

THE FINE ART of tuning and servicing a piano is challenge enough to any layman, and even more challenging to Jerry Pryne who has been blind since birth. A professional tuner for five years, Pryne has become accustomed to the instrument by sound and touch, and his work proves that his ability has superceded the need to see.

Jerry Pryne

No handicap keeps him from tuning in success

by Nathalie Weber

Jerry Pryne has an acute ear for music. He plays the guitar, the trumpet and a scintillating piano. He sings with a local band during leisure hours and is a member of the local musicians' union. He earns his living tuning pianos and instructing guitar. His hearing is keen, but he has no eyesight.

For Jerry, being blind has lent some advantages to developing his musical skills. "It gives me a reason to sit down and practice," the 28-year-old Federal Way resident said last week. "I'm not so apt to want to go out and join a football team."

And, being blind since birth, Jerry believes he has an easier go at life than the sighted person who later goes blind. "I was young and blind and I had to learn without my sight. I knew Braille by the time I was out of grade school, but people who go blind have to learn a whole new world."

There's an air of confidence in the room as Jerry, tuning an upright Wurlitzer piano in a local home, delicately runs his fingers across the strings. "See this hammer?" he asked, pointing below the strings to one of the felted wood wedges. It was difficult to believe he didn't see it too. "Now when I hit this key, that hammer isn't going to play the full note because I've muted some of the strings."

THE PROCESS WILL go on for another three hours as Jerry deftly moves between his tool chest and the piano, working his way around the 8,000 pieces that compose the instrument. And in those few hours, he will couple tones, diminish false beats and, finally, create a harmony in the spinet that even ascends the imperfections in the strings.

Those who watch could easily become overwhelmed by the intricacy of the piano tuning art, but for Jerry, five years a professional, it's one more piano tuned.

Jerry's career as a piano tuner and servicer blossomed about 10 years ago when a teacher at the State School for the Blind in Vancouver lauded his ear for music. Inspired by the support, Jerry began piano technician courses, meriting nearly straight A's throughout the two-year training. "I figured if nothing else, I knew I could do this," Jerry explained. "But as time went on I decided I didn't want to do piano tuning for a living."

THAT WAS UNTIL he returned to school and discovered there wasn't anything as satisfying for him to do. Despite his limited employment opportunities, Jerry did not let his blindness affect his enthusiasm. "Blindness is an inconvenience," he said. "It's not a horrible disaster or handicap, it's just an inconvenience. And I'm thankful things aren't worse."

So he returned to more technical training, perfecting his tuning abilities. Today he services pianos in private homes, schools and stores as well as tuning instruments prior to concerts.

Indicating no strong preference for where he tunes pianos — "after all, it's my bread and butter" — Jerry said he particularly enjoys going into area private homes. "I like to talk to people, there's a kind of rapport there," he said. On the other hand, he also finds the most frustration there.

"Neglect of pianos is terrible," Jerry explained, "especially when people don't play much. And I can understand why they don't play when it sounds the way it does."

Neglect is the number one cause of a death of a piano; the instrument should be tuned about once a year, he said.

WHEN NOT WORKING on pianos, Jerry spends time riding a tandem bicycle with his wife of four years, operating his Ham radio and doing a lot of reading. He reads largely about great musician's lives and is himself a musician, playing with the "High Country" band on weekends.

And he plans to continue his present lifestyle. "I'm going to keep right on going," he said, displaying his boyish grin. "I look at it this way. In this business I have to do everything, from the business promotion to the actual tuning. When you're the chief and the indians, it gets tiring sometimes, but the only thing that can keep me down is my own weaknesses. As long as I can work on those, I'll do all right."

Festival in Forest:

Lobbying, staff work progressing steadily

by Loren Bliss

Lobbying and staff work on behalf of Federal Way's proposed international performing arts center are progressing on a variety of levels, with the participants aiming at obtaining Congressional approval of the project sometime next year.

The center, locally known as the Festival in the Forest, could be completed as early as 1984 if a bill introduced earlier this year by U. S. Rep. Norm Dicks, D-6th District, gets enough votes from economy-minded senators and congressmen.

To insure that it does, state officials and local citizens are joining hands in a massive effort that reaches from Federal Way and Olympia all the way to Washington, D. C.

Something of the scope of the endeavor could be seen Wednesday night, when about 150 members and supporters of the Federal Way Festival in the Forest Association gathered at Enchanted Village to hear progress reports from a variety of political representatives, officials and others associated with the project.

AMONG THE speakers were Robert C. Anderson, director of the state Department of Commerce and Economic Development, and David McCraney, a representative of the U. S. secretary of the interior.

Both will play key roles in obtaining congressional support for Dicks' measure, which would allocate the $20 million necessary to complete the project's $25 million construction budget.

So the crowd was delighted when McCraney said that he and his colleagues are most impressed by the local enthusiasm the proposal has generated.

Anderson's remarks, even more supportive, drew a similar response — particularly when he announced that the proposal is now in the hands of a paid staff in Olympia.

But despite the optimistic overtones, Seattle Opera Director Glynn Ross cautioned that "You can never move dirt until you move people," stressing that the center will become a reality only if its backers remain active at all levels.

ANDERSON SAID later that the money for the staff work, about $100,000, came from arts funds allocated by the 1979 Legislature and will be spent on two other arts projects as well.

Meanwhile, Jim Badgley, the president of the festival association, said following the gathering that seven members of a 12-member commission that will oversee the project have already been named.

The seven are: Paul Barden, King County councilman; Rep. Frank Warnke, D-30th District; Rep. Duane L. Berentson, R-40th District; Sen. A. N. (Bud) Shimpoch, D-11th District; Sen. Alan Bluechel, R-Kirkland; Mike Parker, mayor of Tacoma, and Joe Stortini, Pierce County commissioner.

Five other members, Badgley said, will be named within the next month by Gov. Dixy Lee Ray.

The specific responsibilities of the festival association, the commission and the state department of commerce will be sorted out at a series of joint meetings as soon as the remaining commission members are named, he said.

DICKS' BILL would place the responsibility for maintaining the center's physical facilities in the hands of the U. S. Department of the Interior, which also administers the national park system.

Program management, which includes booking of performers, will probably be in the hands of a non-profit corporation, Badgley said.

Because of the wording of the congressional measure, the interior department will be asked to study the proposal carefully before it comes up for approval.

But McCraney said that, as yet, his office has received no such request — though he added that since the bill was so recently introduced, the delay was not at all unusual.

The first step in the congressional process will take place in the House Subcommittee on National Parks and Insular Affairs, a group that is chaired by U. S. Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif.

To be constructed on a 30-acre tract of land donated by the Weyerhaeuser Company, the center — it is also being called the "Pacific Northwest Festival in the Forest" — would be built in West Campus at Panther Lake.

It would provide a permanent home for Seattle Opera's annual Wagner festival, and would be used by a number of other theatrical and musical groups and performers as well.

SEATTLE OPERA star Shirley Harned entertains the crowd at a special gathering to raise funds for Federal Way's proposed international performing arts center Wednesday. Some $1,500 was raised during the event. The money will be used to support lobbying efforts in Washington, D. C., in an attempt to secure federal funding for the project.

New FW superintendent:

Snyder takes pulse on school issues

by Loren Bliss

Like a dedicated graduate student involved in a critical research project, Milton L. Snyder is asking a lot of pointed questions, and he's taking copious notes on the answers.

The new Federal Way superintendent of schools, he wants to find out for himself what people think of the local educational system and how they believe it might be changed and improved.

As he pursues his quest, he stresses again and again that he's interested in fact, not flattery.

"Please," he says, "don't dress up your remarks. Don't say what you think I'd like to hear. Please do tell me the truth as you see it, even if it is unattractive."

"I am a firm believer," he adds, "in what has been called the 'Chappaquidick Theorem' — the sooner and in more detail you announce the bad news, the better."

Snyder, who holds a doctorate in educational leadership, is talking with a variety of persons who range from parents, teachers and principals to community leaders.

"THE SCHOOLS," he says, "belong to the people of the district. Any plan for improving learning must be based on the collective wisdom of all concerned groups."

Taking over a few weeks ago from former Superintendent Vic Heinlen, who resigned, Snyder has been spending his first few weeks on the job just as he said he would in an "action plan" presented to the school board.

"The first and key element is to listen," he says. "I want to collect the essential input that will fuel this administration and carry us toward our mutual goals."

When the information-gathering step is completed — Snyder emphasizes that he's not interested in conducting any more formal polls or surveys — he intends to put together a series of recommendations he hopes will make a good educational program better.

"MY JOB, AS I see it, is first and foremost to educate young people," he says. "So I want to make it clear that excellence in instruction is my purpose for being here."

"And if I ever seem to have forgotten, I hope you will remind me that the purpose of the superintendent and the entire staff of this school district is to use every human and material resource available to give our students the best comprehensive education program possible."

Part of that task, he believes, is helping all of the district's students meet "clear comprehensive proficiency standards."

Toward that end, Snyder says he plans to hire the best teachers the district can recruit — though he is quick to add that he believes the teachers and principals who are here now have done a "magnificent" job of keeping the schools going through "a terribly difficult period."

Speaking with the faculty and the board recently, he praised their collective accomplishments in the face of five years of failed school levies.

BUT THOSE DAYS, he said, are history, and now "we're going to work harder than any of us has ever worked before, and we're going to find that effort difficult, challenging and enormously satisfying."

