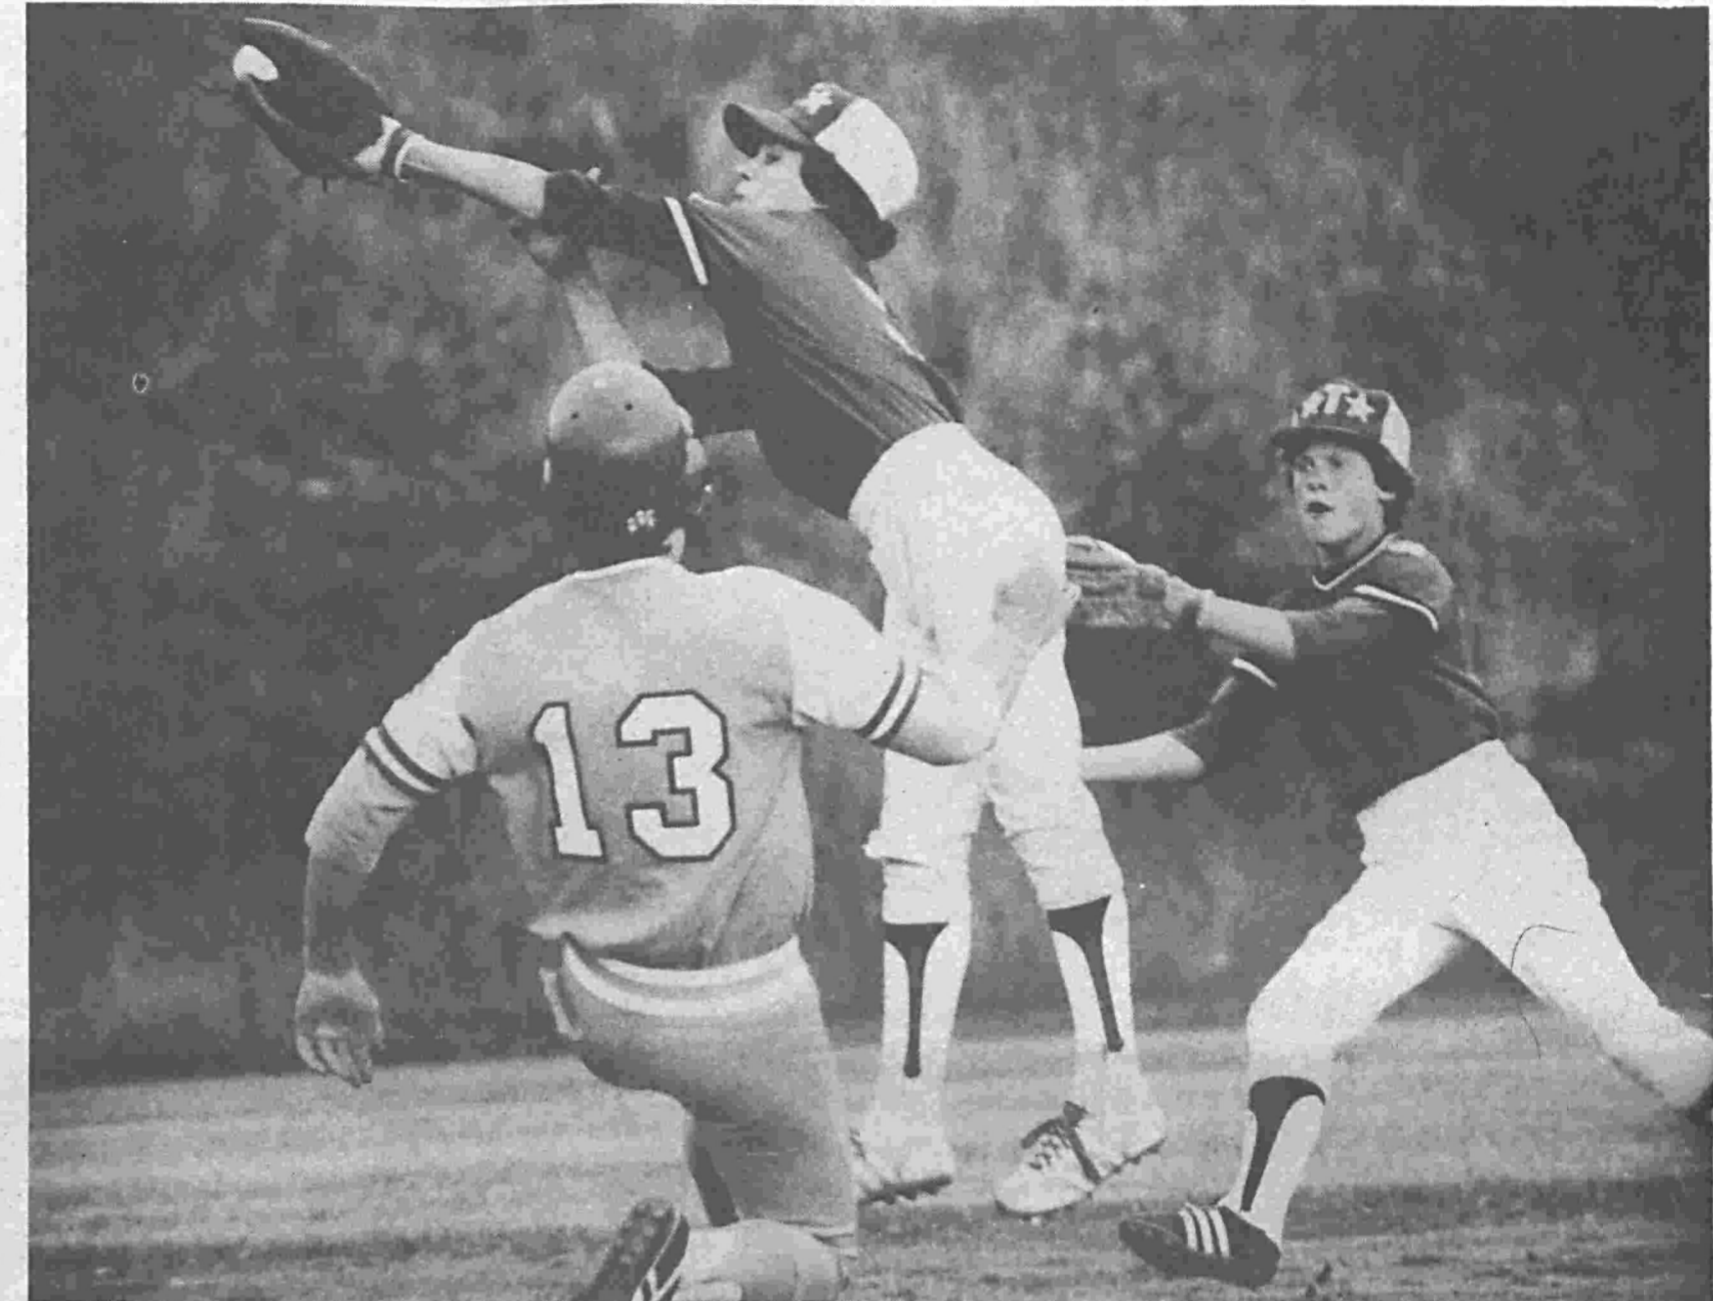

"We're using the motto that 'A good 'ole show is better than a bad new one,'" Turner said. "Some people say that it's just reruns, but it's like being married; I've been married for 15 years, and if that ain't a rerun I don't know what is."
Turner had a

"New York is a

Yachting also will occupy Turner this summer, as the Southern sports buff will return to the Puget Sound area in August to race a six-meter yacht, the "Ranger," in North American and World championship competition.
No matter what season or sport, Ted Turner should never be at a loss for either words or limelight.

Buzzing to second

BUZZ CARTER 13, of the Federal Way American Charter senior major team, steals second base during Wednesday's action in the District 10 Senior Major Tournament at Sacajawea Park. He eventually scored later in the third inning. The Americans advanced into the semifinals with a 14-2 win over Tukwila in this contest. Tournament championship results will be printed in Wednesday's issue.

