

Money

Harder to get, but some to be available

by Loren Bliss
Spokespersons for a number of local banks said last week that recent moves by the federal reserve guarantee that there'll be a credit crunch in the Puget Sound area.

But the banks differ as to how they're confronting the difficulties posed by soaring interest rates and shrinking supplies of money.

National banks — those that are members of the Federal Reserve System — are entitled to loan money at rates higher than the 12 percent fixed by Washington's tough anti-usury law.

Officials of some of these banks, Pacificbank, Seafirst, Rainier and Puget Sound National among them, say that their ability to lend at higher interest rates will enable them to maintain their consumer credit operations.

But the officials all agree that money will be harder to borrow. BY CONTRAST, savings banks and savings and loan associations aren't covered by the federal law that permits the higher interest rates.

And some of these institutions are already moving to cut off or sharply curtail their consumer credit operations.

One of these, the Home Savings and Loan Association, which has a branch in Burien, stopped lending mortgage money and money for all other kinds of consumer activities on Oct. 1.

Two Seattle savings banks, Fidelity Mutual and University Federal, have also stopped making mortgage loans.

But Bill Eske, an assistant vice-president of Washington Mutual Savings Bank, says that his organization is still making mortgage and consumer loans and will continue to do so for as long as possible.

"Like some institutions, we may eventually have to get out of that market," he said Thursday, "but we're hoping it won't be the case."

STATE BANKS, because they too are not exempted from the 12 percent consumer credit limit, may eventually face the same difficulties.

But a spokesperson for Seattle Trust said Friday morning that the bank is still offering loans at 12 percent and will continue to do so.

Seattle Trust is a state bank, one chartered by Washington rather than by the Federal Reserve System.

"We will continue to serve the consumer community," the spokesperson said, "because we are continuing to accept consumer deposits."

The national banks, meanwhile, are taking various steps either raised their interest rates or are considering whether to do so or not.

Seafirst and Rainier have already increased their consumer rates to 13 percent, and executives at Pacificbank and Puget Sound were weighing what action they might take. Peoples Bank executives were not available for comment.

THE CRUNCH WAS precipitated by several factors, one of which was a federal reserve move raising the sum of money that banks are required to keep on deposit to cover emergencies.

This move effectively reduced the amount of money that is in circulation, bank executives explained.

Another factor is Washington's interest limit, which forces banks not exempted from it to direct their funds into commercial rather than consumer loans.

The reason is that in order to pay for their operations, banks must be able to lend money at more than it costs them to obtain it.

Browning feels school should be a challenge

by Ann Hagen
In room 110 at Lake Grove Elementary, the enthusiastic and lively kindergartners worked in small groups. Some were putting together puzzles; others sat quietly with their books and a few played noisily with one another.

Carpeted, with brightly painted pictures and designs hanging from the ceiling and on bulletin boards, the room appeared similar to the 16 other kindergarten classes in the district.

But, here there's a difference — a big difference when you realize that teaching five-year-olds has been a job traditionally handled by women.

This class is taught by a man. Harold Browning, new to the district this year, is the only male teacher instructing at the kindergarten level in Federal Way.

Instructing 45 youngsters in two sessions, Browning said he's doing what he enjoys more than anything. Sometimes, he said, "he feels guilty for getting paid for doing something he loves so much."

"It's like getting a double salary. It makes you feel good about coming to work every day," he added. "When you no longer feel that way, you should get out."

A SOFT SPOKEN MAN in his mid 30's, Browning said he became interested in elementary education while working his way through a BA and MA in elementary education at Seattle Community College and the University of Washington.

He said he looked at the way kindergartners were being taught and decided that they weren't being challenged enough. Pointing out that he saw a lot of negative things happening, he said many teachers approached kindergarten as a place for naptime, finger-painting and juice.

"They were looking at it as a separate entity instead of seeing it as a connective to first grade with all the implied ties in reading, mathematics and handwriting," he said firmly.

A firm believer in getting the kids started in the basics, Browning said some teachers felt that a child's psyche was disrupted if handwriting was taught "right off the bat." There was a feeling that fine motor skills were not developed, he said.

However, he said he's found that just the opposite is true. "Kindergarten students are impressed with academic excellence," he said. "They take great pride in writing letters and numbers and being able to recognize words."

Browning groups his students according to ability in reading and math, however, the social activities involve the class as a whole.

