

Parents irate over busing case

by Loren Bliss

Irate parents continued their efforts late last week to overturn the Federal Way School Board's controversial 3-2 refusal to restore school bus service to pre-1976 levels.

Myrna Taylor, one of the parents involved in the campaign, said that she had talked with several others who are upset about the board's decision.

She and her husband, Roger Taylor, also said that parents are contacting legislative representatives and state and federal officials to determine what might be done to get the service restored.

And Mrs. Taylor said that some of the parents are attempting to enlist the support of the Federal Way Chamber of Commerce and various other local civic organizations.

At present, only children who live two or more miles from where they attend school are provided with bus service by the district.

Many parents want the service restored to its pre-1976 limits. This would mean that busing would be provided for elementary pupils who live one or more miles from school, and secondary students who live 1.5 miles or more from school.

THE RESTORATION had been recommended by the district administration and is supported by parent-teacher-student association groups, the bus drivers' union and by many teachers.

But the school board defeated it four weeks ago and voted it down after reconsideration last Monday.

The board members who oppose the one and 1.5 mile limits are Nancy Ise, Bill Miller and Larry Van Sickle.

Member John Hickman proposed at Monday's meeting that the busing limits be made contingent upon the district's fuel reserves, but that too was defeated.

Dick Schoon, the fifth board member, has favored the pre-1976 limits since the dispute began.

"Some parents," said Taylor, "are saying that the board is still attempting to punish the community for its failure to pass any school tax levy proposal since 1974."

The busing limits were extended to two miles because of budget cuts resulting from the failed levies.

ISE, MILLER and Van Sickle argue that the $28,000 the district would save by maintaining the two-mile limits can be used to bolster educational programs.

But opponents answer that the $28,000 — the remainder of busing costs are reimbursed by the state — will contribute little to the program. They say it would be better spent on busing.

They argue that the fuel shortage and safety problems on local streets and roads make busing the only rational use of the money.

The dispute arose after the district received an additional $7.7 million in state funding, enough to underwrite fully the basic education program that has suffered since the voters began turning down levies.

Taylor said in mid-week that he has contacted Rep. Bob Eberle, R-30th District, in an attempt to determine the facts of the district's fuel situation.

Attempts have also been made to contact Sen. Peter von Reichbauer, D-30th District, but as of Friday morning, the senator had not responded, parents said.

Mrs. Taylor asks that parents who are interested in organizing to have the board's decision overturned contact her at 839-5921.

THIS BUILDING has stood on this site just south of the intersection of South 348th Street and Pacific Highway South for more than half a century. It was one of the first business ventures in the mid-1920's when it served as a fruit stand. Now, facing deterioration, its owner plans to raze the building and build a new Coffee Cup Tavern on adjacent land.

The Coffee Cup: no coffee's served here by Nathalie Weber

Four decades ago it was the Coffee Cup Cafe. Today it's the Coffee Cup Tavern. And its patrons call it "the Cup."

One of the oldest enterprises in the area, the small unadorned building today is recognized by its chips of peeling red paint and sagging porch entry. It may not be an aesthetical addition to the strip south of South 348th Street on Pacific Highway, but it's a Federal Way landmark. And within a year it may be razed.

Owner Bill O'Connell, a soft-spoken man of 56, has justifiable reasons for wanting to level the old place. Injecting calculated humor into his carefully-chosen comments, he summed it up: "I've gotta tear it down before it falls down."

Hounded by threats of non-conformity to building and fire codes, O'Connell has decided to build another "Cup" on the land just south of the present tavern. He owns about one-and-one-half acres surrounding the present building, affording plenty of room to expand. "It's gonna be as close to this one as possible," he said. "Similar but bigger."

FIRST GLIMPSES would likely strike misgivings in the casual observer. Why would someone want to imitate a listing tavern with a chipped formica bar and concrete floor?

"It's the friendly atmosphere I want to keep," O'Connell said, adding that he doubts whether any of the items in the present tavern would survive a move next door. "Hardly anybody comes in here without being able to strike up a conversation with somebody and that's the way I want it to stay," he said.

The "Cup" clientele agrees. "This is home," one customer said. Another added, "Yeah, you won't find many friendly taverns like this any more. Lots of places a guy won't talk to you; here he will."

One man sat at the bar recalling his introduction to the tavern more than 20 years ago. "I think it was 1956 or '57 when I stopped in here to get a cup of coffee and found out it was a beer joint," he chuckled. "And I've been coming here since."

THE SMALL building that houses the drinking establishment was built in the mid-1920's as a fruit stand and soon was converted into a cafe. In the mid-1930's it became one of the area's first taverns.

O'Connell and a partner bought the "Cup" 12 years ago. Over the years he has built a steady clientele and, despite the time-honored name, The Coffee Cup does not serve coffee. "He just fools people to get 'em in here," one customer said.

O'Connell bought the tavern because he'd become tired of 30 years as an electrician. He had frequented the "Cup" while under different ownership, liked the place and bought it when it went up for sale. Recalling his 15 years of socializing at the tavern, O'Connell mustered some incidents from the past.

"It was dead," he responded defensively when asked about the tree he and a buddy felled next to the tavern. More than any other occurrence, that dilemma probably served to put the Coffee Cup on the map in Federal Way.

O'Connell said about 13 years ago he and a friend, later to become his partner in the ownership of the Coffee Cup, were sitting in the tavern when they became bothered by a dead tree standing next to the building. Their annoyance grew, and the two cut down the tree.

"It started falling and there wasn't anything we could do about it," he said. And the tree landed across Pacific Highway South, blocking the south-bound traffic. A Volkswagen then slammed into the barricade, traffic snarled and all O'Connell could do was chop up the tree to get it off the road. "It was great for business," he smiled. "Everybody kept comin' in to see what had happened."

A veteran Oly drinker, O'Connell's taps pour only that label. He boasts one of the largest beers in town for its price — 55 cents for a 15-ounce glass. His customers range from truck drivers to construction workers and are largely comprised of men. "I think the women care for the fancier places with dancing," O'Connell surmised.

THE PLACE ISN'T fancy, but it is entertaining. Pinball machines, a pool table and a jukebox that lists only Country-Westerns all are crowded into the building. And if a customer isn't into playing games, he can always read the wall behind the bar that is decorated with signs and towels truck drivers have brought back from all over the country as gifts for O'Connell.

Those gifts — and the fact that the same customers keep coming back — are testimony that O'Connell is liked by those who patronize the "Cup." And he likes the work, despite once being shot by robbers and occasionally having to deal with temperamental customers. "It's pretty good. It's a living," he said.

Despite his dispassionate words, however, O'Connell's attitude radiates enthusiasm for his establishment, from the hard-boiled eggs his wife makes for the customers to the bee hive that has made an outside corner of the Coffee Cup its home for the past 10 years.

But soon that all will be gone, and O'Connell expresses no regrets. It's a neighborhood tavern, he said, and it will still be friendly without the old building. And it will still be called the "Coffee Cup Tavern." O'Connell wouldn't change that. "Everybody knows where 'the Cup' is," he said.

OLY IS THE only beer Bill O'Connell, owner of the Coffee Cup Tavern, pours from the tap because it's the only beer he likes to drink. O'Connell has operated the Coffee Cup for 12 years and says the work is "pretty good."

Soldier's fate rests with jury

by Darlene Himmelspach

A Tacoma prostitute "sealed her own death warrant through drunken banter" with a Fort Lewis soldier a King County Prosecutor argued Friday. "But that was hardly justification for murder," according to Prosecutor Lee Yates.

Yates made his remark in closing statements to the jury in the second-degree murder trial of Paul Manuel, Jr., 38, of Federal Way. Manuel was accused of the March 9 shooting death of Pheolia Pleasant at Manuel's home, 35213 -34th Ave. S.

Pleasant died of a single gunshot wound to the head fired at close range from a .357 magnum handgun. Defense Attorney David Allen argued in his final statement to the jury that the evidence of the case was not consistent with the state's claim that Manuel was holding the gun when it went off. "This gun would be like a flame-thrower. Where is the evidence of the flame?" Allen argued.