Stewart ends hospital stay

Bob Stewart, Federal Way High's baseball coach, was released from Virginia Mason Hospital last Friday.
Stewart is being treated for Retractable Mesenterites, a rare disease of the stomach. Doctors first thought that stomach and abdominal tumors, detected when Stewart was first admitted to Virginia Mason, were cancerous and would prove fatal. A second biopsy showed the growths to be benign.
Retractable Mesenterites is a treatable disorder. Physicians first predicted that Stewart would have to rest at his Summer home but did not make any dietary restrictions. Stewart will return to Virginia Mason Thursday for a checkup.

Bob Stewart

remain in the hospital for two more weeks, but decided last Monday to release him earlier.
Stewart walked out of the hospital two days ago after a five-week stay. He has yet to be informed whether he can return to his history teaching duties when the fall semester begins.
"I'm feeling pretty good, and my appetite has picked up," he said two hours after his release.

Bannister manhandles powerful Yankee bats

In addition to pitching to the Yankees and before a crowd of more than 36,000, Brien's Floyd Bannister also had the opportunity to show his in-laws what Mariner pitchers are all about. And with the performance Bannister had, even his mother-in-law had to be impressed.

Mr. and Mrs. Cochran, parents of Bannister's wife Jana, arrived in the Seattle area from Whittier, Calif. just prior to last Wednesday night's game. And they, along with a huge Kingdome crowd, saw Bannister totally dominate the World Champion New York Yankees to the tune of 16-1.

The former Kennedy High School standout limited the Yankees to only three hits, but more importantly he went the entire distance making only 95 pitches which is a new Mariner record. Last Tuesday night Rick Honeycutt broke the old record with 97 pitches as he also defeated the Bronx Bombers with a brilliant two-hitter.

"Everything worked for me tonight," Bannister said. "My location was real good. My arm was alive and that's a good sign. It's coming back."

When asked what motivated him more, the Yankees or the crowd, Bannister replied. "The Yankees, but the crowd was definitely a big help."

Bannister confessed that the biggest problem he had to face in the game was waiting so long between innings when the Mariners were scoring all their runs.

"When we had a nine run lead in the second inning," the left hander said, "the only thing I had to do was keep my concentration and throw strikes. I had to stay ahead of the hitters and keep my fast ball moving. Location was also important. It seemed like I threw more than 95 pitches, but that was because we had those two long innings."

Bannister served up his only bad pitch of the game to Lou Piniella in the seventh inning and Piniella drove it to right field for a home run.

"I got behind on the count to Piniella," Bannister said. "Then I got the ball up and away and Piniella got hold of it. That is one thing you can't do to players like the Yankees have."

Bannister's three-hit mastery over the Yankees extended the Mariners winning streak at home against the Yankees to seven games before losing 14-2 on Thursday night.

One rather amusing moment came during the post game interview with Bannister when a New York reporter asked what he thought were the Yankees' problems, hoping in some way to get some negative

'Stampede' foot race scheduled July 21

The third annual Mountlake Terrace "Stampede" Fun Run will be held Saturday, July 21, beginning and ending at the Mountlake Terrace Junior High School.

The "Stampede" is part of a large Mountlake Terrace festival, which will include many other sporting and non-sporting events during the 1979 event. The 11-kilometer race is being sponsored by the City of Mountlake Terrace and H and L Athletic Specialists. More than 400 runners participated in the 1978 run with 600 runners estimated to participate in the 1979 event.