Browning said his main emphasis is on helping each student feel good about himself, enabling him to be responsible for his own behavior.

With quiet understanding and a positive approach, he encourages youngsters to think for themselves by delving into the why's of their actions.

When they've done something wrong, he asks them what they could do to improve the situation next time. He firmly believes that "you can't be dictatorial and then expect individual responsibility."

Concerned about the way many kindergartners are tossed between several babysitters and school, Browning said he'd like to see them in school for a full day with the rest of the students.

Right now, he said most of his students come from homes where mothers are working. "The kids are gone all day long, often more than eight hours a day. Sometimes there are three adults in charge," he said. He said he thinks the kids deserve more continuity and constructive direction.

How do parents take to his somewhat radical ideas? He said he's been getting nothing but favorable reactions to his ideas and approaches. "There's so much positive enthusiasm, I can't get over it," he said referring to the school staff as well.

At first, however, there was a tendency on the part of students and parents to expect a controlling, forceful father figure who expected children to perform with "machine-like production."

Affectionate and understanding, Browning said that's an image he's trying to change. "It's important for children to know that it's okay for a male to be open and loving as well as strict and disciplined."

With the changing family structures where there are many single-parent homes, it's important that young children be exposed to both men and women to preserve a balance.

What do the youngsters think of a Mr. in the classroom? Browning said for both he and the children, time often goes by so fast it makes them wonder where it went. "There are times when we all hate to go home."

Local impact expected

Legislature requests relief for nursing home patients

by Nathalie Weber
The state legislature last week requested that steps be taken to remedy the bureaucratic error that may sacrifice the quality of care in nursing homes across the state, but there is little hope that the governor will take any action on the issue.

The House appropriations subcommittee for human services requested in a letter to the governor last week that nursing home employees be paid a wage of 90 percent of what hospital employees in the state receive.

The subcommittee members agreed that the legislature had mandated such a parity during the past session, and that such a wage increase should be granted.

Whether or not Governor Dixy Lee Ray appropriates the funds necessary to grant that wage increase will have local ramifications. According to Bud Jacobs, part owner of Federal Way Convalescent, the increase promised by the legislature already has been applied to salaries at his nursing home. If the money is not available, the lack of wages could likely result in cutting back manpower — and sacrificing the quality of patient care.

THE CONFLICT between what the legislature intended — 90 percent parity — and what the distributing organization, the Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS), initiated as the wage increase program is confusing at best.

While the legislature contends DSHS was incompetent in its study and recommendations of what the wage increases would cost the state, DSHS says the legislature was negligent in budgeting the additional dollars needed and in allowing enough time to initiate the program.

Letters were sent to nursing homes across the state — including Federal Way Convalescent — in early July, indicating what the wage increase would be. A few weeks later another letter was distributed, indicating that the original amount was too high.

DSHS SAID the first figures were incorrect because they were based on a study conducted six months before. "The staffing levels are up over that time," DSHS Secretary Gerald Thompson said last week. He stressed that the first appropriations were clearly marked "tentative," and that no changes should have been made on the basis of the first letter.

But Rep. Bob Eberle, R-30th District, who has been working the problem on the local level, and Rep. Alex Deccio of Yakima, co-chairman of the human services subcommittee, contend that the margin of error was too great. The legislature figures that the amount requested by DSHS for the wage parity was off by some $24 million.

In an attempt to appropriate as much of that amount as possible — even though it wasn't budgeted — the subcommittee now is requesting that the governor O.K. what is known as "forward funding." Those funds then would come from the supplemental budget.

But neither Deccio or the DSHS secretary think the governor will support the proposition. Thompson of DSHS states flatly that "for this biennium there will not be an increase in wages for patient care."

Deccio responds that if the governor chooses to take no action "she's going to have to live with the problem."

"None of that money is going into the nursing home pockets. It's for better patient care. If it's not there, the patients will suffer," Deccio said.

Federal Way Convalescent owners agree. With wage increases based on the first appropriation letter already allocated, they will be forced to cut back the number of hours employees work once the second, and smaller, appropriation begins to dwindle. If that happens, it will likely be the patients that suffer the most.

DM raid nets $93,000 in drugs

Over $93,000 in illicit drugs were seized in an early morning drug arrest in Des Moines Thursday morning.

Three Des Moines Police Officers and a Sergeant assisted Seattle Police narcotics detectives when they served a search warrant at 4:10 a.m. on a residence at 23014 - 17th Ave. S.