Snyder says it's too early to discuss any specific changes or revisions in the local educational program.

But he's very disturbed, he says, about the fact that levy failure stripped the bare bones what was once one of the best school district music programs in the entire region.

And he wants to see the programs for exceptionally gifted students restored also — but in a manner that is "financially responsible" to the district's taxpayers.

"The main thing," he said, "is that we're going to concentrate on learning. And if any changes are necessary, they'll be made."

Snyder was deputy superintendent in the Oakland, Calif. public schools before he was hired by Federal Way last spring.

Ann Hagen

Transmission resort just might catch on

by Ann Hagen

Have you ever felt like taking a 10,000-pound Dodge pickup camper by the lug nuts and strangling its pipes...

That's the way I felt last weekend when, on the first stretch of our Canadian trip, the camper wheezed to a stop just 80 miles north of the border.

Gearing up, down, and sideways, husband tried to get the tin motel packed with six people and grub for a week to stay in gear. He soon realized that the transmission had a mind of its own and was determined to idle into oblivion.

Husband signaled for help on the trusty C.B. and it wasn't long before we were attached like a limp fish to a towing truck. To top it off, we had to go BACK to Chilliwack, the only place with a transmission shop.

Lugging up a hill, the tow-truck driver complained that he "had the gas to the thing anyway," he said obviously trying to decide who was pulling who more.

Somewhat apprehensive, I hoped he wouldn't suggest I remove anything. I had only packed the essentials...lawn chairs, son's banjo, four tents, six sleeping bags, an electric range, inflatable boat and enough food and clothing for six

SOON, WE ARRIVED at what was to be our home for the next three days...an aluminum building, large enough for four cars, surrounded by a dirt driveway and a half a dozen ailing autos.

"Don't you know you can't stay here. It's private property," said a man running over from next door. I felt like telling him that we'd chosen this as the most desirable place in all Canada to spend a holiday, but I didn't.

Arriving late, we spent the first night parked outside the garage door to await the arrival of the mechanics. Though it was crowded, three in a bed, we crammed six bodies into a camper that normally sleeps four. Nobody wanted to put up the tents in the dirt.

By 6 p.m., grandpa was scurrying around hustling every one out of bed before the mechanics arrived to work on the truck.

"Let's go, let's go. Everybody up. We have to be done with breakfast and have the buggy clean before the workmen get here." Groaning, we all wished secretly that grandpa would stuff it.

By the time the mechanics had begun work, we found that our lives revolved around their hours. During the day, the truck was elevated at the front and we made meals on an uphill, becoming quite good at compensating for the tilt of a frying pan or juice pitcher. At night, it was back on four tires.

Determined to have a good time despite our problems, we settled in around the building. Husband set up chairs by the front door and carved; daughter got out her cards, son plinked on his banjo and I found a magazine.

"How are you today Bill," said husband talking to a man leaving the building. "Who the heck was that," I asked. "Oh, that was Bill Blecher. He's having first gear worked on." Soon we knew Joe who was having trouble with reverse, Jim, who had a growl in his axel and Bob, who needed a total transmission overhaul.

Once, when the heat became stifling in the camper, husband and I decided to escape to the weeds with our sleeping bags and tarps. How were we supposed to know it was near a mosquito breeding swamp.

In 80-degree weather, husband curled up in his down bag, zipped up tight and put on his wool cap to ward off the bugs. It wasn't long before we'd had enough.

Ignoring the beware of dog sign and the burglar alarm, we banged on the door until we got some response from the kids. Grumbling, they let us in though it was obvious from their expressions that they'd considered playing possum.

BY THE LAST DAY, even Lou, the owner must have been getting tired of stepping over us. He offered us his new van and his boat and motor and we spent a few hours at a nearby lake resort. Even though the fish weren't biting and it was raining, it was great to be away. You might say it was a vacation from a vacation.

Late that afternoon, as near to quitting time as possible, we got the good news. The truck was back in shape and it was time to leave. We said good-bye to all our new friends, gave the truck a good swift kick in the slats for luck and piled in.

It may have not been part of the plan, but we'd walked the city, visited their county fair, enjoyed their lake, and made some new friends. Isn't that what a vacation's all about...

Bill Henne

Nothing will change. I don't think the government really can compete with private enterprise. When the companies bitch, the government will back down.

Barbara Carlisle

It would be worth a try. We have got to do something. It has gotten to the point that we don't have many resources left. We tried volunteer conservation, and that didn't work.

Pere Stadulis

I think we should have a government-owned corporation. In my opinion there would be less graft. It would be better to have our resources administered by government officials than by private individuals.

Charles Cates

I am personally in favor of private enterprise doing it. I had rather see two private corporations fight it out than get the government in there. Pretty soon everybody will be working for the government.

What do you think about the recent proposal by consumer and labor leaders that a government-owned corporation produce and develop energy on public land?

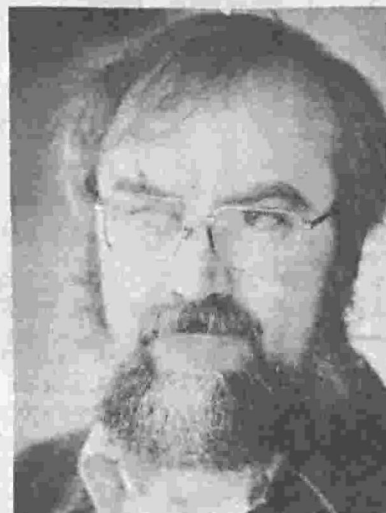

Bob Dummitt

In theory, it's probably a good idea. But I would be concerned about safeguards. I would hate to see politicians using this for a particular constituency's benefit. And we do have a lot of that now.

Pam Tope

I think the government owns enough of us. What happens to the private people that would be replaced... It seems that the government is into everything. And I don't like the idea of it having any more control than it does now.

Bill Murphy

The problem I have with public corporations is that none of them ever work in a profitable way. Their histories from World War II through the Korean war are classic examples of failure, such as the synthetic rubber effort in World War II.

Jon Lehman

In my opinion, it would be just another government bureaucracy, spending billions to solve a problem that they don't know how to solve anyway. I think the energy crisis is real and is not going to get any better.

Loren Bliss

George E. Benson and Jeanette Williams, both members of the Seattle City Council, are urging Metro to expand its electrically powered transport operation and extend it into the King County suburbs. Their arguments, expressed a month ago in a letter to Metro Executive Director Neil Peterson, will be of interest to anyone who is troubled by Metro's over-dependence on diesel-fueled buses.

Here are some excerpts from the letter:

"We are now at a crucial point in the development of transit systems nationwide in general and in Metro's service area in particular. We are faced with a shortage of energy and a national imperative to reduce our dependence on foreign oil sources."

"As you are aware, part of the President's recently announced energy program is the provision of $16.5 billion for public transit over the next ten years. We understand that this will mean that about $200 million or more will go to Metro.

"We believe Metro must NOW make a firm commitment and take positive action toward increased use of electricity for our transit facilities — both expanded trolley bus service and, possibly, light rail.

"FIVE YEARS ago, Metro and the city embarked on an electric trolley program. A commitment was made by both Metro and the city to rebuild existing lines and to expand those lines by an additional 25 miles of wire. Recently the city and Metro reaffirmed that commitment.

"Because of the vision of the Metro Council, Metro's service area will be afforded a reliable transit system in the face of diminishing supplies of fuel. The saving of fuel from the trolley routes will guarantee the remainder of the system the fuel it will need in the foreseeable future."

"The President has now brought us up short. Metro has always prided itself on being the leader in the country on many innovations in transit. We believe it can maintain this leadership, but it must at this juncture modify its thoughts and its planning. To this end... we request that Metro staff prepare and submit the following... for immediate consideration:

"(1). Revision of (Metro plans) providing for concentration on electric transit. It is no longer a choice; it is a must.

"(2). A list, similar to the one of five years ago, of lines both in the city and in the county that would be candidates for electrification.

"(3). Accelerated planning and implementation of a downtown transit mall to accommodate the revised technology, whether it be trolley uses or light rail.

"(4). An estimate of the comparative energy costs of comparable diesel and electric transit operations.

"(5). A recommendation on providing for electric transit across both I-90 and the West Seattle Bridge.

"(6). An evaluation of the potential for use of articulated trolleys.

"We are requesting this action because we believe our energy future, and the recently-announced Federal energy programs, make additional electric transit feasible not only within the City of Seattle but also for routes to outlying areas. You will note that we do not restrict staff to the type of vehicle or particular routes — just the method of propulsion.

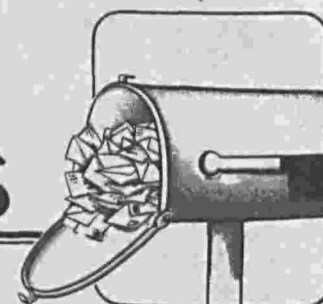

"WITH THE ASSURANCE of adequate power and the experience we now have electrically, we strongly recommend that we begin immediately to plan for an electric future. With that in mind — we must now seriously look at the modifications we are suggesting.

"We urge you to consider this proposal seriously. Our future depends on it.