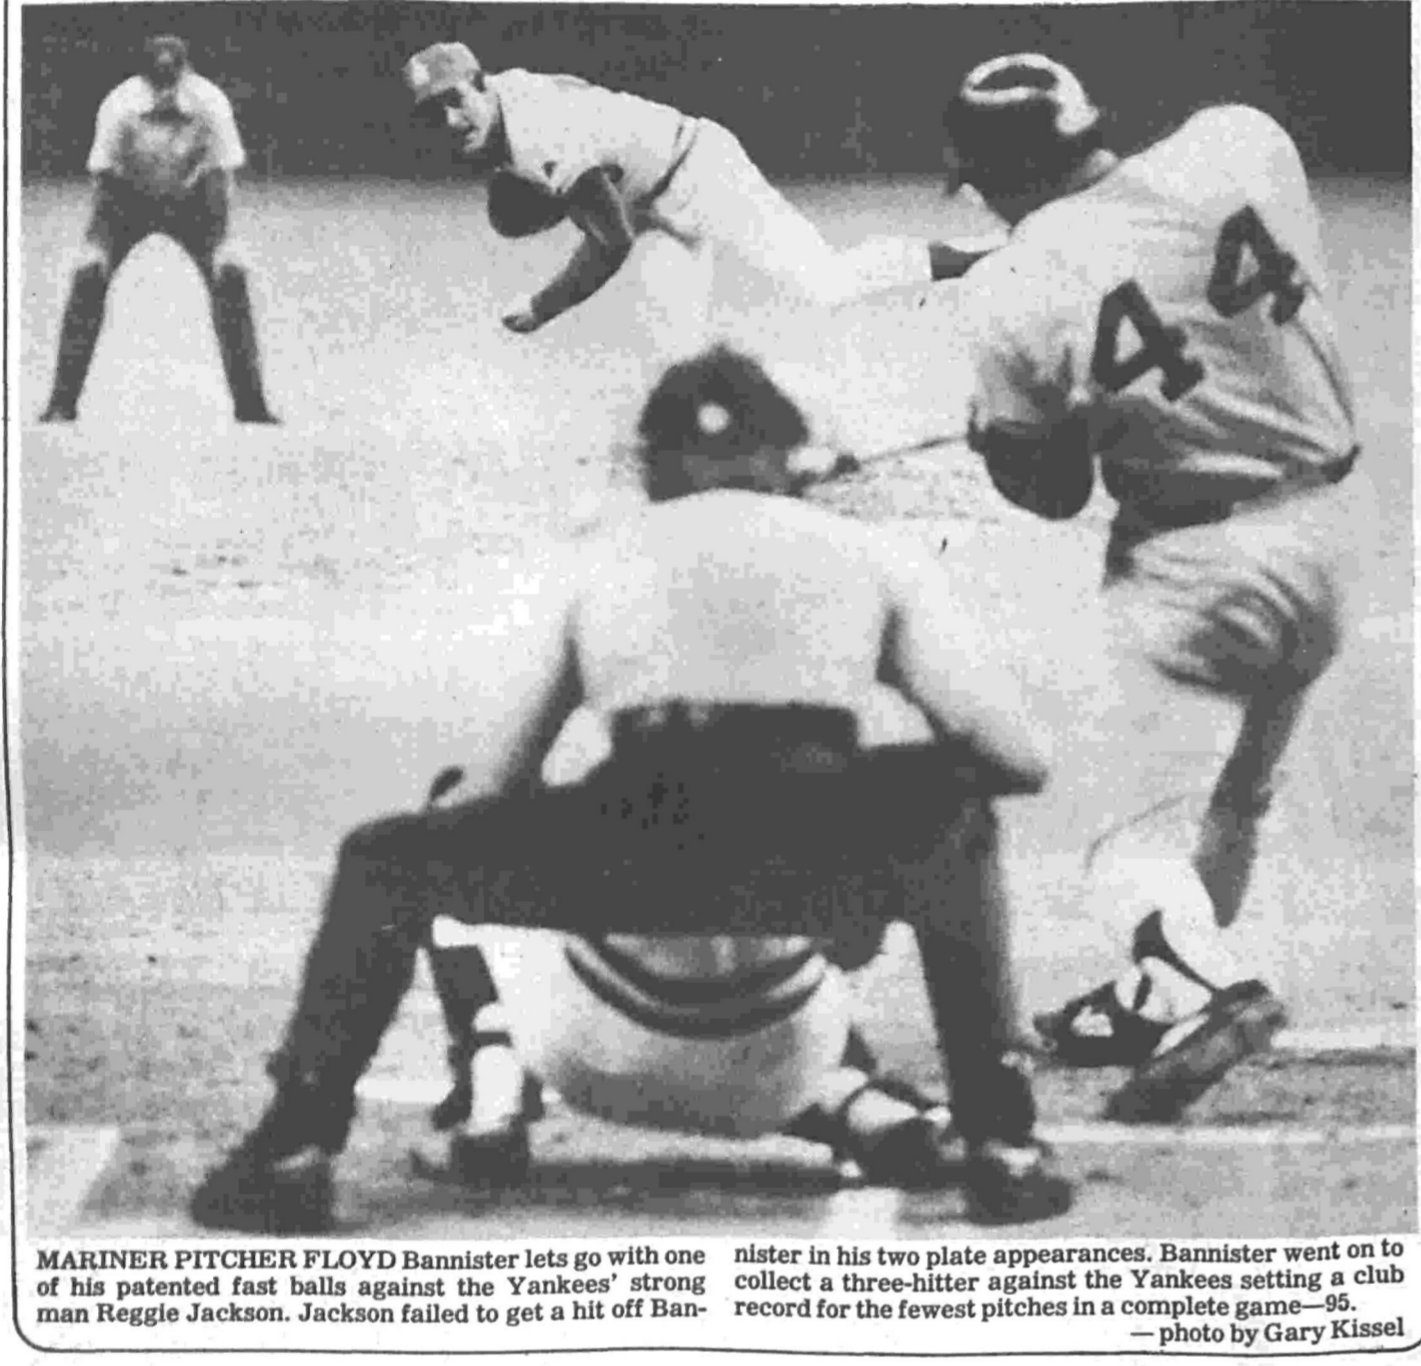

Divisions for those entering the race are: Boys 9-under; Girls 9-under; Boys 10-11; Girls 10-11; Boys 12-13; Girls 12-13; Boys 14-15; Girls 14-15; Boys 16-18; Girls 16-18; Open - men; Open - women; Men 30-39; Women 30-39; Men 40-49; Women 40-49; Men 50-over; Women 50-over.

Top finishers in most divisions will be awarded trophies with special awards to the first male and female from Mountlake Terrace; the first male over 180 pounds and the first female over 150 pounds. T-shirts will be awarded to the first 500 finishers. Ribbons will be presented to second and third place division winners.

Those interested in running in the race may pre-register no later than July 16. The pre-registration fee is $3 per runner with a $4 race begins at 10 a.m. fee for late entries. Entries will be taken and runners will not be clocked past 12:30 p.m. only if time permits.

The race day schedule begins with runners checking in at the Mountlake Terrace Junior High between 8:30 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. Each runner will be assigned an individual number which must be worn on the runner's front during the race. The All finishers will be tallied, although times may not be known immediately. Lockers and showers will be available at the Mountlake Terrace Recreation Pavilion. For more information and forms on the runner's front phone 776-9173 or 775-6477.

MARINER PITCHER FLOYD Bannister lets go with one of his patented fast balls against the Yankees' strong man Reggie Jackson. Jackson failed to get a hit off Bannister in his two plate appearances. # For doctor, patients just keep rolling in