Two residents of the address, a 34-year-old man and 25-year-old woman, were booked on charges of suspicion of narcotics.

Seized in the arrest were 17 pounds of hashish, with an estimated street value of $87,180, and 65 grams of cocaine, valued at about $6,500. Two-hundred tablets of speed, an amphetamine, were also seized, bringing the total estimated street value of the drugs to $93,730.

The arrests were the result of a five-month long investigation.

Street Talk: 'They have no rights as humans.'

Henry Wentz

I don't see why it would make a difference. They have their place. That's the way they want to live. If I were young and raising my children, I wouldn't want them teaching my children. But what difference will it make with adults?

Cindi Barney

I don't see why not. It's no problem unless it conflicts with normal duties. If they do not make approaches to other people, it's all right. It's just like religion. Everyone is entitled to have his own beliefs.

Don Wind

No. They have no rights as humans. It's unbiblical, an abomination before the Lord. However, they have duties as citizens. I spent four years in service and know it's difficult to control them in the military. We could put them in special camps, like slave labor camps — although I realize it would be demeaning — and have them do construction labor.

Tom Fisher

I have served in the military for 22 years and think it would be disruptive in general. In a military organization men have to live really close together, and this is still against the feelings of most men. It would be all right in certain specific situations, but the military is not set up that way.

Does farmlands bill infringe on freedom

Editor:

The organizers of the Farmlands Protection Act promote this bill as a voluntary program. Yet the need to enact legislation implies that there is something to be enforced. In this case that something is another arbitrary tax on the people.

The charge is frequently leveled at Americans, by foreign citizens and even by our own clergymen that we are "too materialistic" a people—that we are not moral. The person who, supposedly, is "too materialistic" is said to care too much for things of the world. To label a person thus necessitates a relative and subjective judgment.

"Too materialistic" is not a phrase that can fairly be used to define that innate desire within the human being to have the resources to continually improve and upgrade his quality of life. This is a positive human instinct. Objectively speaking, "too materialistic" is only the willingness of any man to seek to raise his own standard of living and to improve his own quality of life at the expense of anyone and everyone when his own honest efforts fail to produce this end...

...The basic issues at stake here are not the preservation of farmlands and the assessment of taxes. The basic issue at stake here is the preservation of freedom and morality.

Freedom is not an ideal or quality that drifts on the air like pollen and is assimilated by inhalation. Freedom exists in the material world. It is a concrete object for which men have willingly died since the dawn of human history. Freedom requires absolute respect for the life, properties, and the mind of each individual. Within the confines of civilized societies freedom is more than intellectual—it must manifest itself as a politico-economic reality or there is no such reality at all! Freedom is realized through purposive human action. It is not automatic. To be free entails the practice of freedom. It requires the application of objective ethics and morality. Only a free society is a moral society. Freedom is morality in full bloom.

I have no doubt from the careful wording of the Farmlands Protection Bill that it is legal. I don't question that it will stand up to Constitutional scrutiny. Even one such as myself can see that the authors of the Constitution left many "interpretive loopholes" in their final draft of this document. Was this the result of their desire that laws providing for the individual rights might always be amplified as new situations presented themselves? Would our founding fathers ever have dreamed that only two hundred short years later we would be using these "interpretive loopholes" as the tools of oppression? As the means to unwittingly resell ourselves into that same slavery for which they spilled their blood to liberate all future generations of Americans?...

...I, too, would like to see the farmlands preserved so will someone please convince me by November that this Bill is not only legal and constitutional, but that it does not infringe on my neighbor's freedom and that it is moral. Thank you.

Should homosexuals be allowed to serve in the military?

Ron Symes

I guess so, but I can understand why some other persons don't want them in there. There's a lot of times when it could be embarrassing and could cause quite a bit of trouble. It would depend on the individual. Some would be fine; others wouldn't, depending on how aggressive they are.

Ursula Helmer

I can't see any reason why not, if they are naturally that way. It's a personal thing and should not affect performance of duties.

Donna Brady

Yes. Anything sexual should be a personal thing. It has nothing to do with doing your job. I am in the army reserves and leave for basic training this weekend. If a woman makes a pass at me while I'm in the showers, I'm not going to take offense.

Cheryl Wagner

Why not? They are a minority and should have equal rights. I don't see any reason why they can't be in the military if they don't approach others.