Coincidentally, the views of Benson and Williams on this subject are remarkably similar to my own. There is no doubt in my mind that the residents of South King County, Bellevue and other outlying areas would benefit tremendously from expanded electrical operations — particularly if they included high-speed rail connections from the suburbs to Boeing and the center of the city. I hope Metro will make the requested changes, the sooner the better.

Let's display the flag

Editor:

Surely, I am not the only citizen in Des Moines aware of the fact that in recent years the only time our American flag is displayed up and down the main street is during Waterland Festival. What organization selects the day?

Why not on New Year's Day, Jan. 1; Inauguration Day, Jan. 20; Lincoln's Birthday, Feb. 12; Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22; Army Day, April 6; Easter Sunday; Mother's Day, second Sunday in May; Memorial Day, May 30; Flag Day, June 14; Independence Day, July 4; Labor Day, first Monday in Sept.; Citizenship Day, Sept. 17; Columbus Day, Oct. 12; Navy Day, Oct. 27; Veteran's Day, Nov. 11; Thanksgiving Day, fourth Thursday in November; Christmas

Day, Dec. 25; the birthday of our state and other state holidays. These days are listed as official days for the flying of our colors. Have most people forgotten? Maybe our schools don't teach this today? If not, why not? You may call me old-fashioned, or a "fogie" if you like but I am proud that I am an American, proud of our flag and thankful for our heritage. Could it be the same element in our society trying to make us believe we are responsible for all the world's ills is the same element wanting us to forget all our glory?

Let's go back to displaying our flag, praising our accomplishments and thanking our Creator before we find ourselves slaves under someone else's flag.

TUNING A PIANO will take Jerry anywhere from two to four hours, depending upon the condition of the instrument. After he completes the work on the strings, he checks the piano for buzzing, broken pieces and worn-out felts. He usually charges between $30 and $50 for a tuning and servicing job.

THE TOOLS OF the trade include everything from tweezers to hammers, and Jerry knows exactly where each tool is despite his handicap. If strings need replacing, he can determine their size by a miniature wheel and match them with new strings.

Overcoming darkness is Jerry Pryne's key

You know he's speaking English, but the words don't carry much meaning. Temperament strip. Key dip block. Equal tempered scale.

Bic lighter. Ah, now there's one that's recognizable.

Watching Jerry Pryne, a local resident, tune pianos is not unlike witnessing the creation of art as unknown components, common sense and alien theories fuse to produce aesthetical designs.

The layman only can watch as nimble fingers work the keyboard, tighten strings, tap the tuning fork, adjust the peddles.

The tools he uses are as complicated as unfamiliar wrenches and as simple as the Bic lighter. And when Jerry packs his equipment to leave, the piano is in what is known in the tuning profession as "harmonisity."

Jerry does all the work without the use of his eyes. Blind since birth, he learned the art as a teenager. Today, at age 28, he earns his living tuning pianos throughout South King County.

Married four years ago, Jerry said he owes much of his success to his wife, Terri, who drives him to some of his jobs and keeps the books for the business. "If the next four years are as good as the last, I'll be perfectly happy," Jerry said.

TUNING BEGINS BY muting some of the strings so that each key tone will be harmonized. Here Jerry adjusts the pegs that control those strings. He determines the correct pitch by using a tuning fork.

Drug abuse seminars scheduled in October

Concerned about the drug abuse problem?

Federal Way Organizations Serving Youth (FWOSY), a consortium of agencies and groups that are focusing on the problems of youth and childhood, is sponsoring a three-session seminar to study drug abuse and what can be done about it.

The seminars will be held on three consecutive Wednesday evenings, Oct. 10, 17 and 24, from 7 p.m. until 9:30 p.m. The sessions will include presentations by experts and former drug abusers, question-and-answer sessions and a film.

At the conclusion, the participants will be asked to formulate and adopt a statement of consensus outlining steps that might be taken in the future to combat drug abuse.

FWOSY has been planning the seminars for some time, and had tentatively scheduled them on different dates. But the new dates were officially set at a general membership meeting Thursday morning.

During the same meeting, the group changed its name from "Federal Way Organized Services for Youth," keeping the same initials.

Spokespersons for the group, which includes representatives of the Federal Way Youth Service Bureau, the Federal Way School District, the King County Police, several civic and service organizations and the NEWS, say that a number of other workshops on youth-related topics will be held later in the year.

The public is invited to the seminars, and the group is hoping for a large turnout. A location for the sessions has yet to be determined.

Four citizens appointed to hospital board

Four new members have been added to the Highline Community Hospital Board of Governors.

Named to the board was Howard Bell, Seattle, the executive vice president of operations for Home Savings and Loan Association.

The second new member is Charles Branson, Seahurst, a Burien lawyer.

The third new member, Patricia Medgard Bryan, comes with ties to the hospital: She is president of the Highline Community Hospital Auxiliary and a volunteer at the hospital. Mrs. Bryan, a Des Moines homemaker, also is an assistant managerial secretary on a parttime basis.

Jack Harrison also has ties to the hospital, in that his wife, Gladys, is Director of Volunteers. Harrison, of Redondo, is a Boeing engineer.

The hospital, already governed by a local board, wants to strengthen community ties. Highline Community Hospital is a community owned and operated institution.

FW crime report:

Teenage thugs attack girl, 12

Three teenage boys, all of them obviously drunk, attacked a 12-year-old girl on the playground of Woodmont Elementary School Thursday at about 10:30 a.m., King County Police reported Friday.

Investigating officers said the trio approached the girl as she was sitting on a swing while waiting for a friend and ordered her to get off.

She complied, an incident report said, and two of the boys walked away. But a third ordered her to get into their auto, a black and red convertible, and when she refused, knocked her down and hit her.

The girl managed to escape, running to a nearby residence, where police were called.

VANDALS HIT a Pacific

Highway South automobile dealer just after midnight Thursday, inflicting about $1,000 damage on a row of parked automobiles.

Police said the vandals hurled a variety of rocks and bottles over a fence into the lot, breaking a substantial number of vehicle windows and damaging the finish on a number of other cars.

A nearby resident told police that he heard a number of teens in the area. Vandals also shot a hole in the window of a security guard's vehicle as he was making the rounds of construction sites on Southwest 320th Street Friday, apparently using a BB gun. Damage was estimated at $150.

A third vandal attack, at a South 312th Street parking lot, resulted in about $40 damage to a parked automobile.

'No-growth' cuts jobs, says state official

Hotel-related industries in the Seattle area must pick up the slack in employment of low-income persons that has been created by a "no-growth" movement there, according to the director of the state Department of Commerce and Economic Development.

Robert Anderson said the "no-growth" mentality translates into a peculiar form of elitism which has little regard for the low income and underemployed segment of the population. "Since Seattle lacks the land for major new production facilities, the hotel-related industries are the ones to look to for employment of unskilled workers within the city. Yet there's been considerable resistance to efforts in this area," he said.

In an interview for the Washington State Research Council newsletter, Anderson said Washington's population boom can be slowed only by a major regional recession.

"I USED to think you could limit growth by limiting the construction of public facilities," he said. "But bumper-to-bumper traffic on the floating bridges in Seattle hasn't discouraged that region's growth patterns. Of course, putting up with traffic jams in Seattle is nothing compared to the problems that many of the people moving into the state are used to—hassles on the floating bridge just don't equate to a Los Angeles-style rush hour."

Washington's overall attractiveness is largely responsible for its economy being healthier than the economies in other states, Anderson declared.

"Washington seems to have transformed itself into a self-generating growth machine that sells itself because of its attractiveness. (The state) offers much more than most other parts of the country, providing businesses the chance to make a fresh start."

ANDERSON said California is an example of a state that has reached "outward limits imposed by transportation systems, a competent labor pool, and the basic quality of life." Washington's economy should grow even healthier with an increase in international trade, Anderson speculated.

Brown joins DM staff

by Cathy Stone
To some, he's Mr. Brown, to others, he's Charles Brown, but to the kindergarden students under his charge, the new Des Moines Elementary School principal is Charlie Brown.

The young students think it's funny he has the same name as their comic strip hero, he said. He doesn't seem to mind. In fact, he has a round table in his office depicting the face of his namesake.

"I like to relate very closely with the students on a personal basis," he said, "and with the parents on a personal basis."

"I believe we're obligated to work together to the benefit of the children."

"Some people feel they don't have access to the school or the principal," he said, adding he likes parents to come in, if only just to chat.

While he has no immediate plans to change the school's program, he would like to work with parents and staff members to decide together what areas should be improved.

There is one change he would like to make which may become a pet project. He would like to make the exterior of the Des Moines school building more attractive.

Though he acknowledges that might be easier said than done, he said "There are some things you can get if you're determined enough."

Brown came to Des Moines Elementary on August 1 from Manhattan, Elementary where he spent six years as principal. Before that, he spent five years as the assistant director of pupil personnel services responsible for special education.

He was also a teacher for nine years and principal for three years at the Woodside School, the Highline School District's school for children with learning disabilities.

Brown, who earned his master's degree in education from Seattle Pacific University, is originally from a wheat farm in western Kansas. Every year for 23 years, he's returned to his home to help his brothers in the wheat harvest.

Brown's wife, Margaret, and his three sons, ranging in age from 13 to 17, own and operate their own business. They work together at Brown Brothers Bike World, in Kent. While his wife helps them out during the school year, the boys run their business entirely on their own during the summer months, he said.

Brown expressed pleasure at coming to Des Moines, noting he was anxious to spend some time in the little shops and cafes.