by Terry Finn

The roller skating craze in Seattle has taken off like a 4th of July skyrocket, but a few of its practitioners have gone down—not up—with a bang.

Out of hundreds of roller skaters at Green Lake, Alki and other popular areas, a broken bone syndrome of skating accidents is making a modest reputation for Dr. Dennis Kvidera, a fourth year resident in orthopedics at University Hospital.

Kvidera has been studying the rash of skating injuries which have occurred since roller skating became so popular several months ago. He estimates that 95 percent of the injuries sustained at Green Lake, Gas Works Park and the Burke-Gilman Trail show up at University Hospital. Of the 17 reported skating injuries, Kvidera has examined 15.

The head of the Orthopedics Department at the University suggested to Kvidera that a study of skating accidents could make an interesting project and perhaps form the subject of a paper before a major medical conference.

KVIDERA IS in the process of collecting all the information available on roller skate spills and says he may try to take photographs or make movies of skaters at Green Lake to help illustrate problem areas.

Over two-thirds, 12 or the 17 reported injuries in the past three months, have been wrist fractures among young adults ranging in age from the late teens to the mid-thirties. The injuries are not medically remarkable in themselves, but the age group suffering them is unusual.

"Normally we see wrist fractures in middle aged or older people, but now, because of the popularity of roller skating, it's happening to a lot of younger people," Kvidera explained.