Crime not school's fault

Editor:

I have noticed that in your "crime" reports, where juveniles are concerned, you often mention the school that they attend.

To me, this seems senseless. The schools are only responsible for their students on school property during school hours. You don't ever mention all the responsible youngsters and their schools.

Shaming or ridiculing too often produces defiance, not responsibility.

Caution: new driver gets the green light

You can always tell when teen-agers are getting the itch to drive the "old man's" car.

At 14, they start out simply enough. "Hey, can I start the car, mom... I know how. I know how. It needs to be warmed up so you can go to the store." (I don't know why they think I need to make 16 trips per day.)

A few minutes later you hear these weird noises that sound like you just lost your silverware drawer down the garbage disposal. Then the engine, that normally purrs like a kitten takes off with the roar of a 747.

"It's got an automatic choke. Get your foot off the gas," you holler trying to be heard above the noise.

"Don't worry, mom. I've got it now."

That goes on for a few weeks and the next question is, "Hey mom, can I turn the car around so you can get an easy start... By the way, we need cat food." (They figure they've got a sympathetic ear if they bring in the cat, dog, or hamster. Who could turn down one more trip to the store for a poor starving beast.)

TEN TIMES A DAY the kid is out there turning the car around, shifting gears (even though it's an automatic) and flashing on the lights, radio and windshield wipers.

"Gas is getting scarce and expensive. The car only gets three miles a gallon if it's never beyond the start and roll stage," he's told.

"But, I need the practice. You wouldn't want me to get in a wreck, would you..." (Heaven forbid that I should be responsible for that.)

But, all the months of practice go out the window when he actually gets behind the wheel, his driver's permit securely glued to his wallet so it won't get lost.

The first day for the big test drive, son eased the car out of the driveway, starting and stopping like he had wonder glue on the noise.

I looked down and he had one foot on the brake and the other on the gas. "One foot for both," I said "and preferably not at the same time."

He slowly eased around the corner at an undeveloped housing area. "This driving's a piece of cake," he said looking like he'd just discovered his first whisker.

"You'll have better luck if you get your front wheels off the curb," I said caustically knowing there was no way I'd ever dampen his enthusiasm. He sleeps with his hands permanently locked in the 2 o'clock position and his foot on the gas.

Returning to the driveway, he rattled on about his superior skills commenting on whipping around corners, backing into the driveway and swerving past rocks. I couldn't help but remind him he did fine but he'd definitely have to pick up the speed. You can get a ticket for driving five miles an hour.

THE NEXT TRIP, eldest son decided to pass out free advice from his spot on the floor where he'd barricaded himself in with pillows.

As the car sped up the hill, he leaped over the front seat and yelled "Did you see that... He burned rubber a mile long and he did it with the brake on."

A few minutes later, it was "Did you see how close he came to those dogs hanging around the garbage cans and telephone pole..."

When we returned, eldest son steadied his knees and decided to drop the advice. "Whatever you do, don't park too close to my rod," were his parting words.

But, the real test comes when they take to the main roads with TRAFFIC. I keep remembering driver's ed class stories where one girl, petrified out of her mind, stopped in the middle of the highway and refused to go another foot. Still another girl overcompensated for the power steering and ended up in traffic pointed the wrong direction.

But, maneuvering like a pro, the kid managed to keep up with the traffic, stopped just before the cross walks, not on them and even slowed down at the caution lights instead of stepping on the gas.

Now, if I could just shut him up when I drive. It's a constant batter of "Slow down, you're going 50 in a 40 mile an hour zone;" "You call that a stop..." and "What's the matter. Doesn't your blinker work..." It's amazing how fast they become experts.

Forward March

KIM COOGAN shows Cue Wilson and the other drill team members how she looks in the sequined vest.

WORKING ON A ROUTINE, Cue Wilson, Cindi Toner, Ginger Peterson, Lori Leach and Janell Panida concentrate on their steps.

"Hup, two, three, four. Look to your right. Let's keep those lines straight," yelled Cherry Goudeau pacing off steps around the gym. "You're looking great."

The session was one of many held each week for 27 girls involved in the Thomas Jefferson High School Drill Team. The only one of its kind in the Federal Way district, their aim is to put on first class dance and marching entertainment.

They perform every other week at the Federal Way Stadium, giving their school mates that extra bit of school spirit that can sometimes make the difference between winning or losing a game.