He's also happy to be at the Des Moines school, he said.

"I hear this is a very nice school with

here and to have the chance to work with these people."

Is Port candidate Republican or Demo?

by Carolyn Logan
Is Port of Seattle Commission candidate Bill Sage a Democrat or a Republican?

Some Republican leaders are unhappy, saying Sage told them he is a Republican.

Sage denies that.

He calls himself a Democrat, although he prefers not to discuss partisan ties in the non-partisan Port race on the Sept. 18 ballot. Scramble to unseat incumbent Henry Simonson are Sage, Sen. King Lysen, D-31st District, Bob Maxie, Captain McManus, Robert Wood and Tom Fairchild.

Sage (as well as Lysen) won a co-endorsement from the King County Democratic Central Committee.

The King County Republican Central Committee doesn't endorse candidates in non-partisan races, but individual members work for candidates, according to Sylvia Barnes, vice chairman and wife of Rep. Dick Barnes, R-33rd District.

So candidates seek support. Sage voluntarily identified himself as a Republican, then "he said 'I want your help,'" said Susie Klein, Republican Central Committee administrative director.

Upon learning of this conversation and the endorsement, Evelyn O'Kert, Republican state committeewoman, said she called Sage on Tuesday, asking him pointblank if he is a Republican.

"HE RESPONDED that he was a Republican and that he had worked for Republican and Democratic candidates," she explained.

Sage called their impressions "a misunderstanding."

Mrs. Barnes called the situation

"distasteful and a little depressing."

"It hurts him to say he's Republican to Republicans, and a Democrat to Democrats. He's trying to play both ends against the middle."

"How can you trust someone like that to be a good Port Commissioner? He'll tell one thing to one neighbor, another to the other."

"He should have been smart enough to know we (Republicans and Democrats) compare notes. We compared notes on Tuesday."

"I got a call from the Republicans saying we might have a 'ringer' on our hands," affirmed Jeff Smith, a Democratic staffer now loaned out to a citizen committee on the Metro Merger proposal.

Ms. Marchioro insisted that Sage had not made a secret of being a Democrat. "I know and admire Bill Sage; I don't have any reason to think he's not straightforward," she said.

Smith explained, "We hadn't paid a whole lot of attention to that issue (party loyalty) because this is a non-partisan race. My understanding is that Sage filled out our questionnaire affirmatively where it listed 'Democrat.'"

Sage said he identified himself as a Democrat when asked by the 43rd District Democratic Club, but that he had filled out too many questionnaires to remember precisely what was in the Democratic Committee questionnaire.

WILL THE Democratic Committee revoke its endorsement?

"I'm not in a position to revoke an endorsement," replied Ms. Marchioro. "There are no mechanics to purge an endorsement."

Sage works for Northern Tier Pipeline, promoting installation of the oil pipeline. Before returning to Seattle in late 1976, he was the administrative assistant of Congressman Marvin L. Esch, a Michigan Republican now working for U.S.

Steel. (U.S. Steel owns Northern Tier, but Esch said Sage got his job independently of him.) Sage said he worked for Esch from mid-1975 to late 1976, ultimately winning the top post in the office.

Two new pastors have joined the staff of the Des Moines United Methodist Church.

Taking over as head pastor is the Rev. Dr. William H. Ritchey. His assistant pastor is Marilyn Littlejohn.

The Rev. Dr. Ritchey, who came to Des Moines at the first of July, has served in the Northwest since 1946.

Originally from Southern California, he served at the parish in Lind, eastern Washington for 14 years.

After that, he was the superintendent of the Walla Walla District for six years, then was pastor at the Wesley U.M.C., Yakima, for six years.

Before coming to Des Moines, he served as superintendent of the Seattle District for six years. As superintendent, he supervised 43 United Methodist Churches in King County.

"I'm no stranger to it (the Des Moines parish)," he said, "because I was superintendent of the district in which this congregation is located."

"It's a very interesting parish, a very diverse congregation," said the Rev. Dr. Ritchey, who holds an honorary doctorate of divinity from the University of Puget Sound.

"I'm delighted to be here," he said. "There's plenty of work to do."

The Rev. Dr. Ritchey said he hopes to become involved in the community.

"I have always been very much interested in community affairs and active in the community in which I have lived."

Among the diverse community activities he has been involved in have been to organize a rural health center in Eastern Washington and serve on a Fair Housing Board in Yakima.

Associate Pastor Marilyn J. Littlejohn comes to Des Moines from the Candler School of Theology, Emory University at Atlanta, where she attended seminary.

She also worked with parishioners, she said, describing the church as upper middle class, thus she was exposed to all kinds of people.

She also spent about a year working with low income black children within a church community. Describing it as basically a fellowship group, she organized sports teams and gave programs to educate the children in the areas of sexuality and drugs. She also worked with children on developing reading skills.

Some of the vegetables that are now being harvested can be stored without canning or freezing. Vegetables like onions, squash and potatoes can keep for months if given the proper storage conditions.

To help prepare for the storage season, the Pierce County church will be youth, social concerns and missions.

At this point she is getting acquainted, she said, but would later like to develop programs to combatting and inadequate reading skills in children.

Cooperative Extension will offer a free seminar on fruit and vegetable storage from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday, at the Pierce County Annex, 2401 S. 35th St., Tacoma.

Information on picking times, storage units and nutritional quality of stored produce will be discussed.

Intern to join staff at Methodist Church

Rev. Jim Finkbeiner of the Federal Way United Methodist Church, at 29645 51st Ave S., has announced that a new intern, Kathie Wilson, will be joining his staff beginning in September.

Kathie Wilson

Wilson is from South Pittsburg, Tenn. where she graduated valedictorian from high school. Receiving a four year General Motors scholarship, among others, she then attended the University of Tennessee where she majored in music.

Graduating with honors, she went on to serve St. Paul's United Methodist Church in Burlington, N.C. as choir director. It was at this church that Wilson was also in Denver, Colo. Some of her activities include serving as children and youth choir director at the First United Methodist Church in Boulder. It was there, during the 1978-1979 school year that she Adult Fellowship," Finkbeiner said.

This past June, Wilson was ordained a Deacon in the United Methodist Church.

While at the Federal Way United Methodist Church, for her nine month internship, she hopes to use her particular interests in "creating ideas, training and supporting adults and helping to assess strengths and weaknesses of the church," Finkbeiner concluded. While here, some of her responsibilities will be with the youth and the senior citizens of the church.

Modern Mom

by Betty Woolley

The Chinese have an ancient saying, "One picture is worth a thousand words." Looking at my newly arrived legal benediction from the State Department of Licenses, I am forced to conclude that those thousands words are all of the type to be used under your breath and never out loud in public.

The pictures on the billboard of the post office have more appeal than the one on my license. It needs only the addition of a plate of numbers at the bottom of the photo to indicate that my address is McNeil, and not Mercer Island.

A government that managed to put man on the moon should be able to engineer a camera that would capture a reasonable facsimile of the poor cornered citizen who is forced to face a lens every other year. James Garner would probably be willing to take time off from his TV camera commercial, (where he has been teaching 6-year-old children to take beautiful pictures) and give the licensing department the benefit of his expertise.

"May I see your driver's license?" asks the clerk as I hand her a personal check.

I oblige. She stares at it, and with just cause. My new photo shows me a brunette, (which was a shock to my hair dresser who works diligently to keep me a blonde) the color of my eyes is indiscernible since my corrective lenses reflect the light and give me the appearance of a raccoon, and there are four chins showing where actually I have only two.

"Just a minute," she says, and rings for the manager. He does the same double take and then says, "Perhaps if you'd care to leave your watch for collateral until this can be verified...!"

It goes on like that all the time. It is most embarrassing.

Webster defines picture as an "image or likeness of a person produced on a flat surface." The photo on my license isn't an image of me nor is it a likeness. It is, however, on a flat surface.

Perhaps when you're dealing with a bureaucracy one win out of three isn't bad.

Pamphlet helps parents prevent youth assault

by Ann Hagen

A team of King County Rape Relief consultants are working on a pamphlet that should help parents inform their youngsters of the danger of child molesters in a sensitive but informative way.

With an expected completion date of mid-September, the pamphlet will deal with a definition of sexual assault as it relates to children; the importance of establishing a working vocabulary that makes discussion easier; plus the ways families, individuals and professionals have dealt with the problem.

"Youngsters have this notion that being molested means that they are going to be attacked by a vicious stranger who is going to cut them up into little pieces," said Lois Loontjens who has been involved with researching the issue for the past two years.

"But, that's just not the way it happens."

In fact, most child molesting cases involve the child and someone they know or have met briefly. It could be a neighbor, relative, or friend. Rape Relief counselors estimate that one out of every four females will be sexually molested by the time they are 18. They stress that that is a conservative estimate.

Counselors are quick to point out that sexual assault is defined by the person assaulted. "If a child feels afraid, hurt, or threatened because of how they've been touched, then they've been assaulted," said pamphlet organizer Jennifer Fay. "It's a crime of violence, not sex," she said.

FOR SEVERAL YEARS, Rape Relief counselors have been talking to groups about the frequency of child molesting cases. In the past three years, they've led discussions with 1,871 groups in Federal Way and Des Moines. Rape Relief stresses direct service to victims and their families plus continued community education.