"Almost all of the wrist injuries are a very common type of fracture which is usually not permanently disabling," he said. But he cautioned that such breaks can lead to "residual deformities," limited mobility or even nerve damage.

Ankle and leg fractures are the next most common type of injury. Kvidera says the skates being rented out seem to be okay mechanically. The main cause of the accidents is human error.

"MOST OF" the trouble is caused when people skate in large crowds, or where the terrain includes sharp, twisting curves or inclines. People, especially those with wobbly ankles, can't control the skates on high-speed curves or in heavy traffic," he maintains.

The skaters are thrown off possible.

"About the only means of balance and feel themselves going down. They stick out a hand to break the fall and—crack!—before they know it they're in the examining room with Dr. Kvidera.

Kvidera says he doesn't know why, but most of injuries occur to women. Young children often fall too, but they are almost never hurt, he notes.

prevention is to get the word out

The injured adults, he says, aren't necessarily out of shape, but "they aren't great athletes, either," he said. Inexperience makes for wobbly ankles and out-of-control skates.

Kvidera takes a ribbing from some of his colleagues for gaining a "rep" as Seattle's specialist in "skate breaks," but says he's out to prevent their occurrence if about the dangers and hope that people get more experience before they try anything fancy," he said.

He suggests that beginners, or those who have not been on skates in a few years, should avoid jostling crowds and sudden curves or steep inclines.

The idea, after all, is to keep rolling around Green Lake or Alki, not down some hospital corridor.

All-star grid game gets needed sponsors

Co-sponsorship of the Coaches North-South All-Star Football Game, scheduled Aug. 4 in Spokane's Albi Stadium, has been assured with the announcement recently that the Spokane Daily Chronicle has joined Seattle First National Bank in support of the summer event. The coaches re-introduced the game in Seattle last year after an absence of nearly 20 years. Graduates of the state's high school football programs are matched in a North-South format of 60 players, most of whom are headed for college careers in the Northwest.

Other coaches also heralded the decision by the Chronicle and Sea-First. "They have displayed concern for our youth and community involvement and I applaud them," offered Terry Ennis of Renton, game co-chairman.

Seahawks start training camp tomorrow at Cheney

The Seattle Seahawks will open their fourth training camp Saturday, July 14, when 17 veterans and 52 rookies report to Eastern Washington University in Cheney.

Among the veterans reporting early will be Seattle's three quarterbacks Jim Zorn, Steve Myer and Sam Adkins. The players reporting on July 14 will take physicals and be fitted for equipment that day and then practice for the first time on Sunday, July 15.

Practices, which are open to the public, are scheduled for 9:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The remaining 31 veterans will report to Cheney July 18 and take physicals that morning and practice for the first time this afternoon.

Included among the 100 candidates for this year's squad are 12 players that reported initially to Seattle's first Cheney training camp in July of 1976. Returning for their fourth Eastern Washington University summer are tackle Nick Bebout; cornerback Dave Brown; safety Don Dufek; linebacker Sammy Green; tight end Ron Howard; center Art Kuehn; wide receiver Sam McCullum; quarterback Steve Myer; defensive tackle Steve Niehaus; wide receiver Steve Raible; running back Sherman Smith and quarterback Jim Zorn.

The Seahawks' annual scrimmage will be held Saturday, July 28, at Woodward Field on the EWU campus at 3:30 p.m.

The Seahawks and Eastern Washington University are sponsoring this year's Football Preview and Scrimmage Party, which will include a showing of the 1978 highlight film and NFL Follies film; a question and answer session with Seahawks executives; a souvenir pennant and montage of autographed player photos; a box lunch; music by the Seahawks Combo; and a reserved seat for the scrimmage.

Tickets, priced at $6.75 for adults and $5.75 for students and children, are on sale at the EWU Pavilion and Spokane area Old National Banks.

Whoppers!

SHIRLEY VAUGHAN (left) and her husband Dick exhibit two 18-pound King salmon they caught at Westport on June 25. The fish were landed on the Lady Dee of Westport Charters. Westport Charters will begin its $23,830 fishing derby tomorrow. The contest will end Sept. 9.