Allen also discounted testimony by the state's key witness, Manuel's girlfriend, Louise Moore, the only eye witness to the shooting, was "a hysterical woman who didn't know what she was talking about when she gave a neighbor of Manuel's the impression that the Army Master Sergeant was "some wildman stalking her in the woods," according to Allen.

When police arrived at the Manuel residence an hour after the fatal shooting, Manuel was sitting at a dining room table, his wounded hand wrapped in towels and his two handguns in the place where Ms. Moore said she put them after the shooting.

The victim's body was in the trunk of Manuel's car. Manuel stated on the witness stand that he repeatedly asked Ms. Moore to call police and to take him and the victim to Auburn General Hospital but she refused and indicated to him that Ms. Pleasant was already dead. "I wouldn't have put her in there if I thought she was alive," he told the jury.

The much-decorated Vietnam veteran broke down during his testimony before the jury in Judge Robert Winsor's court. With a shaking voice he told the jury he just sat at a dining room table after the shooting and waited for police to arrive.

He also said of the actual shooting that he did not see which woman held the gun. "All I could remember seeing was the hammer being cocked and it was pointed in my direction," Manuel said. "I saw the gun and grabbed for it."

Manuel said he did not know how the gun, a .357 magnum which was a present to him from the "members of the Republic of Vietnam for the job I had done for them," got into Ms. Pleasant's hand. He said that, when the gun went off, "Tony went limp and I grabbed her to keep her from falling."

The prosecution maintained that Manuel put his arm around Ms. Pleasant, put the gun to her head and fired.

A Tacoma police officer told the court that the victim was a known prostitute with a "bad" reputation for violence which increased to "very bad" when she was drinking. Charles Waddell, a former bouncer at Brown's Tavern which Ms. Pleasant frequented, said the victim "was known to carry a straight razor on a string around her neck."

Street Talk:

More cells cited as cure for prisons

Joann Olivier

Roy Hale

Penny Moe

Doris Lamonds

We should make the prisons bigger. I don't know where the money's going to come from, but I don't want new taxes. The prisons that we have now are pretty unfit. Let the state pay for them from money that's already there.

Make more room. That's better than letting them out after serving a couple of weeks or so. We should try to use the tax money already available. But I have never seen the prisons and really don't know what condition they're in.

We'll have to build more prisons. I understand that they're really anti-race. I think they should move around the dollars already being collected. The prisons must be much more important than some other projects that are being funded.

Build some more and have better rehabilitation programs. But they would not be so crowded if the law would clamp down on murderers and other criminals; they wouldn't be so apt to break the law. They go into prison now and think it is going to be a real plush hotel.

Under the Capitol Dome

by Robert C. Cummings

The State Transportation Commission is prepared to do what it can to alleviate any hardship which may result from abandonment of Milwaukee Road trackage in this state.

But it has only limited federal funds available through the Local Rail Service Assistance Program.

It has directed the Department of Transportation to give priority to projects in areas which would suffer the most severe hardship from the loss of rail service.

It's Up to the Locals

The department will look to the private sector and local areas to develop solutions, and try to fit the available funds into them.

But it will expect local interests to commit the matching share of any federal assistance provided.

Meanwhile, the department will work on a continuing basis towards preserving essential rail services in this state, noting, however, that this may not result in continued operation by either of the other carriers which serve this state.

Missed by a Whisker

In general, business interests fared pretty well in the recent legislative session, but some are deeply concerned over failure of the products liability which hovered on the brink of passage for several days.

The measure had already passed both houses, and the version which passed the Senate originally represented a compromise.

Numerous amendments adopted by the House comprised further compromises. Then the House passed it and sent it back to the Senate for concurrence in the amendments.

Door Slams Shut

The measure rested on the Senate concurrence calendar for days. Then, as the Legislature wound down toward adjournment, Majority Leader Gordon Walgren had it returned to Rules Committee.

He said it was "too complex" and needed more study. This study is to be conducted by a special select committee during the interim.

What irks proponents of the bill is the fact that the issue had been studied extensively by the Judiciary Committees of both houses during the past two years.

The measure had been of little interest to the general public until the fatal crash of a DC-10 airliner focused attention on the issue.

A Costly Blow

The worst windstorm in 100 years blew down more than 200 million board feet of state-owned timber in the Olympic Peninsula area.

State foresters who cruised the area estimate its value at about $30 million.

To prevent insect damage and rot, it must be sold quickly, so the Department of Natural Resources is scheduled to hold its first sale this week.

When the sale is completed, it is expected to push the Olympic area over its usual annual sale of 350 million board feet.

Watch That Smoke

No formal proposal has been made yet, but the State Board of Health is considering expanding its smoking regulations to cover the work place.

It is now holding hearings on the idea and numerous employers are concerned over the possibility of having to segregate their employees.

This could create serious problems in the modular type offices which have become increasingly common in recent years.

And can you imagine what the news room of a metropolitan daily newspaper would look like?

He Will Be Missed

Every senator and former senator who had served with James Keefe of Spokane during the past 30 years was saddened by his recent death, even though it had been anticipated.

Keefe, who had served continuously since 1949, was the dean of the Senate and a longtime member of the powerful Rules Committee.

Though he was past to be in poor health these past several years, the recent sessions were the first he had ever missed, and he never complained.

He almost never made a speech on the floor. He was a listener rather than a talker. But his quiet, subdued humor made his presence a delight.

And his popularity accomplished more legislatively than the oratory of some of his more verbose colleagues.

Two Seats Vacant

Senate vacancies created by Keefe's death and the appointment of Charles E. Newschwander to the Board of Tax Appeals will be filled in this fall's election.

But it is unlikely that there will be any change in the present political division of 30 Democrats and 19 Republicans.

Keefe was from a "locked-in" Democratic district, while Newschwander's is similarly staunch on the Republican side.

Free Ride for House Members

Because their terms don't expire until 1981, House members may run for the Senate spots without risking their present seats.

As William J.S. May doesn't intend to run, Margaret Hurley, who has served in the House continuously since 1953, is considered a shoo-in for the Senate seat in Spokane's 3rd District.

Shirley Winsley of Fircrest and Ted Haley of Tacoma are the House members in Pierce County's 28th District.

What should we do about overcrowding in the state prisons?

Mike Gabert

Patty Thomas

Elliott Elver

Lenny Anderson

Maybe we ought to build more prisons. I hate to say that we need to build more prisons to take care of more crime, but that's a fact of life. I don't think people want taxes to be increased, but (governmental budgets) could be shuffled around.

We have two choices — build more prisons or enforce the laws we have on the books so that they avoid going there in the first place. But the root of the problem is in the home — working mothers. We can't do much with the present situation, but by improving the home we can change things for the future.

We have to build some more prisons. I work at the federal prison, McNeil (Island Penitentiary), and don't think that we should release them early. Using McNeil wouldn't work. It's too old. And the cost is too great. That's why we're closing it.

Release some of the prisoners who are in there for minor offenses. They have got too many people in there for smaller crimes, such as small burglaries, and are not picking up the people that are doing the major crimes like murder and rape. Prisoners are being treated unfairly by the warden and guards. They have no rights; they're treated like slaves.

Ann Hagen

Wet and woolly ride with novice driver

by Ann Hagen

You're in the driver's seat of a padded ski boat. Casually seated in a padded naughahyde seat, you cut through surging waves and swing around in tight circles.

There's a glow of confidence on your face as your friends watch and admire your skill.

Dream on, baby. That's not the way it feels at all.

Every summer, usually in the rainy season, we take the kids and head for the lake. Usually husband and eldest son take turns driving the boat and I either help with the rope or toast on the beach.

But, this year husband decided it was his turn for the beach. (I still think he just wanted to watch the bikini-clad beauties in the sand.)

A little hesitant but willing, I sat down behind the wheel and revved up the engine. Nothing like a little power to put you on top of the world, I thought.

Wrong, Nothing like a little power to scare the bejeebers right out of you. "How do I get this thing back to normal," I screamed over the roar of the engine still in neutral. "Pull the lever back to the middle and relax," said husband patiently. (Brother, he'll do anything to get on the beach.)

He explained that you push the red lever forward to control the speed and the blue lever forward to put the motor in gear. Sounds easy enough, I thought.

Handing the ski rope to daughter who was perched on the dock with her skis in the water, I pushed both levers forward. "Not so fast, yelled son beginning to show fear as he hung onto the side of the boat. "I'll tell you when to hit it."