"It became clear, that once people had the information, they needed information on how to present it to the kids," said Ms. Loontjens stressing the fact that the idea was a new one and a similar project had never been done before.

It was found that parents were often reluctant to discuss the problem with their children because perhaps the parents, themselves had once been assaulted; they assumed that their child would be frightened and wouldn't know who to trust or they simply did not know how to put it into words the child could understand.

In the spring of 1979, Caren Adams recently retired director of King County Rape Relief, wrote a grant proposal requesting International Year of the Child funds. The grant, which provided $10,000 was one of nine grants accepted by King County from 150 applicants.

A cooperative effort, staffers Ms. Loontjens, Ms. Fay, Ms. Adams, Mary Ellen Stove, Pat Rittenhouse and intern Billie Jo Flerchinger have June 11.

Seeking professional guidance, they contacted the Child Protective Service, the Sexual Assault Center, Seattle Rape Relief and the Western Federation for Human Services, Inc. It was an effort to talk to those people who had experience with parents and with sex abused kids, said Ms. Loontjens.

"We needed to know what information was most important for the parents to have and the best way for them to get it across to the kids," she said.

Jennifer Fay

Lois Loontjens

"We're trying to reinforce a child's right to their own feelings," said Ms. Fay. "Those feelings need to be respected."

The third chapter discusses "It's Not Your Fault" and the fourth chapter encourages the child to tell somebody about it if they feel they are being bullied.

The pamphlets will be distributed through community education meetings and to professionals in the area. They will also be available on request, free of charge.

Each pamphlet will include an evaluation sheet that can be mailed into Rape Relief as part of a built-in feedback system. The pamphlet will be updated and changed as it becomes necessary.

Enthusiastic about the project, coordinators say they hope this effort "will give kids the tools to protect themselves. It should make the problem less traumatic and severe."

'Carter's not dead yet' — Lowry

by Steve Botkin

President Carter may be in trouble, but he could still be a good president.

That's the opinion of freshman Congressman Mike Lowry, D — 7th District, home for a few weeks during a recess of Congress.

Lowry met with Robinson Newspaper editors last week and gave his view of the President's plight.

"The feeling in Washington D.C. is that Carter can't be re-elected," Lowry said. "I think they're wrong."

"I say he's not dead yet, but he could be by Christmas," Lowry said Carter must put together a major accomplishment within three months to regain strength as President, or it may be too late. The first primaries for the 1980 election are in early spring.

"Carter's weakness is he hasn't been a strong president in getting programs through Congress," Lowry said. "It's Congress, not Carter's weakness."

"Carter's staff has never developed a good relationship with Congress. There isn't communication," Lowry said the public may be expecting too much too soon from Carter. "The American people should realize they need someone to Washington D.C. without any experience."

He said Carter

hasn't learned yet how to use the "powers of the president" to get Congress to respond. "No one has comparable reward and punishment powers than the president of the United States."

Lowry called former President Lyndon Johnson a master of reward and punishment powers.

DOES LOWRY think Ted Kennedy will be the next president? Only if Carter does not run, he said.

"Kennedy will not violate the Kennedy tradition of not running against an incumbent Democrat," Lowry said many Democrats want Kennedy to run because his candidacy would bring out the Democratic vote (especially blacks) and make their chances for re-election easier.

A lot of those Congressmen are in trouble," Lowry added.

Lowry also discussed some key issues, both national and local. He said he would vote for the SALT II treaty "basically because it will keep the dialogue going. If you're not talking, you might be fighting."

Rep. Mike Lowry Home on recess

"There's nothing else good about the treaty. SALT II is arms escalation, but not voting for it would break off the dialogue."

ON THE recent resignation of U.N. ambassador Andrew Young, Lowry said he believes Young's decision was his own. "Young decided he would become less effective in that post if he stayed."

"I think he did a tremendous job," Lowry said. "He accomplished more for third world countries than anyone before."

Lowry is well versed on some local county issues, having served on the King County Council before being elected to Congress last fall.

He said he strongly supports the farmlands bond issue, a proposition for the county to buy development rights to remaining agricultural lands. Barely defeated at the polls last November, the proposition will come before voters again this fall in the general election.

Lowry said he's always supported the Metro merger issue, but he's afraid the public does not adequately understand the issue and will turn it down in the fall election.

"I think, for that reason, it would be good to postpone the ballot issue until people can understand it."

Lowry will return to Washington D.C. shortly after when Congress reconvenes. He is taking a short vacation in Kettle Falls.

Southcenter hotel under construction

Construction has begun on the $14.3 million Doubletree Plaza Hotel which will be across the street from the Doubletree Inn at Southcenter. The eight story, 221 all-suite hotel and meeting facility, is scheduled to open June 1980.

Baugh Construction Company of Seattle broke ground on the site in May. Interior designers for the hotel are Erickson and Assoc. of Alhambra, Calif.

The Doubletree Plaza Hotel, designed by the architectural firm of Peter A. Lendrum and Assoc. of Phoenix, Ariz., will be the first of its kind in the Northwest. Rather than traditional guest rooms, the hotel will consist exclusively of mini-suites constructed around an interior garden atrium. Each of the 221 suites will offer approximately 500 square feet of living/sleeping area, and will be equipped with wet bars and refrigerators. The sky-lit atrium will extend the full eight stories of the white stucco structure, offering views from the balconies of all suites.

Complimenting the garden atrium setting, the Doubletree Plaza will feature a 200-seat lounge. The Doubletree Plaza will also feature two full-size racquetball courts. Other amenities will include an indoor swimming pool, a jacuzzi, a sauna and locker facilities.

The Doubletree Plaza Hotel's meeting facilities will accommodate a variety of business meetings. Groups from 10 to 600 will be able to meet at the new hotel. A major banquet room on the main floor will offer a total of 6,000 square feet of space, which may be partitioned into three smaller sections by moveable, sound-proof walls.

The site at Southcenter is located 10 minutes from Sea-Tac Airport, and 15 minutes from downtown Seattle. The location offers access to Interstate 5 and Interstate 90.

The City of Fife has received a check for $91,174.92 from the Interagency Committee for Outdoor Recreation, according to information released this week by Governor Dixy Lee Ray. The check is the first payment for the city's community pool.

Total cost of the project is $280,300. The contribution from the committee administered funds consists of $140,150 from Referendum 18, the outdoor recreation bond issue passes by the voters in 1972. The balance will be provided by the city.

The project entails acquisition of approximately 2.3 acres of land in the eastern portion of the city, adjacent to Fife High School and near the city's commercial center.

Metro merger

County may suffer under voter scrutiny...Reams

by Darlene Himmelpach
A move by three King County Council members to remove an issue from the November ballot asking voters if King County should takeover Metro seems all but quashed.

Councilwoman Pat Thorpe, considered to be the swing vote regarding the ballot issue approved last year by the county council, indicated Friday she wants the issue to go to the voters and said the substitute advisory ballot issue proposed by Bill Reams, Bob Dunn and Bernice Stern "ducks the issue."

Thorpe noted that the City of Seattle, which has steadfastly opposed direct takeover of the sewer and transportation facility by the county, would probably oppose a modified ballot measure also.

The key issue of the proposed takeover was reiterated Friday by Councilman Paul Barden.

"The 7th Council District has one representative per 70,000 people on the Metro Council. Seattle has one per 30,000. My constituents are paying their fair share of taxes and not getting equal representation."

Barden said accountability of the Metro Council is an important issue. As a councilman from an unincorporated district, he is allowed to appoint one person to the council but "the person I'm allowed to appoint has his own professional pursuits and is not always available to the electorate."

Barden said there are "people on the Metro Council who have never voted against any staff proposal" and he accused the group of being a "rubber stamp" for the staff.

The proposal by Stern, Dunn and Reams would ask the voters if the administrative functions of Metro should be merged with the county executive office while Metro Council remains in tact as the legislative arm.

Reams said he opposes the takeover ballot measure because "whether Metro wins or loses, the well is going to be poisoned." He said Home Rule Charter for King County had caused a "reduction of animosity between the counties and cities but we still have cities and the county fighting over territory. That will exist until we get some kind of tax-base sharing," the Redmond Republican announced.

Reams also Predicted "one gigantic battle against the competence of King County government" if the Metro issue goes on the ballot Seattle representatives have said they oppose merger of the two governments because King County is not capable of managing the super-power.

Reams said "whether it is true or not, cities will say it. That is a poor position to be put into."

Stern said she believes in "consolidation of government" but said placing the Metro merger question before the voters in November could impact other issues also on that ballot including a major bond to finance a new county jail and aid for Medic

1 programs.

Seminar to tell how Bible aids reducing

Mrs. Carol Marriott, of Burlington, Wash., mother of three children, loser of 60 pounds, will present 'How to Lose Weight Following the Principles of the Bible,' on Saturday, Sept. 8, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Federal Way Christian Church, 941 S. Dash Point Road (next door to Sacajawea Junior High School).

Topics discussed will include "Not By My Will," "God's Chosen Fast," and "Don't Wait at the Scale if you Cheat When you eat."

Mrs. Marriott said, "God did not make us fat! The good news for the overweight Christian is that his problem is not a physical one but a mental one, and the mind can be healed with the words of God."

She added, "One passage in the Bible on gluttony is Proverbs 23:19-21, 'Listen, my son, be wise and give serious thought to the way people live. Don't associate with people who drink too much wine or stuff themselves with food. Drunkards and gluttons will be reduced to poverty. If all of you do is eat and sleep, you will soon be wearing rags.'"