Hawk tickets on sale

Approximately 16,000 single-game tickets for the 11 Seahawks home games will go on sale at the team's ticket outlets beginning next Monday, July 16.

Tickets are available in the $7 and $11 seating areas and will be available at the Seahawks ticket office in Kirkland at 9 a.m., the Kingdome, Fidelity Lane outlets and selected Pay N Save, Ernst Home Centers and Sportswest Stores.

Tickets will be limited to four per customer for the Aug. 2 Minnesota game, the Aug. 24 San Francisco game, the Sept. 16 Oakland game and the Nov. 4 Los Angeles game.

The Seahawks sold 59,500 season tickets before cutting off sales in order to have individual game tickets available.

Three injured in freeway accident

THREE PERSONS suffered injuries in an accident Tuesday on I-5 north of South 260th. Calvin W. McDow, 58, Nevada, received an injured left arm, and his wife, Myrtle McDow, 63, suffered a fractured rib, neck strain and facial lacerations. Both were taken to Valley General Hospital by Shepherd Ambulance. The accident occurred when the vehicle driven by Thomas P. Stephens, 19, Seattle, strayed onto the shoulder of the road, striking the parked vehicle occupied by the McDows. Stephens' vehicle flipped onto its top and landed partially on the McDow vehicle. Stephens suffered facial lacerations and was treated at the scene.

Burglars saw off door to steal comic books

Burglars sawed half a door off in a commercial burglary of a store at 220th and Pacific Highway South last week. Comic books valued at between $3-$6,000 were stolen in the burglary which is under investigation by the Des Moines Police Department.

A 21-foot boat and trailer, valued at about $7,000, was taken from the Des Moines Marina parking lot Thursday, July 5.

Pacific Junior High School was the scene of two burglaries last week, according to police. On July 2, unknown suspects broke a window to gain entry, then broke into the vending machines. About $2 worth of candy bars were stolen, however the suspects caused an estimated $300 worth of damage to the machines. Last Thursday, the building was entered through the same window, however no loss was reported.

Almost $2,500 worth of lobster, crab and steak was taken from a Des Moines Restaurant last Friday. The Des Moines Police are investigating a burglary in an old hotel at 224th and Pacific Highway South in which all the wooden doors, windows and window frames were taken. The items are valued at about $1,000.

An electric hand saw, valued at $275, was taken from a construction site last Thursday. A Des Moines resident reported the theft of $300 from her bedroom. Entry is unknown.

An American flag, valued at $10 was stolen from outside a home last Thursday and the following day, unknown suspects cut the license tabs from a license plate.

Des Moines Police arrested several persons last week including a 21-year-old man for the theft of wine and food from a local store, an adult male for simple assault, and a 20-year-old man for possession of marijuana.

Several firecracker complaints were received last week in addition to 11 cases of malicious mischief and several bike thefts.

JEAN ENTICKNAP shares her world with a family of puppets that includes this Japanese stoic. He is fashioned after the buraku form, an ancient Japanese puppet art.

Puppeteer draws creative ideas from childhood play experiences

by Barbara Butts

Jean Enticknap's graceful, naked hands swim, walk and then dance across an invisible, miniature stage, evolving from primitive man in the ocean to sophisticated socialites of modern times.

"A puppet can be made of anything, can do anything," said the 1967 Federal Way High School graduate and Highline Community College drama professor as she demonstrated one of her favorite puppet shows.

The magic of puppetry is alive in "Jean of my laugh," as she is called by her theater colleagues. It seems as much a part of her as her rolling laughter, smiting eyes and refined hands.

Her love for the art blossomed in her at a late stage in her life, she said. Not until her college days at Central Washington State College (now university) in the early 1970s did she step into this tiny world with community college drama professor as she demonstrated one of her favorite puppet shows.

But the seeds of her passion and the training for her future career in puppetry were planted early in life when she and her sister, Joan, played with their dolls when they were children.

"When my sister and I were growing up, we played with dolls about 24 hours a day," she said. "We made believe instead of watching television."

"We just went out and created all these wonderful worlds."

The cherub-faced daughter of Edward and Ruth Enticknap, who live at 36817 12th Ave. S in Federal Way, says she is still drawing on the material that she and her sister developed when they were children.