Back to neutral, I tried again, this time moving the boat slowly. "Hit it," said son as the rope stretched full length. Nervously, I moved the lever forward.

Slowly daughter moved off the dock and sunk, the rope still firming between her hands. "That was just a little slow," said son as daughter sputtered her way back on the dock. "Give it all its got next time."

We tried again and this time I moved the lever full tilt and we took off like a streak. Looking in every direction for other boats, I remembered daughter said she wanted to go in a small circle.

Halfway around, she started gesturing and yelling. "She wants to go around again," said son. "She said it's too short." After twice around, she was still hollering but I took her in anyway.

Cruising toward the dock, I aimed the boat and took her in for a landing. My first thought was I must be getting too close. Everybody was jumping up and down and waving their arms in the air so I edged the boat a little further from the dock.

"I think it works out better if you slow down a little when you drop them off," said son tactfully as daughter released the rope at one end of the dock and skied right past before stopping.

Slowing down afterwards, I picked up the speed and whirled around just as son started to drag in the rope. "Slow down," he yelled clutching the seat to maintain his balance. "You can't get the rope in going 90 miles an hour." (How that boy exaggerates.)

Trying to dock the boat, I edged forward at low speed. Confused over instructions from everybody such as "speed up," "slow down," "put it out of gear," and "point it in the right direction," I didn't do too well.

Just when I thought I had it the wind crept up and we began to drift out to sea. About that time, the engine stopped and I knew we'd never get the thing started. (It needs to be babied like a little kid.)

In a moments inspiration, I tossed the ski rope to the dock and we were pulled along side.

"Mom," said daughter. "I said my shorts were wet, not that I wanted to keep going."

Worn out but with a sense of humor she added "My rubber elbows and wobbly chicken legs had just about had it."

"Who's next?" I hollered after husband finally got the motor started. "I'm ready for my solo trip."

They all agreed that it would be solo all right because they were all going back for lunch. (I had a funny feeling they were trying to get me back to my beach towel and book.)

The Stephens take root on their piece of the rock

by Ann Hagen
For Leann and Si Stephens, it's a whole new approach to life. The couple and their two children, Scotti Ann, 8 and Alan, 2, have pulled up their Federal Way stakes and moved to the tiny island of Lopez.

The island, accessible only by boat or plane is nestled among a group of islands that form San Juan County in the Strait of Juan de Fuca. It is approximately 40 minutes away from Anacortes by ferry.

Stephens who attended school in Federal Way through the eighth grade estimates the population at 800 in the winter and 1,200 in the summer.

"The people are close knit and interdependent on one another. There is a real sense of community," said Stephens noting the small-town lifestyle. "You probably know, on a first name basis, about 95 percent of the population."

The couple became well acquainted with the islands while helping Stephen's parents, Janet and Si Stephens Sr. of Federal Way's Buena, build their new home on San Juan Island.

Every weekend, during the summer, they spent their days pounding nails, roofing and sanding. They said they came to appreciate and enjoy the beauty and serenity of the semi-arid climate with the panoramic view. They agreed that "it was a perfect environment to raise a family."

WHEN STEPHENS SAW an opening that would permit him to earn a living up there, he grabbed it. While on a business trip for national firm Touche and Ross and Co, where he was employed as a CPA, he noticed an ad selling a privately-owned restaurant called the Galley.

Located near a protected harbor called Fisherman's Bay, the restaurant was one they had been to earlier and liked. It was well-known in the area for its 22-page menu that specialized in generous servings and variety in both food and price.

"I would have bought a hardware store, garage, anything to get up here," said Stephens enthusiastically. "I just wanted some way to earn a living."

Within a few months, the deal was finalized and the Stephens were comfortably situated in a small, but cozy two-bedroom home above the restaurant.

At first, both of them spent long days learning the business. Leann learned how to handle cooking (in case of an emergency), ordering, and food inventory and Stephens took over the bookwork and maintenance.

The staff varies from 12 in the winter to 25-30 in the summer. The restaurant seats 140 people and is open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. "or whenever the lounge clears out." "On weekends, we often turn away 40-50 people," said Leann. Much of their business is provided through neighboring islands that use their boats much as mainlanders use their cars, she said.

Leann said that she found ordering food from many different suppliers a constant challenge. "If you run out of something, you can't just call across town and have it delivered like you could in town. It has to be flown in or delivered by ferry."

T O M A K E TRANSPORTATION simpler, the Stephens purchased a part interest in a small commuter plane. They said they expect to make monthly jaunts to Seattle on business and pleasure.

Gradually, the employees are taking over more of the responsibility, allowing the Stephens time for themselves. The previous owner insisted on making all the decisions himself, said Stephens. "We want the employees to be more self-sufficient so that it can get along without us once in a while."

Now and then, usually during a Monday or Tuesday noon when business is slow, they take the children and escape to the beaches and coves. It gives them a chance to picnic, search for treasures or play a game of ball. In the evening they go to their favorite hide-a-way and watch the sunset.

Though boat traffic is down due to the gas shortage, Stephens said he is not worried about it yet. "We hope that more people will come and vacation on the islands and stay longer."

For themselves, the Stephens say they love it and they're ready to make it their home forever. They are a plane's ride away from their Federal Way friends, a short boat ride away from Victoria where they've often visited and involved in a small-town community. They've found their piece of the rock.

Unsung Heroes

Luella Hilby

Learning to swim may save your life

by Ann Hagen

When Luella Hilby took her three youngsters to Steel Lake in 1948 for their group swimming lessons, she said she wanted to help but she didn't know how.

"At that time, they used the mothers to help with the face float, back float, and dog paddle," said Luella who moved to Starlake with her family 25 years ago. "The Red Cross teachers needed all the help they could get."

Deathly afraid of the water, Luella said she was afraid to put her face under water, afraid of the mud and foliage near the bottom and afraid to dive.

But, she joined the group and had soon passed beginners and was on her way. Within one summer, she'd taken three sets of lessons and had passed her senior life saving badge.

Since then, Luella, generous with her time, has taught hundreds of children and adults how to swim through volunteer work and as a teacher with the Red Cross.

Eyes sparkling with mischief and enthusiasm, Luella said "I was so deathly scared of the water, it just tickles me to death when someone can get over that fear."

As soon as her neighbors, members of the Starlake Improvement Club, learned of her swimming skill, they asked her to teach their children to swim. "Naturally, being young, I volunteered," she said chuckling.

When 200 kids showed up, they not only learned to swim but also put on a watershow for the folks with a clown act and synchronized swimming. "We had a ball," she said.

FOR THE NEXT FIVE years, Luella taught as a volunteer for the Red Cross Swim Program. She taught in Federal Way, Kent, Auburn, anywhere a teacher was needed.

She eventually went on the Red Cross payroll and also worked as an instructor for the Seattle YWCA after finishing her Water Safety Instruction (WSI) program.

Through the years, Luella's waterfront home near 272nd and 33rd Pl. S. has continued to be a haven for children and adults who are eager to learn more about water fun.

She has taught church groups, scouts and campfire girls, "anybody that's down in the water and willing."

Also an avid canoeist, Luella allows a nearby Boy Scout troop to park their canoe in her front yard for easy access to the water. "The boys come over with their lunch, life jackets and paddles and when I have time, I give them a little extra help."

Luella was involved as a canoe instructor for the Seattle Park Department for a year and was also involved in the American Canoe Association for two years.

On Sunday evenings, one can probably find Luella with her Sunday school youth class either canoeing, swimming or feeding the ducks. In her third year as teacher, she said the kids love it. "It also gives them a chance to learn more about nature."

Why has she stressed the importance of swimming and done everything she could to help others learn? Because, "Most drownings occur from panic. Just understanding the basic elements may someday save your life."

FW crime report:

Burglars busy; 2 assaults reported

The burglars who apparently took a few days off early last week were back with a vengeance on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, King County Police records at the 3rd Precinct showed.

Only two incidents of burglary were reported between Sunday and Wednesday morning, and officers said unofficially that the figure probably represented the lowest burglary total in many years.

But eight cases, two of them of commercial establishments and the remainder of residences, were reported during the latter part of the week.