This seminar is open to all Christian men and women. The cost is $15. No babysitting will be provided at the church. Participants will be served a salad luncheon which is included in the seminar fee.

Preregister now by phoning Charlotte Glisson at 941-2466. A no-cost 15-week follow-up weight control group will be offered to attendees of the seminar. The group, called the Becomers, will seek to help members strengthen personal commitments to the Lord, and to develop disciplines of fasting, diet control, and individual spiritual growth through growth support, Bible reading, prayer, and praise singing.

The Becomers will meet at 7 p.m. Mondays at Federal Way Christian Church from Sept. 10 through Dec. 17.

Building lot size proposals unveiled

A proposal to reduce the minimum building lot size in King County from RS 7,200 to 5,000 square feet could create "instant slums" according to King County Councilman Paul Barden.

Barden made the comment after a speech to the council by County Executive John Spellman in which the executive outlined several proposed changes in the county housing policy and code resulting from recommendations of a citizen taskforce.

Spellman said the reduced lot size might encourage townhouse construction in some parts of the county and "assist in producing more affordable housing and in saving energy."

Barden, who is a member of a committee currently considering the request of the Federal Way revision committee to downzone some fringe areas of Federal Way, said "I'm all for clustering but not for building instant slums. We don't need more of that (poor construction) in Federal Way. People have been trying for years to upgrade" what they originally bought.

"Let's face it," Barden said, "it is to facilitate mobile homes on lots." In Highline, Spellman said mixed-use zoning proposed in the Highline Communities Plan will be suggested. A countywide program to provide 1,000 new apartment units for senior citizens is also proposed. In the annual housing address to the council, Spellman proposed that the county contribute $1 million in federal block grant funds to the project.

Connors sentenced in deaths

The man who shot a Federal Way couple to death in their home in February has been sentenced to up to life in prison.

James Raphael Connors, a Seattle sewing machine repairman, was identified by Barbara Diane Maris and Michael Ray Carroll shortly before they died as the man who shot them. Maris called for medical help after the shooting then pleaded with medics not to let her die.

King County Superior Court Judge Frank Howard sentenced Connors for the murder of the 34-year old couple. He did not make a recommendation for a minimum prison sentence.

The couple lived at 35204 Pacific Highway S. Connors and Carroll had known each other before the shooting, police said.

Grass Roots Gardening

by Ginna Koontz

To add a touch of now. Newspaper ads pastel spring hues to stating "Colchicum, the autumn garden set autumn crocus" are out colchicum corms not worded properly.

Colchicum, meadow saffron, is not a true crocus, it is a plant of the lily family native to the Mediterranean area.

Colchicum corms with shiny brown skin, bloom during the brief dormant state in September and October and can only be purchased from August through September. The usually lavender pink blooms poke up through the soil and burst into bloom, resembling giant crocus flowers. Colchicum varieties are also rose-purple or white, and flowers grow in both single and double petal rows. They should be planted in masses or drifts for a striking effect. In full sun, average, well-drained soil, they need not be divided more than every three years. When colchicum patches become too thick just carefully thin out in August and share the corms with friends. Set the tips of each bulb three to four inches under the soil. Colchicum should not be naturalized in a lawn as crocus sometimes are and never planted where grazing animals could eat them because the corm and seed of colchicum autumnale contains a bitter, poisonous alkaloid. In early spring, broad six- to 12-inch dark green leaves appear and then die down in mid summer. If the dry leaves are distracting, simply rake up and discard. Colchicum can be grown indoors in a dry state without water or soil. Place in a bowl or flower pot and watch them bloom then plant outdoors after blooming. Autumn flowering crocus are true crocus that bloom during the fall dormant stage. They too require full sun, average soil and fast drainage. Originating in Asia Minor and Turkey, crocus are a genus of the Iris family. Plant in masses and clumps in conspicuous spots for autumn color. Saffron crocus, Sativus, is the source of saffron. Crocus speciosus albus produces huge snow white flowers in great abundance. "Lady Killer" is a most unusual dainty species, milky white with a purple-blue shield shape on every other petal. For a magical sunny surprise in borders, rockeries or poolside pockets in the autumn garden, plant another autumn flowering bulb, Sternbergia lutea. The crocus-like flowers are rich golden yellow. They have the same cultural requirements as colchicum and crocus. For a superior display plant in groups of three to five bulbs. Sternbergia leaves appear in fall at the same time as flowers and remain green several months after blooms have gone. Set the bulbs six inches deep and four to six inches apart. You'll really have to search to find winter blooming iris, Iris sanguicularis or I. stylosa. I'm going to look at the Northwest Ornamental Horticulture Society Plant Sale in Bellevue Square Sept. 28 and 29. November through March, six- to nine-inch tubes that resemble stems produce lavender blue flowers depending on how mild the winter. In borderline zones of coldness, plant along sunny walls, fences or house foundations. They are not temperamental, accepting average soil sun or shade. I. stylosa are excellent cut flowers. Cut while in bud and let open indoors. Slugs are attracted to them so use slug bait year around to cut slug population. Divide overgrown clumps in September or after the flowering season, usually in March. Year around color in the garden is so easily attained in the Pacific Northwest. If you've not ventured into the world of autumn flowers other than the old stand by chrysanthemums and autumn foliage at least consider adding colchicum, crocus, Sternbergia and I. stylosa this fall. Once planted they require little or no care, are generally disease and insect free and don't ask to be transplanted often...they just grow and bloom in autumn reflecting the hues of springtime.

Safe jog route planned

Federal Way jogging path in the works

by Harry Brooks
Federal Way area joggers may have a safe route to pursue their interest in the near future.

Federal Way High School staff members are planning a two-mile course which would be constructed within the grounds of the school and neighboring Federal Way Memorial Stadium.

"Jogging has become so popular that it seems natural to have a specific place for jogging that the community can use," noted Federal Way Assistant Principal Bob Penny, one of the course planners.

Federal Way High track and cross-country coach Bill Harris explained that the layout also would aid school-oriented activities.

"We need a new course for our cross-country program," he said. "We're having conflicts at Steel Lake Park (where Federal Way's cross-country races have been held in the past) because of heavy traffic and increased soccer usage of the park grounds. Also, our PE classes need the course for the distant-running portion of their instruction."

Others working on the layout include Federal Way's new principal Jim Turner, school activities coordinator Duane Hamill and Dan Clements, the district's director of support facilities.

The course they formulated involves a route around the boundaries of school-district owned property but negates any interference with bordering roadways.

IT BEGINS on Federal Way High's upper track at the old football field. The course parallels South 304th past the tennis courts and behind the baseball backstop.

It proceeds along the right-field portion of the baseball field and across the open field area behind Memorial Stadium. At the far south (308th) fence, it loops back to the baseball diamond and continues along the outfield fence to the south side of the tennis courts, where it takes an uphill climb to the school's back parking lot.

The course then outlines the back of the school's building configuration and follows South 308th and Pacific Highway South, staying well away from traffic, to the north side of the school. It finishes by cutting a path between the school and Federal Way District Pool to the upper track area.

"The course layout makes our campus visible to the community," Penny said. "It works to increase familiarity with the school's surroundings and, in that way, increases identity with our schools. That is especially important nowadays."

PLANNERS PREDICT the total layout will be completed in three phases. The first stage will consist of building a basic cross-country course, which may leave off portions of the layout set forth in the final plan. Harris is confident that the initial phase can be completed by late next month.

The second phase involves extending the jogging — cross-country trail to the permanent length. A sawdust running surface would be added at this point. Implementing exercise stations at specific locations on the course will complete the project. This makes it possible for course users to accomplish a complete exercise program through their journey on the route. Signs, located at the exercise stations, dictate a specific exercise. After completing the sign's instruction, the runner advances to the next of 20 stations.

District Athletic Director Bud Hatley expressed concern that the jogging trail may be used as a motorcycle course. To discount that possibility, Hatley and the course planners are working out a fence system that would deter motorcycle riding on the route.

Besides rebuilding fences, the project will involve limited bulldozer work and landscaping, plus acquiring building materials — rocks, logs and plaque stands for the exercise stations.

THE SCHOOL district may supply partial funding, but Penny pointed out that the district's projects' fund for the coming school year is almost completely drained.

Planners hope to gain most of the needed materials through donations from the community. Tax-deductible contributions, in the name of "The Community-School Jogging Track Fund," can be sent to Federal Way High School, 30611 16th Ave. S., Federal Way, Wa. 98003. Those interested in donating supplies and/or construction equipment should contact Bob Penny at Federal Way High (839-4750).

Golden Oldies capture women's 30 and over tourney

After years of sponsoring a men's 30 and over softball tournament, the King County Parks and Recreation Department went a step farther last weekend and sponsored a women's 30 and over tournament and with favorable results.

Teams from Kent, Maple Valley, Renton, Issaquah, North Bend and Seattle gathered at Moshier Field last weekend to participate in the two day tournament, but bad weather forced a cancellation of the tournament after the first day of play. The tournament was rescheduled for last Thursday evening with only three of the eight teams still vying for the top spot.

When the final out was registered at 12:45 a.m. the Golden Oldies from North Seattle were crowned champions of the tournament as they defeated Crown Meats out of Federal Way and Kent 9-2.