At each performance, they try to do something just a little bit different, said Goudeau. Sometimes it's the change of costume or a whole new routine. There's always something that will keep the audience wondering "what's next," said Goudeau.

Called the "Raiderettes", the girls were organized last year. However, their routines have been mostly dance novelty acts that required little in the way of costuming.

This year, the emphasis will be on becoming an accomplished marching drill team. The change will mean that girls spend 20 hours a week practicing. "The girls have to be dedicated," said Goudeau.

Goudeau, who also teaches history and supervises the cheerleaders, said she'd like the girls to go to competition next spring. She doesn't think they'll place, but it will be good experience, she said. "Eventually, we want to go to the nationwide contest in California."

But, right now, their main problem is raising the money to pay for their outfits including several changes which cost them a cool $3,500. With no support from the school district, they have scheduled candy, stuffed animals, and Christmas wrap sales at various shopping centers near by.

Goudeau said she's chosen merchandise that sells for under $3 where the seller gets 50 percent of the profit. "It's the only thing to do when you need large sums of money in a hurry," she added. "There's no big money to made inside the school."

In addition, she said she'd like to schedule a march-a-thon in the spring. "We're not part of the athletic department, and we have to pay for all of this ourselves."

Undaunted, Goudeau said she's got confidence in the group. "They're coming around so good. I'm really proud of them."

Sheriff seeks more officers

by Carolyn Logan
 Sheriff Lawrence Waldt said Wednesday that he has asked the County Executive for "a substantial increase" in patrolmen for next year.

He wants County Executive John Spellman to increase his 1980 budget to permit hiring more officers. Spellman's proposed 1980 budget will be unveiled Monday before the County Council, which makes the final decision on what should be funded. Budget deliberations typically consume several weeks.

Waldt said he told Spellman that additional police would be assigned to the precinct serving Federal Way and to other precincts. The sheriff would not disclose how many.

However, Waldt cautioned, that distribution could change because actual assignments would not be made until after officers are trained. The basis of assignment is twofold, he explained, both the crime rate in an area and the number of calls citizens made to report crimes. The department keeps data on calls.

A COURTHOUSE insider said Waldt asked to add 44 patrolmen to the present 289.

Waldt wouldn't disclose how many men he requested. He observed that it is rare for a department to get 100 percent of its budget request.

The sheriff is optimistic that Spellman will give him some additional help. "Within the realities of the other county departments' needs, he is giving us a high priority," Waldt explained.

He said he is beginning to negotiate with the state Law Enforcement Officers Training Commission to begin training new officers. However, citizens can't expect officers on the beat by Jan. 1, he added, since training consumes several months.

There have been lags in the past when the Waldt's department has had vacancies, but had not received lists of potential officers from the Civil Service Commission. The commission tests and rates job applicants; Waldt's department hires applicants.

When asked if there would be a lag because of the commission, Waldt replied, "The commission backlog is being resolved. There is almost no backlog now." Nineteen officers, approved in the 1979 budget, are in the training process now, according to Waldt.

No opposition for Pierce bus measure

With the election only four weeks away and organized opposition seemingly nonexistent, advocates of a measure to expand public transport in Pierce County are becoming increasingly optimistic.

The measure, which would extend Tacoma Transit service into Federal Way and probably link it with Metro service, thereby creating a regional network, calls for an increase in sales taxes of three-tenths of a percent.

Only Pierce County residents in Tacoma and its immediate environs will vote on the question.

A spokesperson for the proposal's advocates said Friday that one reason for its apparent popularity is that it would replace a tax of $1 per month per household that is currently levied against Tacoma residents.

The per-household tax, also a transport measure, is attached to utility bills.

METRO TRANSIT officials said recently that they'd welcome the proposed expansion of service.

They said that if the measure is approved, it might be arranged for Metro and Tacoma Transit to share park-and-ride facilities in the Federal Way area.

Theoretically, such a setup would be a step toward a transport system that could eventually link Everett with Seattle, Tacoma and even Olympia.

At present, it is possible to ride the bus from Federal Way to Tacoma or vice versa, but the trip takes more than an hour and involves some complicated transfers.

But the increased service would make it possible to travel between Tacoma and Seattle without difficulty, advocates say.

The measure has been endorsed by a number of Tacoma and Pierce County civic organizations, churches, political groups and the Tacoma Area Chamber of Commerce.