None of the individual losses equaled or exceeded $500. But a larceny — there were nine reported during the period — at a 13th Place South residence resulted in an $800 loss.

The stolen item, a ring, was taken sometime between Saturday and Thursday.

A TEENAGER who rides an unlicensed yellow dirt bike is being sought by detectives after he attempted to run down a Federal Way man on a private road near Military Road South on Thursday morning.

The victim told police that he attempted to stop the teen and ask him not to trespass on the road. But the teen sped up and veered into the man, severely bruising his forearm.

Officers have classified the case as a suspected assault with a deadly weapon.

Police said the man is accused of brandishing a .22-caliber revolver at a Federal Way man and his companion, an Auburn woman, in a dispute over the woman's clothes.

The woman told police she had come to the residence to obtain clothing that belonged to her and her girlfriend.

Officers said the family that lives in the house has been harassed recently by a band of local children, and that two of the children were apparently involved in the egg-throwing.

The incident, in which the house was toilet-papered, occurred Thursday.

Three other acts of vandalism were reported, all of them involving rocks hurled through residential windows.

Gasleak causes blaze

The second fire in a week in the Twin Lakes area caused about a $50,000 loss for Lewis G. DesPain whose home burnt Thursday evening.

The fire in the DesPain home, 2715 S.W. 322nd St., was contained to the garage, but loss of materials stored in the garage and smoke damage to the main part of the home caused most of the damage, according to the Federal Way Fire Department.

The blaze began in a corner of the double garage when gas leaked from a lawn mower and the resulting fumes were ignited by a nearby furnace pilot light, Assistant Chief Bob Hash said.

No injuries were reported. Three engines, an aid car and the Medic unit responded to the fire, which was under control in about four minutes.

This is the second time in a week that a house was damaged by fire in the Twin Lakes area. The previous Friday the home rented by Merrigon Sommerville and her four children was heavily damaged in an early-morning blaze.

VANDALS OF 12 to 14 years of age hurled eggs into the open bedroom window of a house on Southwest 335th Court and then smeared the structure with shaving cream and mustard, police reported.

A FEDERAL Way man was booked at King County Jail on suspicion of assault Thursday night after an incident at the man's Second Avenue Southwest residence.

Mesick receives honor

AS A CADET at the United States Military Academy, Lt. Gary L. Mesick Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary L. Mesick of 29728 Third Ave. S., was presented the academy's Thomas D. Thompson Jr. memorial award. The award, which includes a wrist watch, is given to the graduating cadet who most distinguishes himself in writing literary papers. Lt. Mesick, who graduated from the academy in June, is a 1975 graduate of Decatur High School. He is now at Fort Benning, Ga., where he is completing airborne school, to be followed by infantry training. He will be stationed at Fort Lewis in November.

Get ready now for kindergarten

Parents who have children starting kindergarten this fall will want to start getting ready now, Margaret Movius, King County Extension agent, advises.

Closer to the time school begins, parents may want to get their youngsters used to daily routines and schedules, since this is also a part of going to school.

Don't wait until the first day of school, Ms. Movius says. For instance, preschoolers need to be ready to meet new children, to share toys and the teacher's attention. Some children are already prepared, but if children have not had much experience playing with other children, adjustment to school may be harder.

Movius points out that the most important part of getting ready for school probably has already taken place. That is the relationship within the family. A close-knit, loving family allows a child to try new things, make a few mistakes and try again.

Some nursery schools or day camps are open during the summer. For children who have not had this experience, parents might want to enroll them in a day camp that meets parents' standards.

Take time this summer to talk about school, to tell them what it is like and to find out what they are worried about. Stress their exciting opportunity to learn new things.

Or, find out the names of other pre-kindergarteners going to the same school and plan group outings, with their parents' help. Try an afternoon at the park, a get-together in someone's back yard or a trip to the zoo.

Cut-rate mechanics playing with dynamite

by Ann Hagen
Last spring, a couple in Eastern Washington, straddling their motorcycle thought nothing of carrying an extra gallon of gasoline in their saddlebags.

Unaware of the danger, they were well on their way toward their destination when either the heat of the sun or the exhaust caused the gasoline to explode. They both landed in the hospital with serious third degree burns.

According to reports from fire district officials, more and more people are devising ways to add tanks to their automobiles, homes or yards, either officially or unofficially. "We know they are out there by the thousands," said Bob Hash, deputy chief of Federal Way Fire District 39, in reference to those installing unsafe tanks in vehicles. "We only hope and pray that they don't get it and take someone else with them."

Hash said that people underestimate the danger of gasoline.

They become familiar with it and forget that a gallon of gas can have the same results as a dozen sticks of dynamite. "All it takes is a spark and you've got a bomb," said Hash.

Several welders, caught up in handling ever increasing demands for adding tanks to vans, pickups and motor-homes, during the last three months said backyard mechanics have little knowledge of current federal regulations and state standards.

John Kay, owner of Tork Lift Central

Welding of Kent said that the professionals are bound by requirements that insist on proper venting, and heavy steel tanks. "Even though a person may know what they're doing, they may not have the proper equipment for the job," said Kay who is installing four tanks per day, an increase of 100 percent over the past three months. "They may be braising with an acetylene torch when they should be arc welding for strength."

Other people, he said, place fill necks near open flames such as by a butane pilot light on a motor home or camper. "It creates a potentially hazardous situation," he said.

Kay said that most tanks range between 18 and 45 gallons and are safe if installed properly.

Most of their work is done on heavy duty vehicles rather than cars since they require less pollution controls.

In business at Bob's Welding on 20835 Pacific Highway S., owner Robert Nystrom said he's been adding auxiliary tanks to trucks, sometimes up to 10 a day.

Not interested in working on cars, he said station wagons would really be a problem. With a tank in the rear, they'd be more explosive than a Pinto, he said.

Personal growth class offered

Green River Community College will offer a three credit course entitled "Personal Growth in a Changing World" beginning Aug. 1 and running through Aug. 29. The series of five Wednesday workshops will deal with topics such as assertiveness, values clarification, decision making and goal setting, and vocational exploration. Class meets from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in OE 21.

Preregister at the college from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, or 6 to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Cost of the course is $30.60.

For further information, call the Counseling Department at GRCC, 833-9111 (from Auburn, Kent, Enumclaw), 464-6133 (from Seattle, Renton, Maple Valley), or 924-0180 (from Tacoma), extension 304.

Bus ridership climbs with fuel prices

As fuel prices climbed and gasoline lines stretched for blocks during June, King County residents turned to public transit at the fastest rate so far this year.

More than 4.7 million passengers rode the bus last month, pushing Metro's rate of ridership growth to 18.4 percent over June 1978, according to an agency spokesman.

Reportedly, Metro normally experiences about a 10-percent annual rider increase, but monthly growth figures have consistently exceeded that rate since February.

Metro's records show that suburban ridership, based on a smaller base of total riders, grew even faster during June. The suburban growth rate hit 46 percent over June 1978, with more than 975,000 passengers riding the bus.

Kirkland Mayor Bob Neir, chairman of the Metro Council's Transit Committee, was said to be encouraged by the fast growth in suburban transit use.

Metro's plans had called for a "massive" increase in bus service in county areas in September and the rest of the year. Nair said that the continuing fast growth of suburban transit use confirmed the council's decision to budget for the new service.

Merit Changes Smoking.

'Enriched Flavor'™ cigarette sparks whole new taste era in low tar smoking.

Not too long ago, smokers believed that if a cigarette had less tar, it had less taste too. Low tar cigarettes simply didn't taste very good.

Then along came MERIT and a whole new taste idea called 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And in three short years, smoking changed:

1. No other new cigarette in the last 20 years has attracted so many smokers as quickly as MERIT!
2. MERIT has swept past over 50 other brands in record time.
3. MERIT is continuing to attract high tar smokers—the most taste-conscious smokers of all!

It's clear: MERIT taste is changing attitudes toward low tar smoking.

Grass Roots Gardening

by Ginna Koontz

Known to the Chinese more than 2,000 years ago, chrysanthemums are favored by many nationalities. Prior to 400 AD chrysanthemums reached Japan by way of Korea, then these perennial favorites were further developed in France and England during the 18th century and in 1798 the first chrysanthemums were delivered to American shores at Hoboken, N.J.