Crown Meats earned the right to meet the Golden Oldies in the championship game after defeating the Over the Hill Gang, out of Seattle, 6-5 in the semi-finals.

In the first championship game, Crown Meats scored two runs in the top of the seventh and hung on for an 8-7 win. Since it was the first loss for the Golden Oldies in the double elimination tournament, a second game was needed to decide the winner.

The Golden Oldies, behind the strong hitting of Pat Skura, Carol Quert and Corie Musselman, jumped out to an early lead and never looked back in posting their 9-2 win.

More important than the scores and championship trophy was the fun and enthusiasm the women carried into the tournament and according to Lou Flanagan, coach of the Golden Oldies, it was something the women needed to have.

"This is the first time I can remember a tournament like this being organized," Flanagan said. "It could have come a lot sooner. We loved it and I think everybody involved did too."

When asked what the difference was between the women over 30 and the women under 30, Flanagan replied, "not much. Overall this team has more skill than any other team that competed in our league in the Lake City area. But you have to remember that this is a select team similar to an all-star team except we are all over 30."

Dee Ingram, director of the tournament, felt there might be one small difference.

"These girls still have the skill and ability of the younger players," Ingram said, "but they are just a step or two slower."

Next year it is hoped that the tournament will be expanded to include 16 teams and according to Ingram it will once again be held at Moshier Field.

"Since I am the director of women's athletics in the King County area and I am stationed down in the Highline area, the tournament will be down here also."

Mae Steck had the distinction of being the oldest participant in the tournament. Steck turned 54 last month. One player was the mother of 10 kids and nine grandchildren while another player confessed to being on the softball circuit for 20 years.

It is hoped that next year's tournament will be able to accommodate all the teams wishing to get involved. This year, teams from Federal Way, Kent and Auburn were turned down because of the eight team limit.

Seahawks to honor Mascot of week

The Seattle Seahawks Mascot of the Week contest for children has begun at The Bon Marche.

The contest is open to boys and girls between the ages of 7 and 13 who register in the NFL Shops at participating Bon stores. Each week prior to home games, a name will be drawn and that youngster will be Mascot of the Week.

As Mascot, the winner receives two tickets to a Seahawks home game; visits the Seahawks side-lines before the game; has his or her name on the scoreboard during half-time and announced on the P.A. system; and receives autographed pictures and pennant of the Seahawks, as well as a Seahawks t-shirt.

At the conclusion of the regular season, the names of the eight weekly winners will be combined with the other winners throughout the country and a National Mascot of the Year will be selected by Commissioner Pete Rozelle. The Mascot of the Year and his or her parents or guardian will receive an all-expense paid trip the 10th annual AFC-NFC Pro Bowl in Honolulu, Hawaii, January 1980.

Contest rules and entry blanks are available in the NFL Shops at Southcenter and SeaTac Mall.

Fife renames stadium to honor coach

The Fife School Board last month took action to rename the Fife High School Athletic Field in honor of a former highly successful Fife High School Coach, Willis D. (Bill) Vinson.

In the resolution renaming the sports field the Willis D. Vinson Field, the Fife School Board gave recognition to the many accomplishments of Mr. Vinson and his contribution to athletics in the Fife School District when he served as teacher and football and basketball coach for a period of 19 years, 1937 through 1956.

During his 19 years as the Fife High School football coach, Bill Vinson set an enviable record of nine league championships, one league co-championship, with six of these championships consecutive without the loss of a game! In 1939 the Vinson-coached Fife team was named the Washington State Football Champion. The total football record of Coach Vinson was 104-27-3.

School board members pointed out that they felt this was certainly an appropriate recognition of Mr. Vinson's many years of valuable service to the Fife School District, to Fife High School, and to the community.

Board member Paul Jensen, who was instrumental in bringing this recognition before the board, said that "Mr. Vinson was a great coach. He certainly set a fine example for many young people and was recognized as the outstanding coach in the league and in the surrounding areas."

A program of recognition for the renaming of the Athletic Field in honor of Coach Bill Vinson is being planned for the first home football game at Fife High School on Sept. 7.

Wildlife art winner named

Keith E. Warrick, Lake Stevens, is the winning artist in the Upland Bird Stamp art competition conducted by the Washington Game Department. Warrick's colorful acrylic of two California quail in eastern Washington habitat will be used as the 1980 Upland Bird Permit. This permit must be purchased by hunters to hunt upland birds, but will also be available to collectors.

Outdoor tips and tales

Washington's first saltwater fishing pier south of the Edmonds-Kingston Ferry dock. It provides over 1,000 feet of rail space for fishing and is barrierfree to children, senior citizens and the handicapped.

Two years ago, the Department built an artificial reef adjacent to the pier site to attract more bottom fish to the area. As the fish population increases, so will the number of fish caught from the pier.

Buckley estimated that in June, anglers fishing from the pier averaged less than one fish per day. That average increased to nearly two fish per day by August.

"That's about equal to the boat-fishing catch average for marine fish in the same area," Buckley said.

Even though the department built the pier for marine fish angling, three chinook salmon weighing over 20 pounds have been caught from the pier in the last few weeks, Buckley said.

Medalist

TROY FRANZ, a Thomas Jefferson senior, was a double medal winner at the 1979 National AAU-U.S.A. Sears Junior Olympic Games at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Franz, a 220-pound wrestler, won a bronze medal in Greco-Roman competition and gained fifth place in freestyle. Franz' effort contributed to a first place finish by the Washington State wrestling team at the Games.

SUPPORTERS OF the proposed performing arts center near Panther Lake in Federal Way gathered recently near another lake. This one was at Enchanted Village.

Arts center advocates investing in area's future

by Barbara Butts
Twenty-five dollars seems a small price to pay for "a bit of posterity."

But that is exactly what was purchased by the approximately 150 Festival-in-the-Forest supporters who gathered at Enchanted Village Wednesday evening, said Glynn Ross, general director of the Seattle Opera Association.

Ross was only one of a series of speakers at the $25-per-person fund-raiser, but he eloquently captured the spirit of future glory that hung over the crowd.

For many of them, at least, the champagne, hors d'oeuvres, performances by harpist Bronn Journey and Seattle Opera's soprano Shirley Harned and baritone Michael Deviny seemed to be only extra dividends.

The real investment here was in the future.

And Ross, the man who is credited with originating the dream of the Seattle Opera Wagner festival and the idea of a permanent home for it, sees that investment as an exceedingly good one.

"We are moving into the Era of the Pacific," he said. "We are on the brink of something important. We have an aura of destiny about us."

But Ross, who said it was inevitable that the Northwest become a geo-political hub of commerce, said he wants more out of the future than that.

"Let's be more than a center of commerce," he urged the crowd that had gathered to raise funds for a performing arts center of international import.

And he exhorted those in attendance to go out and recruit others in the drive to push the center to completion.

He was talking to the right group.

Reps. Frank Warnke and Bob Eberle (30th District) were there. The legislators have not let up simply because $5 million in construction funds has been authorized by the state legislature.

They and other members of the Federal Way Festival in the Forest Association, which sponsored the event, are now actively involved in gathering support for the authorization of up to $20 million in federal funds that has been introduced in Congress by U.S. Rep. Norm Dicks, D-6th District.

Mrs. Dicks, who spoke for her husband at the affair, shared the podium with Robert C. Anderson, director of the state Department of Commerce and Economic Development and David McCraney, a representative of the U.S. secretary of interior, among others.

The Department of the Interior is the first hurdle the bill must leap in its journey through Congress.

These are people who seem destined to play important roles in the realization of Ross's $25 million dream of an international, as well as regional, center that will sit on 30 acres of land to be donated by Weyerhaeuser Company's Quadrant Corp. amid 110 acres of forest.

And they and the others who attended the affair were challenged to grasp that destiny and, in the process, have a stake in the future that lies ahead.

Library hosts Aesop fables

SINGLE HOMEOWNERS GROWING

Last year 15% of all FHA-insured mortgages on existing homes were made to single persons. And the rate of single homeowners is growing annually.

If you're a renting single and this thought has occurred to you, you have some hard thinking to do before you decide to make the plunge.

Not everybody is suited for the responsibilities of ownership. It's a serious commitment. You'll find yourself worrying about things like local tax rates, real estate values, trash collection schedules, and a variety of maintenance chores.

On the plus side, it's a rare homeowner who doesn't feel a tingle of pride in ownership, and who doesn't gain satisfaction from watching his or her equity grow month by month. And at income tax time, there's that nice glow you feel as you chop the cost of mortgage interest and property taxes off the top of your taxable income...not to mention the overwhelming opportunity for a decent profit when it comes time to sell.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate please phone or drop in at your local DEL BIANCO REALTY INC., offices. We're here to help!

HOUSE OF THE MONTH

1926 update preserves much of the past

by Debbie Ertel

(Editor's note: This "House of the Month" feature has been selected on merits of design, decor, or other special features.)

The curved driveway which leads to the pillared front porch of the Al Sanchez home in Seahurst is reminiscent of the era in which the house was built and is a foretaste of things to come. Although the Sanchezes have done extensive remodeling in the eight years they have lived in the house, they have managed to maintain the character and charm the house originally possessed without sacrificing modern day convenience.