AMONG THE organizations is the Associated Ministries of Tacoma and Pierce County, which in a recently issued statement argued that the proposal "touches upon our stewardship of God's earth."

The statement said that "because Americans with 6 percent of the world's population consume 33 percent of the world's petroleum, 44 percent of the world's coal and 63 percent of its natural gas, we feel the issue far transcends our immediate community."

Luther Kriefall, the president of the association, also said that passage of the proposal would "work to the advantage particularly of the handicapped, the aged, and those without private transportation."

Tacoma Transit officials say the measure would expand the system's bus fleet by about 60 buses.

How would Hoppe foe run office?

by Carolyn Logan
 County Assessor Harley Hoppe wants to know what his challenger would do, if elected, to correct alleged improper assessing practices.

The key issue in the hot campaign has been the charge by challenger Hank McGuire and others that their studies indicate that Hoppe's assessments favor the rich and penalize the poor.

"When you detect a problem," McGuire said, "you try to compensate for it. I would investigate, perhaps finding that the computer doesn't differentiate between oak and other floors, for example. Then I would make adjustments in the computer."

"I'd ask whether appraisers are using adequate appraising methods for more expensive homes. I would absolutely check into their methods."

"Is McGuire going to chase sales?" Hoppe asked on Monday. "Chasing sales" is when the appraiser bases the assessed valuation on the last sale of the property. If a house sold in 1930, that 1930 price would establish the basis for assessed valuation.

McGuire dismissed California's chasing sales system as "very foolish." So he and Hoppe oppose chasing sales because it creates tax inequity.

INSTEAD, McGuire said, "I would use an assessing method very similar to the one used by Hoppe."

McGuire favors using comparable sales to establish assessed valuation of homes. If sales are unavailable, he said he'd use "cost less depreciation" (construction cost of the home, minus depreciation).

This Democratic challenger also pledged to improve office management.

"I would institute performance standards for employees. And I would have a feedback system. Say, the office is supposed to inspect half the county every two years. That may divide up to 15 inspections per day per person. After the first week, if they're only doing 14, you move to make changes," McGuire explained.

In rebuttal, Hoppe said a feedback system "is an idea we pioneered here seven years ago. The idea of doing so many appraisals per person in a day has never been permitted. This office is unionized, the union has resisted that."

MOREOVER, McGuire emphasized, his own sense of ethics and honesty would be a remedy.

McGuire charged, "I would not order people to manipulate reports."

He referred to a former Hoppe employee who said a county assessment report to the state had been manipulated. Al Wilson, former program planning division manager, said, "From what I saw of the sample (used in the report), it had been manipulated." Wilson did not say Hoppe manipulated the report, and he said manipulation was not skewed (slanted) to adhere to SDR requirements.

"We didn't manipulate anything," Hoppe retorted. He said he uses the SDR's guidelines for reports, and works cooperatively with SDR.

But the assessor's office suppressed Parke Gaston's study of 11,000 properties, charged Gaston, the first Hoppe employee to assail Hoppe. Gaston's study finds that homes over $75,000 in value are generally underassessed, while homes under that value are generally overassessed, compared to average assessment.

His study used a different assessing method from that practiced in the assessor's office, Gaston said.

"Sales are a better indicator of market value than assessed value," this systems analyst said, adding that the assessor's method obscures bias. "I don't think that the other school of thought has any valid basis."

Hoppe refuted Gaston's findings as fallacious, releasing a memo citing evidence that the reverse prevailed: Poor property owners get a better deal than rich owners.

Aides lead seminar

County Assessor Harley Hoppe's staffers gave a cram course on appraisal practices Friday to about two dozen reporters.

Hoppe's Nov. 6 election opponent, Hank McGuire, wasn't there. But two of his aides were there, complete with a tape recorder to tape the proceedings.

Also attending was Parke Gaston, a Hoppe employee who released a study critical of Hoppe's assessing practices. Friday was Gaston's day off.

Hoppe did not attend this session. When he invited reporters, he said it was intended to be "strictly educational and definitely non-political."

Fred Duncan, who supervises a unit of appraisers, explained how home appraisals are made. Recent comparable sales in an area are collected to begin establishing assessed valuation, he said. The appraiser also draws on the "cost to replace" method, he said. Cost to replace means how much it would cost to replace a home, less accrued depreciation.

Then there is a field inspection and a series of steps to achieve tax equity.