It's amazing how many blooms are produced from a tiny mum slip set out in spring. Most gardeners depend on spray or garden decorative and cushion mums for the autumn show but there are also many avid hobby mum growers who specialize in specific forms and varieties.

Exhibition types are varieties which, when the side buds are removed (called disbudding) produce huge globular flowers generally described as football mums.

Early English is a composite group with flowers that may attain the size of exhibition mums when plants are similarly trained and disbudded. Japanese varieties are ones selected by Japanese gardeners and noted for the great variety in flower forms. Among the Japanese types are some unusual shaggy varieties described as spider and brush. There are also single varieties having one single row of petals.

Button or pompom types have rather flattened small, one- to four-inch diameter blooms. Spoon types have petals with tips like spoons. The base of each petal forming the handle. Anemone mums have dominant centers like rounded shaggy pin cushions.

Chrysanthemums must be planted in full sun, spaced one to one and a half feet apart. They grow well in a wide range of soils but it is wise to enrich the bed with large amounts of rotted manure or compost. Chrysanthemums are one of the few plants that do not object to transplanting at any stage of growth allowing gardeners to locate them for seasonal displays. They are ideal container plants and also used in rock gardens, for edging and borders and in beds for huge mass displays.

In July growth generally slows down and the stems may be hard and leaves turn yellow announcing it is time to fertilize. In mid-July spread dry fertilizer, 5-10-5, three and one-half pounds per hundred feet. Lightly cultivate into soil and water well to dissolve. In mid-August fertilize again with liquid or water soluble fertilizer applied as a foliar spray. Drive stakes into the center of each clump and tie plant limbs to stakes with soft cord or old nylons. Water the plants deeply as needed during the growing season.

If many flowers are desired you should have been pinching back by nipping out the tips of each main stem just above top part of leaves. Now, cease pinching and allow buds to set and grow. For fewer but larger flowers leave only the top bud on the tip of each stem nipping out the side buds with thumb and index finger. Do not remove leaves as they are the food factories needed by the plant.

Although mums are easy to grow and fare exceptionally well in this locale they may have some disease and insect enemies. With the best of care botrytis rot causes soggy brown flowers created by a gray and woolly spore. Control with Zineb.

Verticillium wilt is caused by a soil fungus that turns leaf margins yellow and even wilts the affected plant. Do not plant mums in the area again until soil is sterilized and even then purchase varieties labeled verticillium wilt resistant.

Mosaic, which stunts and plants and deforms buds is transmitted by aphids. Use Malathion or Orthene to control aphids.

There is no cure for any of these diseases and it is wise to destroy diseased plants rather than infect all plants.

Other than aphids, leafhoppers carry aster yellow virus and a disease called stunt.

Diazan spray or dust is effective if consistently applied over several weeks. Read and carefully follow label directions for application.

You may wish to construct a canopy of polyethylene over the mums to protect from autumn wind and rain. In this way, it is possible to have cut blooms up until Christmas time if it does not frost.

Mums bloom late when days are short and temperatures warm. To speed up flowering shade the plants with black cloth. Cover the plants at 5 p.m. each evening and remove at 8 a.m. each morning until the buds show color. A general rule of thumb is to commence shading plants about eight weeks before you want them to flower.

In late September and all through October there are numerous Mum Shows where gardeners may view and exclaim over the autumn queen of flowers. Attending these shows has the plus of allowing gardeners to order the mums of their choice at the show to be delivered next year for planting of new and unusual varieties to create their own mum show.

Concert at Redondo

TIM AND DEETTA Frandsen will present a musical program Wednesday, Aug. 1 at 7:30 p.m. at the Redondo Community Church (Lutheran Brethren), 27908 10th Ave. S. Both have degrees in music from Dickinson State College, Dickinson, N.D. Their program consists of traditional and contemporary songs with Scripture sharing, personal testimony and a children's time with which their children, Thannea and Paeter, assist. The concert is free, but Rev. Torgier Haugland, pastor, said a special offering will be taken.

Pioneer Bible Church meets at Elks Club

Pioneer Bible Church Sunday services for July 29 are at the Federal Way Elks Club, 31405 18th Ave. S., and include Sunday School at 9:45 a.m. and the morning service at 11 a.m., with the evening service at 6 p.m. Pastor Erv Estruth, a graduate of Dallas Seminary will speak at both services.

During the Sunday school hour, Calvin Carr will lead the adult class in a study of Philippians. A new class for high school and college age youths is forming under the leadership of George Taylor.

Pastor Estruth's sermon at the 11 a.m. service will be, "The Christian's Defense Against Satan's Devices." Special music will be provided by Barry Hockett, recent graduate of Federal Way High, who will play a french horn solo.

The informal evening service at 6 p.m.

will feature music, singing, testimonies and a sermon by the pastor entitled, "The Social Obligations of Christians," taken from Hebrews chapter 13.

Plans are taking shape for a youth music festival to be held Sunday, Aug. 19. Under the guidance of George Taylor, a group of teenagers are preparing and practicing for an evening of music including contemporary composers in both secular and sacred terested in par- Wednesday evening fields. Both in- ticipating may call mid-week service strumental and vocal Barry Hockett at 839- meets at 7:30 p.m. at music will be 9053 for more in- the home of the featured. Youths in- formation. pastor.

Nine Lakes to hold youth-led revival

Nine Lakes Baptist Church is holding Youth-led Revival Meetings July 29 to Aug. 3.

A team of three young people will be leading the services for the week. They are Thomas Smith from Edmond, Alberta, who will be bringing the messages for the services. Larry Smith from Waco, Tex. will be in charge of music and Elaine Hext from Aloha, Ore. is the accompanist and fellowship director.

The services on Tuesday will begin at 11 a.m. and again at 7 p.m. The week day services will begin at 7:30 p.m. Special emphasis are planned for the evening services and special music will be presented. The public is invited and nursery service will be provided.

Lutheran school to register

John Rittnerodt was recently installed as principal and upper grade teacher for Holy Trinity Lutheran School. The school is temporarily located in the basement of the church.

Openings for the 1979-80 school year in grades K-8 are available. Registration will be on July 30 and 31 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Information concerning the school is available by calling 839-6516.

In the school the Word of God is taught daily and every subject is taught in the light of Scripture. The church is located at 2021 S. 260th St.

Drama depicts Mormons migration

"Promised Valley," a musical drama depicting the exodus of the Mormon pioneers from Illinois to Utah, will be presented Friday and Saturday, Aug. 3 and 4, at 7:30 p.m. in Puyallup.

Even though the production is being put on by the Federal Way Stake and features singers and actors and actresses from Federal Way, Auburn, Enumclaw, and Buckley, the musical will be staged at the Puyallup Stake Center in Sumner because it is larger than any of the church cultural halls in the Federal Way Stake.

"Promised Valley" is the vivid portrayal of the hardships and happy times encountered by some of the first companies of pioneers to search of a new homeland. Motivated only by an abiding trust in their leader, Brigham Young, and visions of green, fertile valleys where they could live peacefully, these fledgling families blazed a trail of historical legend which helped to build the west.

Jedediah Cutler, a young man given responsibilities far greater than his age or experience warrants, is played by John Kingston of Tacoma.

His wife, Celia, expecting their first child but afraid to burden Jed with an additional worry, is played by Kelly Overson of Federal Way.

The play centers on this young couple and their struggle to meet the challenges of their new frontier life. The struggle is compounded when a U.S. Army major, played by Jim Roach of Black Diamond, arrives just as they are about to leave, recruiting for volunteers to march to Mexico.

MRS. LANA BUSHMAN and her daughters, Tricia and Carrie, are participating in the musical drama, "Promised Valley" which depicts the exodus of Mormon pioneers from Illinois to Utah. Although most of the cast are from Federal Way the musical will be presented at the Puyallup Stake Center at Meade-Macomber Road and Valley Ave. in Sumner Friday and Saturday, Aug. 3 and 4 at 7:30 p.m.

Jed and his "hundred" are asked to go along with many others by Brigham Young. They become known as the Mormon Battalion and march from Winter Quarters, Neb., to San Diego, Calif. The war is over by the time they arrive, so they make the long trek back to the Salt Lake Valley.