As you step through the heavy front door flanked by leaded glass windows, you enter a large foyer. While foyers generally tend to be formal, this one is friendly and invites you to come in and meet the family who lives here. A large upright piano sits against one wall, surrounded by family photographs. A Mexican doll with real hair, handmade by Sanchez' mother, rests on a deacon's bench across from the piano.

To the left is the formal dining room. The chandelier over the dining table is the original one. Large leaded glass windows on two sides provide plenty of light. A door here opens directly onto the family kitchen.

The kitchen required the most extensive remodeling and updating, but the results are a unique blend of old and new that leaves an impression that the room has always looked this way. The range top has been built into an arched alcove. A vent fan is concealed behind the arch, Lush greenery, curved driveway and pillared porch create a simple, yet elegant, approach to the home.

ly opposite the foyer is the stairway leading to the sleeping quarters upstairs. To the left of the stairway is a small powder room with extra closet and shelf space concealed behind the door. To the right is another door which leads to the back yard and the basement.

The stairway is well lit with a large window which overlooks the back yard. Bulletin boards with school pictures of the Sanchez children along with other memorabilia decorate the walls. To the right is 13-year-old Tony Sanchez' bedroom. Wallpaper sporting antique cars covers the walls and sets the tone for the red, white and blue color scheme. A window-lit, walk-in closet serves as a study area as well as providing closet space.

Next door is the large cheerful master bedroom. Again, a window-lit, walk-in closet serves as a dressing room as well stalled a new roof, new wiring, most of the plumbing, new furnace and ductwork as well as an electronic air filter. What they did not replace and what gives the house so much character are things like the leaded glass windows, original doors with glass door knobs, original molding and stair railing, coved ceilings, stuccoed walls, and in several rooms, the original light fixtures.

Parting with the house will not be easy for the Sanchez family, but a job transfer will take the family to Atlanta in the fall.

The house sits on a double lot and boasts 3,500 square feet of living space including the ready-to-be-finished basement. It is listed for $110,000 with Liz Armstrong of John L. Scott in Burien. Hours of the open house are 2 to 5 p.m. today. The address is 15238 22nd Ave. S.W.

The large foyer serves double duty as an inviting entrance to the rest of the home and a music alcove where the Sanchez children practice piano lessons.

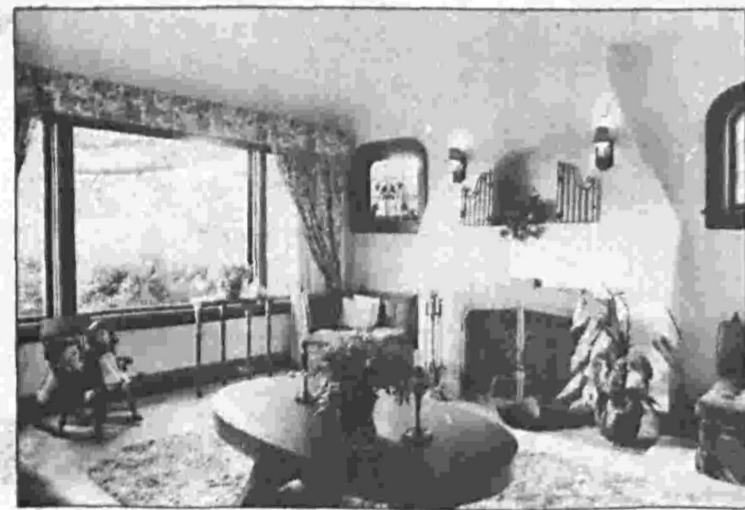

and a spice rack which has been built directly into the wall puts Mrs. Sanchez' favorite spices conveniently at hand. Deep cupboards provide storage space for bulky pots and pans. The cupboard doors are also original, but have been sanded and restained to match the rest of the woodwork in the house. A long drop leaf table with benches provides ample seating space for family dinners. An old library table fitted with casters and a formica countertop now serves as a roll-about work table. A shelf underneath holds a canister set and a drawer provides storage space for rolling pins and other essentials. This, as well as all the major appliances, is one of the things the Sanchez' will be leaving behind when they sell the house.

Another door opens off the kitchen into the hallway. At the opposite end is the living room. Triple arches set it apart from the library alcove directly opposite it. A built-in floor-to-ceiling bookcase along one wall is curved at the top to fit snugly against the coved ceilings. Another leaded glass door here leads into the side yard.

At the center of the hallway and directas a closet. White shuttered windows and yellow accessories give the room a sunlit feeling even on a dreary, rainy day.

The Sanchez' two teenage daughters share the third bedroom. This was once two small rooms, but the Sanchezes knocked out a dividing wall and created one large cheerful room. A wall full of ribbons testify to the girls' favorite pastime - horseback riding.

Directly opposite their room is the main bathroom, done in soft pinks and white.

When the Sanchez' moved into the house eight years ago, it was completely surrounded by tall laurel hedges and giant trees which blocked much of the daylight. They pulled out the laurel that ran down both sides of the property and across the front and removed select trees to let in more light. The yard still abounds with trees and shrubs which give it a park-like atmosphere. They left the 12-foot-laurel hedge across the back of the property to give the back yard complete privacy. Underground sprinklers were installed several years ago for easy maintenance.

In recent years the Sanchez' have in-

A (ROSE) LETTER FROM A SATISFIED CUSTOMER

Dear Sir,
This is a letter concerning the best real estate lady that we have ever dealt with. Dorothy Miller!! I can't begin to tell you the problems that we have had in the past with real estate people...not showing up after they called and made an appointment...promising to call and not calling...advertising our house as "open" and not telling us...telling us we are to have an open house and then no one showing up to hold it open...these are just a few of the frustrations we suffered. Then along came Dorothy. She has ALWAYS done what she said she'd do. That is the best compliment I could pay anyone. Also, even after our house sold, she has followed through to make sure it would close. Also while our house was for sale, she put three lock boxes on it so that any of the multiples could show it--it paid off because REMI Sold it! She's a gem!!
Just thought I'd drop a note to let you know what kind of a lady you have working for you. A company is only as good as the people they have working for them and you have a winner with Dorothy.
Sincerely,
Barbara Wells
2801 SW 315th
Federal Way, Wash.
***Congratulations, Dorothy, from your Broker!!***

Boeing HQ

Appeals seek rezone denial

by Carolyn Logan

Three appeal arguments have been submitted to challenge the County Zoning Examiner's recommendation in favor of reclassifications permitting the Boeing Headquarters, proposed for a site west of Sea-Tac Airport.

Appellants are the Westside Hilltop Survival Committee, the "Westside Residential Community" (WRC) and Boeing itself. The WRC is a proper name for a group of residents who live west of the airport. The group does not represent all homeowners living west of the airport.

Boeing is not appealing the recommendation for a rezoning from single family to maximum density multi-units (RM 900). Instead, the firm wants to lift the restriction on the number of flights permitted for the helicopter. Examiner Bruce Lasing recommended granting an unclassified-use permit, subject to limitations, including no more than 10 takeoffs and 10 landings per week.

The Westside Hilltop Survival Committee asks that the rezoning and permit be denied.

THE COMMITTEE'S grounds for the appeal are that the rezoning "constitutes special-interest legislation and spot zoning."

In addition, the committee's lawyer, Roger Leed, charges that the Environmental Impact Statement "is legally insufficient."

Leed claims that the proposed rezoning involves a 30-acre site, despite a County Council ordinance that restricts rezoning for the headquarters to a five-acre area within the 30 acres.

The 30 acres were designated for open space in the Highline and Sea-Tac Communities Plans, but the plans were amended by the County Council to permit the headquarters. The site, east of 12th Avenue South, between South 167th and 172nd streets, if extended, was envisioned as a buffer between the airport and the Westside residential community.

"If the Zoning Examiner's report is accepted," Leed argued, "there will obviously be a conflict between the Highline Communities Plan and the rezoning, since the rezoning will embrace 25 acres beyond that affected by the plan change, assuming, for the purposes of this argument, that the plan change is valid."

The examiner's report states that "A total of no more than five acres of ground area shall be utilized for all of the proposed structures to be located on the subject property."

Leed also objected to the rezoning, claiming that it conflicts with a King County Comprehensive Plan policy which provides that open space not be diverted to non-open space use.

BOTH LEED and Pauline Conradi, on behalf of the Westside Residential Community, issue a challenge on one key point: Proponents need to demonstrate that conditions have substantially changed since the original zoning.

Mrs. Conradi, a Westside resident, cites a State Supreme Court case, Parkridge vs. Seattle, in which the high court reversed Seattle's decision on a rezoning.

The court held that the applicant must meet the criteria of burden of proof, demonstrating conditions have changed, according to Mrs. Conradi.

"The only change in our neighborhood or the intended rezoning area was the purchase of the rezoned land from homeowners to place it in a greenbelt buffer area," she protests.

She points out the abrupt zone transition: Across the street from the site is single family zoning. Zoning plans generally call for gradual transition between different densities. Mrs. Conradi also asks for denial of the rezoning.

THE NEXT step is for appellants to present oral testimony before the County Council's Land Use Appeals Committee.

The committee's recommendation passes to the County Council for final action, except that the council's decision may be appealed to King County Superior Court. In conjunction with the initial application, Leed filed lawsuits against Boeing, King County and the Port of Seattle (the landowner) in Superior Court. The King County-Boeing case is scheduled for a court hearing on Oct. 8. Leed's appeal raises many of the same issues as in the two pending suits.