Tib Schreiner, accounting division manager, traced the history of valuation cycles in King County. "This year we are revaluing 170,000 homes," he said, adding that a two-year cycle of revaluation will be completed in 1980. "We anticipate revaluation every two years," he added, "if the market continues at the clip it is going at now."

Here's how the boat tax works

by Carolyn Logan
 A Midway boat owner vowed to fight the boat tax. He angrily wrote state officials that he'd either stop his UGN contribution to compensate, or he'd go into the charter "business," hoping his 28-foot craft would be exempt.

But boats used for business are not exempt, according to Scott Sheeran, House Revenue Committee staff coordinator. "Only ships used for interstate and foreign commerce are exempt from local taxes," he added, "but they still have to pay the state tax."

This boat owner, and others, may find another way out.

For one thing, County Assessor Harley Hoppe said the U.S. Coast Guard's lists of boat owners sent to him last week were out-of-date.

For another thing, Hoppe said that he didn't get any additional personnel to collect the boat tax, based on what the County Executive will propose for the 1980 budget on Monday.

HOWEVER, Hoppe expects the Coast Guard's decision to release lists of registered boat owners will stir some owners to voluntarily pay the tax. Previously, the Coast Guard refused to give assessors its lists of boat owners on the grounds that revealing them would be an invasion of privacy.

A.L. Pricco, manager of the assessor's Personal Property Division, also encourages boat owners to step forward and pay this personal-property boat tax.

His office is located in the King County Administration Building, room 807. Hours are 8 a.m. to 5:15 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays. The office phone is 344-3914.

The way it works is that the owner declares a certain value for his craft. This is based on the cost of the boat, and the year acquired, less accrued depreciation. And there are "blue books" which list values, just as there are car "blue books." Staffers work with the owner to determine value; then assessed valuation notices are sent out. Unhappy owners can appeal value to the County Board of Equalization, just as property owners appeal their property taxes.

ALL BOAT owners must pay the state levy of $7.63 per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

If a boat is valued at $10,000, that would amount to about $76.

In addition, the owner is charged 20 percent of local taxes. In the Highline School District, 20 percent amounts to about $2.34 per $1,000 of assessed valuation, while in the Federal Way School District, 20 percent is about 82 cents per $1,000.

That calculates to about $23 for the Highline owner of a $10,000 boat; $8 for the Federal Way owner of a $10,000 boat, plus the $76 state tax.

"Gosh," said the Midway boat owner, "that isn't as bad as I expected." He decided to pay his tax, joining owners of boats of several million in assessed valuation already on the tax rolls. Those boats are mostly tugs and barges, Pricco said.

The boat tax has existed for years, but has not been actively levied. Many assessors maintain it is difficult to locate owners, and that it costs more to collect the tax than the amount paid.

16-year-old hurt in Pacific Highway crash

A 16-year-old Federal Way resident was treated and released by Auburn General Hospital Wednesday evening following a two-car collision on Pacific Highway South in front of the Jack-in-the-Box restaurant at South 312th Street, the Washington State Patrol reported Friday.

Troopers said that D o d i e J .

Schackelford, 255 S. 310th St., suffered an apparent back injury in the 9:20 p.m. mishap.

Schackelford, troopers said, was the driver of a vehicle that collided with a pickup truck operated by Francis R. Pitman, 23, of 24424 15th Ave. S., Kent. Pitman was reportedly uninjured.

Pitman's vehicle was stopped in the northbound lane at the time of the impact, troopers said.

Few crimes reported during last few days

Only a few incidents of criminal activity were reported in Federal Way between

Wednesday and Friday, King County Police records showed Friday morning.

The incidents included three burglaries and a handful of larcenies.

None of the incidents involved losses equal to or greater than $500.

Police said unofficially that the drop in criminal activity is probably the result of a number of recent arrests and stepped up patrol activity.

Des Moines crime - Police investigate numerous thefts

The Des Moines Police are investigating three separate incidents of theft reported Monday by a local nursing home.

The motor, valued at $500, was taken from a sailboat moored at the Des Moines Marina.

The incident involved the theft of a ring from one patient, two rings from another and the theft of a 65-year-old necklace from a third.

About $16 in miscellaneous change was taken from a vending machine at the 2700 block of S. 216th late Monday evening or early Tuesday morning. It is believed the thieves possibly used a key in the theft.

For some, English is a foreign language

by Brad Broberg

It's a small world and getting smaller.