After seeing the barren deserts of Utah, Jed wants to move on to California and the lush green fields he saw there. He is unable to convince Celia and the others who feel that this is their "Promised Valley."

The Puyallup Stake Center is at Meade-Macomber Road and Valley Avenue in Sumner.

County explains tax relief plan

Residential property tax payers in King County will begin receiving letters from the county assessor this week telling them of potential tax exemptions if they are senior citizens or disabled. Assessor Harley Hoppe said his office would mail to all residences because there was no other way to guarantee that the specific group of eligible taxpayers would be reached. He said there is really no way to determine from looking at assessment charts which taxpayers are disabled.

Hoppe said there are about 47,000 senior citizens and an unestimable number of disabled property owners in the county who could qualify for the tax relief approved by the state legislature during the recent session. Fewer than 600 of those newly qualified persons have sought the relief, he said.

The mailing will explain the new tax exemptions that include a $15,000 assessed value exemption for low income elderly from all regular taxes and from voter-approved levies.

Those in the $7,000 to $11,000 income level and retired or disabiled could be eligible for an exemption from all voter-approved levies. Listed in the mailing as an example of the possible savings is a $32,400 house owned by a senior citizen with an income below $7,000. The 1979 tax bill would be $339.91 but, with exemptions, the tax bill for the coming year would be only $182.70 or a savings of $157.21.

There are also tax exemptions that persons in other age and economic groups might qualify for, Hoppe said. If a tax payer has suffered the loss of property through fire, demolition or other ways, he might receive property tax relief if it is sought within 75 days of the loss.

Home improvements also might qualify a homeowner for tax relief for the value of the actual improvements if the taxpayer applies for the exemption before the project is started.

Federal Way loses two art festivals

by Barbara Butts

Federal Way is not yet artless, but the disbanding of two of its arts festival sponsors has dealt the art life in this community a blow.

Federal Way seems destined to be without a major arts festival this year.

The Federal Way Library Arts Commission, which has sponsored one of the festivals for seven years, will no longer organize the event, said Candy Hatcher, former president of the commission.

And according to Bill David, executive director of the Federal Way Chamber of Commerce, the Federal Way Festival Committee, could not be reached for comment.

But Mrs. Hatcher spelled out readily what caused the unofficial disbanding of the Library Arts Commission and its arts and crafts festival.

"A core of about eight people worked and toiled for seven years on that festival, and nobody else would lift a finger to help of the festivals.

Lloyd Gibson, one of the major figures in the Federal Way Festival Committee, is on vacation and could not be reached for comment.

But Mrs. Hatcher spelled out readily what caused the unofficial disbanding of the Library Arts Commission and its arts and crafts festival.

"A core of about eight people worked and toiled for seven years on that festival, and nobody else would lift a finger to help us," she said. "For those eight it was almost a full-time job from January to July."

The festival originally was organized to raise money for the library. As a fundraiser, it was a flop, Mrs. Hatcher said.

"But it was a neat idea, and it caught on with the group that was doing it," she said. "And it provided an avenue to bring arts to the community."

The problem was not one of membership, she said. At its peak, the organization consisted of about 200 individuals and businesses.

"But we weren't getting volunteers — physical volunteers — to help with the work," she said.

In addition, according to Mrs. Hatcher, the facility that had been provided with no charge in the past, Sacajawea Junior High School, several years ago started costing the festival sponsors.

"With little profit to show for our efforts and without a cause, such as the one that pulled us together in 1975 — the burning of the library — we lost our spirit," she said.

And when Mrs. Hatcher and two other active members in the group moved from the area last year, there was no new blood to take over, she said.

The festival was a valuable asset to the community, she added, and the loss to the area is a great one.

"Anyone who is interested in re-establishing the arts festival will get full cooperation from all of us," she said.

Mrs. Hatcher can be reached at 772-4436, a Seattle number.

Contest scheduled for young clowns

The Seattle Seafair Clowns will open their summer activities with a program for children and adults at 1 p.m. on Friday, July 27, at the Seattle Center Mural Amphitheater.

A children's clown contest and a parade will be among the highlights of the event.

Children are invited to enter the clown contest in three age groups: 6 years and under, 7 to 10 years and 11 to 14 years. Prizes will be awarded for best clown makeup, costume and act or skit in each group.

During Seafair, July 21 to Aug. 5, the clowns will participate in all the parades and in many events and will distribute thousands of balloons, hundreds and pieces of candy.

Organized in 1955, the Seafair Clowns are composed of 65 volunteer business and professional people who entertain throughout the year and throughout the Puget Sound area as well as at Seafair.

Call Brad Bodley at 682-5250 in Seattle for further information.

advertising correction

On page 6 of Sears Circular inserted in today's newspaper, we have advertised our #29815 Craftsman 10" Table Saw Outfit. A printing error in the copy states the outfit comes with two formed-steel extensions. The correct number of formed-steel extensions is One. We sincerely regret this error and any inconvenience we have caused our valued customers.

DON HALL, Federal Way's center fielder, charges to make this first-inning catch of a looper during the opening round of the State Pony League Baseball Tournament. Federal Way beat Dick's Heating of Pierce County, 10-6, in the first round, but lost a 9-5 decision to the Burien A's in round two. Federal Way's tournament finish will be printed in Wednesday's sports section.

Big Red Machine splits state openers

by Harry Brooks
The Big Red Machine churned out 21 hits at the State Pony League Tournament Thursday but came away with just a split of two games.

The Federal Way Boys' and Girls' Club sponsored team, which wears red as its basic color, zoomed over Dick's Heating, the Pierce County League champ, by a 10-6 count in the opening round, but the Burien Athletics dumped Federal Way in the losers' bracket by beating the locals 9-5 in the second round.

The Feds continued state tourney play Friday and yesterday. A loss in any of those games would have dropped them out of the double-elimination event. However, FW skipper Lee Eilertson expressed confidence that his team could battle its way to championship contention "the hard way." The tourney finals begin today at noon at Russell Road Park in Kent.

Dale Pac provided Federal Way's attack with a wicked bat during Thursday's action.

The husky third baseman pounded a triple, a double and two singles in four trips to the plate against Dick's Heating. He knocked in five runs and scored twice during that contest.

Eilertson praised the performance of all his hitters, and he had good reason for doing so. The Feds came out lashing the horsehide right from the start.

Don Hall's double and Pac's single fueled a four-run second inning that gave Federal Way a 4-0 edge over Dick's. After watching their lead close to a single run in the top of the third, the Feds rebounded with three scores in their half of the frame. The locals sandwiched Pac's double between singles by Mark Roberts, Hall, Wayne Lewis and Todd McDonald to produce the run trio.

Dick's Heating burned in four runs — using a triple, two doubles and a single — to cut its deficit to 7-6 in the top of the fourth stanza, but Federal Way hurlers Jason Dutt and Jerry Ruberson combined to stop any further threats.

MEANWHILE, the Feds pulled away with two runs in the home fourth and a singleton in the sixth. Pac poked a two-run three-bagger in the fourth and drove in Clay Marrs, who had opened the sixth with a base hit, by notching his fourth base rap of the game.

After the 2 1/2-hour struggle with Dick's Heating, Federal Way immediately ran into the Athletics, a team that would have to be considered the tourney favorite by Thursday's showing.

Federal Way posted a 3-2 lead after four complete innings, but the Burien A's erupted with seven runs on seven hits and three walks in the fifth. The Feds only countered with two runs the rest of the way as Burien's six-foot, stylish pitcher Bob Weisser subdued the FW bats.

"I was pleased with the way we hit off him, he is definitely the best pitcher we've seen all season."

Burien greeted Federal Way starting hurler Scott Eilertson by popping three hits, the FW runner slid in the top of the first. But the Feds captured a 2-1 edge during its first at-bat.

Eilertson hit a one-out single and moved around to third when Burien third baseman Craig Carlson made a throwing error on Dutt's ground ball. Pac drove in both teammates with his second two-run triple of the tournament.

BURIEN used a walk, a stolen base, a dropped third strike and Pat Flynn's sacrifice bunt to score the tying run in the second.

Again, Federal Way retaliated. Marrs and Pac opened the FW fourth with free passes off Weisser. They advanced on Chuck Woods' hopper to first. Mark Roberts followed by dribbling a bunt toward the mound. Weisser charged for a play on Marrs at the plate, but home safely with the go-ahead run.