And it is with a child's creative freedom that she practices her art. "I love traditional puppetry," she said, "but I want to explore new forms."

In her puppetry presentations at the college and in the community, Jean uses many forms of a diversified art. At her disposal are glove and hand puppets, rod puppets, marionettes, flat-figured puppets and others.

One of her favorite shows is one in which puppets in the traditional sense are not used. Only the hands, bare and then clothed, are used to tell the story.

She has particular affection for the puppets she developed for her master's thesis in children's theater at the University of Washington.

For her thesis she did buraku, an ancient Japanese form, in a simplified American adaptation to tell a Russian folk tale.

Bunraku puppets were developed in the 18th century and are about two-thirds the size of an adult. They may be operated by as many as three manipulators.

Making these puppets, which are notable for their magnificent costumes and stylized carving, took her almost two years.

The teacher says that she does not do much of the actual manipulation of her puppets now. She is too busy making them or teaching others how to construct and operate a puppet.

But she does get to produce puppet theater each year. And she often has puppets in the conventional plays at the college which primarily use human actors.

For this puppeteer, as it is for most artists in her field, the line that separates puppet actors from their human counterparts is a thin one.

Cornish offering opera workshop

The Cornish Opera Workshop, under the direction of Cornish faculty members Susanne Szekely and Bern Herbolzheimer, will present an evening of scenes from German, French, Italian and English operas on July 20.

Lakme, Fidelio, Carmen, The Mikado and La Rondine.

Vocal instruction for this year's Opera Workshop is Carol Webber. Steve Heck is staging the production, and Jim Savage is producer of the program. Both Heck and Savage are members of the Cornish faculty.

The complimentary program will begin at 8 p.m. in the Cornish Theater at 710 E. Roy. For more information, phone 323-1400.

The scenes to be performed in the original language include Faust, Idomeneo, Herda Capo (by Arrabal), the Bartered Bride, materials for a community based career exploration project were adopted.

The adoptions followed reviews by citizens, staff and the school board.

Books adopted

The Highline School Board Wednesday night adopted nine new textbooks for use in the district beginning next year.

Real Estate

By Bob Del Bianco REALTOR

BUYING A LOT

Buying land involves risks. Contrary to popular belief, land is not a fail-safe investment. The Florida land boom of the mid-20's was not the only time people lost money speculating in land. It happens every day. Here are some guidelines which may help in reducing the risk factor. Generally speaking, the more you pay for a lot, the surer you are of getting your money's worth. If you pay X amount of dollars for a developed lot with utility lines already in, you may be better off than buying the same lot for one-half the amount before the roads and utilities are built out to it. Development costs vary, but almost anywhere they are rising every year. If you are not a land expert, the most preferred method of buying a lot is to have a REALTOR do your negotiating. His most valuable asset is his knowledge of property values. You are far better off with him on your side.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate please phone or drop in at your local DEL BIANCO REALTY INC., offices. We're here to help!

Port OKs Sea-Tac westside projects

Improvements that will clear the way for the Wyerhaeuser general aviation facility on the west side of Sea-Tac Airport were authorized this week by the Port of Seattle Commission.

Port staff won the go ahead to prepare plans and specifications prior to letting bids on improvements including sanitary sewers, access road and security fencing. The access road for the westside general aviation facility will be from South 188th Street. Estimated cost for the project is $506,000 with funding coming from the airport development fund.

Commissioners also awarded two contracts for work at the airport to M. A. Segale, Inc. The firm was low bidder for a project that involves extending taxiway C on the westside of the airport. The extension will begin at about South 188th Street north 3,000 feet. It is designed to serve the proposed 15 acre westside general aviation facility.

According to Vern Ljungren, chief engineer for the port, the taxiway can eventually be widened and overlaid to accommodate air cargo traffic.

The taxiway will be 40 feet wide. The Segale bid was $238,133.75, $100,000 below the high bid.

Segale was also awarded a $1.6 million contract to overlay the main runway at the airport. Ljungren said except for resurfacing of touchdown points on the runway, there has been no overlay for several years. The project will extend the life of the runway 20 years, he said. Without the work, the runway would be a hazard to aircraft, he said.