The Federal Way lead and chance of victory disintegrated in the fifth as Burien sent 11 hitters to the plate during its seventh-inning rally.

Although the Feds banged seven hits during the next three stanzas, they mustered a non-threatening two runs. Singles by Eilertson and Marrs accounted for a score in the fifth. Marrs' seventh-inning triple brought home Dutt, who had singled, and closed the game's scoring in the seventh.

Other results of Thursday's tourney games were: Burien Athletics 5, SCAA (Tacoma) 4; Medics (Puyallup) 4, Burien Astros 3; Fairwood Greens (Kent) 6, mound. Weisser's (Redmond) 1; Fairwood Greens 12, Medics 6.

Kene Bensel wins two tourneys

by Bart Potter
Kene Bensel, a relative unknown in these parts, has jumped into the headlines recently with back-to-back tournament golf wins. But he's no stranger to the leader board.

Bensel, assistant professional at North Shores Golf and Country Club, last weekend claimed the $950 first prize in the 21st Northwest Assistant Professionals' Championship at Olympia Country Club. The week before he earned $1,250 for winning the Lilac City Open in Spokane, his hometown.

Bensel estimates he has won more than 70 tournaments, pro and amateur, in his competitive career. He has been assistant to Jim Bourne at North Shores for five months.

The win in the assistant pro tourney, achieved on the third playoff hole after he and Twin Lakes' Randy Jensen tied at 140 for 36 holes, earned Bensel a trip to Brockton, Mass., for the National Assistant Professionals' Tournament at Thorny Lea Golf Club Sept. 19, 20 and 21.

He also teamed with Jensen, Gordy Hepp and Don Mojean to win zone match play against four-somes from Oregon and British Columbia.

His victory at Lilac City made him only the fourth golfer to win the event twice.

Bensel possesses obvious skills on the links, which is attested to by his win total. But an intangible quality, he says, will mean more wins down the road. The quality is experience.

He used the playoff win over local rival Jensen, the state assistant pro champ, as an example.

"I've developed my own philosophy about how you should be thinking in a playoff," the 31-year old Bensel said. "I think it helped me. "Every tournament you play in, if you have the proper attitude, you learn something from it."

Kene Bensel

Bensel said when he was younger, it was a nervous experience when he found himself leading a tournament. Now, that is exactly where he wants to be right from the start, because he knows how to handle the pressure.

"Experience is the thing that will win for you," he said.

Bensel first picked up a golf club at age 10. He was a member of the golf team at North Central High School in Spokane, but at the time he was more interested in wrestling. He lettered in wrestling four years at North Central.

He turned out for the mat team at Eastern Washington University in his freshman year following his 1965 graduation from North Central, but he found the long practice hours were not paying off as well as he would have liked. Injuries also played a part in his decision to give up the sport.

"I was starting to get cauliflower ears," he recalled.

He envisioned a future in golf, however, and made the Eastern team. In 1968 he joined the Air Force, and eventually qualified for the Force team while stationed in Columbus, Ohio.

While still in the service, he finished up his education at Ohio State University and managed to keep up with his golf game well enough to be high point amateur in the Columbus Golf Association.

A record Bensel is proud of is his 13 amateur titles in 13 states. That is important, he said, because he overcame the tendency of many young golfers to fold when facing unfamiliar courses and opponents.

One tournament he recalls with particular relish is the 1970 Deep South Four Ball Tournament in Alexandria, La. He and his partner won the medalist trophy on the strength of Bensel's seven birdies on the last seven holes of the final round.

"I'll always remember that round," he said.

While playing for the Air Force team, he realized the potential for making money at golf. And yes, he did dream of the big money to be had on the Professional Golf Association tour.

"If I hadn't been married," he said, "I'd probably be out there right now trying to make it on the tour."

He does occasionally participate in Mini-tour events in Phoenix, Ariz., and he hopes to someday qualify for such tournaments as the U.S. Open, the PGA Championships and the Bing Crosby Open. But he does not foresee the day when he goes at it on a full-time basis.

As tuneups for the national assistants event, Bensel will play in the Northwest Open Aug. 18-22, and the Oregon Open Sept. 9-11.

At Brockton, he will be facing champions from 39 other sections of the country in quest of the $4,000 top money. He is going back there with the same attitude that has meant much success in the past. "Whenever I tee up, I intend to win the golf tournament."

KENE BENSEL, assistant pro at North Shore Northwest Assistant Professionals Championship Golf and Country Club, demonstrates his sand and the Lilac City Open back-to-back. He will trap technique recently at the course. Bensel has travel to Brockton, Mass. in September for the avoided the traps well enough of late to win the national assistant pro tournament.

Highline East nabs second in little league playoffs

For the second straight year, the Southwest Little League All-Stars captured the District 7 Championship. And this year the Highline East All-Stars were the victims of the Southwest onslaught.

Led by the strong pitching performance of Chip Winston and backed up by some fine defensive plays, the Southwest All-Stars defeated the Highline East All-Stars 5-0 in the championship game held last Tuesday at the Highline East Field.

It was the fourth tournament win without a loss for Southwest and they now advance to the state tournament scheduled for Walla Walla next Thursday. They will meet the winner of the District 3 District 5 confrontation in a 6 p.m. contest. Last year, Southwest placed fifth in the 10 team tournament held at Port Orchard.

According to Highline East coach Ken Bannister, the club just wasn't able to get untracked against the pitching of Winston.

"Taking nothing away from their pitcher," Bannister said, "but we just could not get use to his slow pitches. Anyone of our first four batters can park the ball for us, but they didn't do anything for us against Winston. But I guess it just wasn't meant to be tonight."

Southwest picked up what proved to be the winning run in the initial frame as Blake Fulton got aboard on shortstop Kirt Elzner's error and preceded to steal both second and third before finally coming in to score on a Brian Voelker single.

Southwest maintained their one-run lead until the fifth inning when they exploded for three runs on three hits, with the big blow being Scott Culbert's two-run double to right field.

Paul Boyer plated the final run of the game for Southwest with a single to center scoring Tim Eaton, who had walked to lead off the inning.

The excellent defense and timely hitting by Southwest overshadowed an otherwise outstanding pitching performance by Highline East pitcher Pat Hoefs. Hoefs went the distance for Highline East striking out 12

Southwest batters while issuing only five walks and allowing five hits. In both the second and fourth innings, Hoefs retired the side on strikeouts.

Hoefs' five-hit display was bettered by Winston, who allowed only three safeties while walking six. Collecting the three hits for Highline East were second baseman Ian Zentner, catcher Troy Rusk and third baseman Armond Swanson.

HIGHLINE EAST ALL-STAR third baseman Armond Swanson takes a late throw from pitcher Pat Hoefs in an attempt to get a Southwest player, advancing from second, following a ground out to the pitcher. Southwest went on to win the game and claim the District 7 title for the second year in a row. They now advance to the state tournament being held in Walla Walla this coming weekend.

Trout-catch limit may be reduced

The Washington Department of Game is considering reducing the daily catch limit for trout on Washington waters. The present limit of a 12 trout daily catch and in possession has been in effect since 1961. Since that time, the number of licensed fishermen has increased from 369,783 in 1961 to 524,234 in 1977.

The primary thrust of reduced catch and possession limits would be to extend the fishery over a longer period of time and to reduce harvest of native fish populations. The following are alternative limits being considered. Public input to the Department of Game is encouraged.

Comments should be directed to the Department of Game, Fisheries Management Division, 600 N. Capitol Way, Olympia, Wash. 98504 before Aug. 13. The limit reduction proposal will be considered at the Game Commission meeting on Aug. 27 and 28 at the Nordic Inn in Aberdeen.

The alternatives are:

(1) No Change — The present limits of 12 trout or six pounds and one fish daily catch and possession would be retained. Growing angler pressures will continue to cause an extremely rapid fish-out of some waters. Fisheries dependent on native populations would have to be protected on a case-by-case basis.

(2) Daily catch of 10 trout - Possession limit of 10 trout — This reduction would slow the rapid harvest in some waters but overall would not extend sports fisheries a significant amount. Fisheries dependent on native populations would probably still need special limits if stocks declined.

(3) Daily catch limit - eight trout: possession limit of 12 trout — This alternative would probably slow harvest in both metropolitan and all rural fisheries. Possession limits would remain as they are now, thus rapid harvest would continue in lakes where there is significant overnight camping.

(4) Daily catch - fisheries and protection of native populations. However, in the view of the current most restrictive alternative, this limit might be too restrictive and would have the greatest benefit in extending native population centers.

33-pound catch wins Dugout Fishing Derby

He didn't want it to happen that way, but Warren Bonus won his own fishing derby last weekend.

Bonus, owner of the Dugout Tavern in Des Moines, reeled in a 33-pound, four-ounce King salmon to win the Seventh Annual Dugout Fishing Derby at Westport.

"I'm just happy to have the fish," Bonus explained. "I was hoping someone else would come in with a bigger one."

Local entrants numbered 49 in the two-day event. In addition to Bonus' prize for the biggest in the derby, five other fisherpersons came home with prizes. Bonus said he battled the King for "a good half hour" before landing it. The fish is the second biggest ever caught in the Dugout Derby.

In addition, the 33-pounder is the biggest caught this season on Deep Seas Charters, which earned Bonus a plaque from the company. It is the third biggest King so far this season at Westport, which will earn Bonus $500 if the mark stands up.

Saturday winners aboard the Char Dan, a local boat skippered by Dan Gorham of Des Moines, were Leroy Knutson, first fish; Warren Bonus, biggest; and most fish, Knutson.

Sunday winners aboard the Lucky Lid, skippered by Skip Young, were Knutson, first fish; Bernice Snyder, biggest; and Bob Mullen, most fish. Sunday winners aboard the Char Dan were Phillip Bonus, first fish, and Mary Butler, biggest fish and most fish.

Mrs. Butler caught six fish for the weekend to take the overall prize for most fish.

Burien Legion stops KR to close in on playoffs

by Bart Potter
 Kerry Boatwright pitched a four-hitter and knocked in the winning run Thursday as the Burien American Legion baseball team scored an important 3-2 win over Thousand Trails in eight innings.
 According to Burien coach Lou Bomber, the Kent Memorial Field crowd got its money's worth.
 "The fans got a lot of entertainment out of this one," he said.
 The win upped the Burienites District 11 record to 11-7, a game behind second place Federal Way in the Southern Division. Thousand Trails fell to 9-9.
 The locals are now in good position to claim the third Southern Division playoff spot, which will mean they will meet the third place team from the Northern Division in a single-elimination test.
 Burien faced Georgia Pacific of the Northern Division Friday (results unavailable at press time). Today at 6 p.m. Burien faces Foster Marshall at Hidden Valley Field in Bellevue, and Tuesday the Legions will close the regular season with a 6 p.m. contest against Renton at Liberty Park.

BOATWRIGHT struck out seven, throwing only 96 pitches in the extra-inning tilt, to record his sixth win against two losses. At the plate he went 3-4, including the single that sent Jerry Stuns home with the decisive run in the eighth.
 Burien threatened every inning, but could punch single runs home only in the third and fourth innings. The locals stranded 11 runners on base. Three times Burien runners attempted to score from second base on base hits were nailed at the plate.
 In the third, Kelly Sutton singled with one out. Successful walks by Mark Westbrook and Dale Fite loaded the bases. Allen Johnson smashed

 Keith Gettis led off the fourth with a single. Stuns hit an infield grounder, and Gettis wound up on third on the misplay. Boatwright picked up the first of his two runs-batted-in with a squeeze bunt.
 Kentridge had scored a single run in the first on a walk, hit and run, and sacrifice fly, and another in the fifth when a bobble while tracking a Trails runner in a rundown resulted in a run scored from third.
 Stuns opened the Burien eighth with a grounder up the middle that was booted by the second baseman. Dennis Fite followed with a sacrifice bunt to put Stuns in position to cross the plate with the winner.
 In the bottom of the eighth, Boatwright surrendered a leadoff walk, then struck out a batter. A sacrifice bunt moved the runner into scoring position.

tion, but Boatwright settled the matter by striking out the next batter on three pitches.
 Dale Fite was 2-2 and Johnson 3-4 to pace Burien's hitters, along with Boatwright. Bomber credited Stuns with a good defensive job in center field.
 The coach gave credit to his young team in coming as far as they have.
 "We don't have much depth, which means we don't have too many options," he said. "But the kids are doing a wonderful job."

KC beach usage increases 70%

Attendance at King County's nine parks with swimming beaches has increased by almost 70 percent over the same period last year.
 An estimated 154,000 persons have attended the county beach parks from June 16 to July 14 this year, compared with some 90,000 last year.
 The nine parks are at Angle Lake, Steel Lake, Five Mile Lake, Lake Meridian, Lake Wilderness, Luther Burbank, Pine Lake, Juanita Beach, and Idylwood Parks.
 Some of the parks have had extremely heavy usage so far this summer. Use of Five Mile Lake Park, Federal Way has more than quadrupled over the same period last year and attendance has almost tripled at Juanita Beach Park, Kirkland.
 The nine King County Park lake beaches will continue to be staffed with lifeguards from noon to 8 p.m., through Labor Day.
 James Webster, King County Parks Division manager, attributes the increase in park usage to at least two factors.
 "The weather has certainly played a big role so far this summer in increasing attendance at local parks, especially swimming beaches. We have had one of the nicest summers in many years. People are looking for places to cool off.
 Another factor has been the fuel situation. The public needs recreational outlets and are looking for places close to home."
 The Parks Division manager added that attendance at parks such as Marymoor Park near Redmond, Richmond Beach Park and the 16 county operated swimming pools also has been heavy this year.

Hogaboam trains in Calif.

Mike Hogaboam, of Federal Way, is currently attending the United States Olympic Training Center at Squaw Valley, Calif., participating in a wrestling camp.
 The camp at Squaw Valley is the first of four to six regional trainingsites planned for operation in the U.S.

Real Estate

By Bob Del Bianco REALTOR

MOVE IN BEFORE SETTLEMENT?

The situation is this. Your home is for sale. A prospect wants to buy it, but says, "I like it, I want it. But I will not have the money for a couple of months. Can I move in until we finalize the sale?"

One of the best ways to kill a sale is to allow a prospective buyer to move in before closing the sale. Although it is not good for a house to be empty, it's still a faster and surer way of selling it with the least trouble.

In my opinion, it is better to let the house sit empty than to let a prospective buyer move in before closing the sale. Although it is not good for a house to be empty, it's still a faster and surer way of selling it with the least trouble.

Anything is not do to help you in the field of real estate please phone or drop in at your local DEL BIANCO REALTY INC., really. We're here to help!

Jeff raced around the flower bed, past the oak tree and caught it on his fingertips just as he reached the driveway.

A Great Pair of Hands.

I watched my son Tom throw the football in a long, clean spiral to his brother Jeff. Jeff raced around the flower bed, past the oak tree, and caught it on his fingertips just as he reached the driveway. What a pair of hands that kid had. If he tried, he could get a college football scholarship easily, I thought. Yes, he had a great pair of hands.

His mother had noticed that years ago. When he was just a baby she'd say, "Look at those long, sensitive fingers. He's going to be a great pianist someday." It was right around that time she insisted I join the Payroll Savings Plan and buy some U.S. Savings Bonds for the kids' education.

Well, I never tried to stop him from playing the piano. And his mother never kept him away from football, even though I'm sure she worried about those sensitive fingers. We let him make up his own mind about what he'd do with his life.

Later that same day, I could hear Jeff playing some complicated classical piece on the piano. And I knew I'd better dig out those Bonds. They don't give football scholarships at those fancy music schools. And I had to admit that even though he was great at football, he could play the piano even better.

When Jeff left for school his mother said, "Well it'll cost a lot, but it'll be worth it." I nodded in agreement, but I really felt a lot better when young Tom said, "Don't worry, Dad, I'm going to State, and they give out a lot of football scholarships."

Then, I remembered. That kid had a great arm.

U.S. Savings Bonds can help you reach the goals in your life. So join the Payroll Savings Plan or buy Bonds where you bank. Then start saving for that education. New car. House. Or whatever makes you happy.

Take stock in America.