If you don't think so, consider this: there are more than 190 students from around the globe enrolled this year in the Highline School District who either can't speak English at all or who aren't fluent enough to succeed in school without extra help.

Their 15 native languages range from Arabic to French and from Cambodian to Spanish.

Although most are bilingual and can speak at least a little English, more than 40 are considered monolingual.

"That means the kid can't say 'hi' in English," explained Kathi Walkingstick, program assistant for the district's Bilingual and English as a Second Language (ESL) curriculum.

In Highline, however, it isn't long before such students can say quite a bit more than "hi".

"The goal of this thing is to get the kid to where he can learn in English effectively," said Ms. Walkingstick.

THE DISTRICT is operating four separate ESL classrooms for monolingual students — two at Southern Heights Elementary School and two at Highline High School.

Monolingual students are bussed from throughout the district to those four classrooms; however, bilingual students who still need help are tutored in their own schools.

Southern Heights' two classes for elementary monolingual students are occupied by 10 Vietnamese, three Koreans, two Laotians, two Chinese, one Thai, one Samoan, one Mexican and one Saudi Arabian.

Neither of the two teachers in charge of the classes speak the native language of any of their students; however, they are assisted by part-time tutors who do, with one exception. The district has not been able to find anyone who speaks Arabic.

Heather Langley, who heads up one of the ESL classrooms, said her inability to communicate with her students in their own language is no barrier to their education.

"My goal is to teach them English, not translate. And because they are children, they have the facility to learn a language very easily."

MONOLINGUAL students

THIS YOUNGSTER is one of 21 students who participate in the English as a Second Language classes at South Heights Elementary School in the Highline School District.

begin to absorb English through conversations with their teachers and word and picture association exercises, much the same as an infant first learns to speak.

"When they pick something up, they have to name it before they can move on," said Lou Fagnan, the other ESL teacher at Southern Heights.

"We make sure every picture they draw has the vocabulary on it. To some of them, every word is unknown, then the next day, they know it," said Ms. Langley.

Typical of the learning activities offered in the ESL rooms is a mock market in Ms. Langley's class where her students play the parts of customers, salesmen and cashiers while learning the appropriate vocabulary for each role.

In this way, they are exposed to American culture as well as language.

"Culture shock is not just an expression. They really go through it," said Ms. Walkingstick.

Despite their relative isolation in rooms to themselves, the monolingual youngsters are encouraged to mix with other students at lunch and recess and during physical education and music classes.

"They're going to learn things from other kids that we could never teach them," noted Ms.

Walkingstick.

ABOUT one-third ($36,000) of the cost of Highline's bilingual and ESL curriculum is being funded by the state through the Transitional Bilingual Education Act of 1979, according to Ms. Walkingstick.

State dollars come to Highline on a per capita basis. The formula takes into account only those students who are totally monolingual or minimally bilingual. Although Highline offers help to less severely impacted students, it isn't reimbursed by the state for those programs.

The state money is dependent on the students' ability to successfully make the transition from their native tongue to English within two years, although exceptions can be made.

"By this time, the law assumes he (the student) will have mastered English sufficiently," said Ms. Walkingstick.

According to the two Southern Heights teachers, most of their students will be ready to leave the ESL rooms and enter regular classrooms well before the end of the school year, although they'll still need tutoring and may be out only half a day.

They are an extremely eager group.

"They not only have the need, but they have the desire," Ms. Langley said.

Asian refugees flock to Highline

by Brad Broberg

A new wave of immigrants, the Indochinese, are pouring into this country at the rate of 14,000 a month.

Because Sea-Tac International Airport is one of three West Coast airports where they are first introduced to the United States, many of the refugees are settling in the Seattle area.

Strangers in a strange land, they need homes, food, jobs and an education, which dozens of Indochinese youngsters are getting in the Highline School District.

Indochinese children are the biggest single group (between 65-70 and growing every week) of non-English speaking students enrolled in the district's Bilingual and English as a Second Language (ESL) curriculum.

They are part of more than 190 students from around the world who are enrolled in those two programs, which are designed to enable the youngsters to learn effectively in English within two years.

"THE ONES we see the most are the Indochinese," explained Kathi Walkingstick, program assistant for the bilingual and ESL curriculum. "And a lot of them are coming from situations that we can't even imagine."

The Do family is an example.

Ever since the communists took over, the seven-member Do family planned to flee Vietnam. They were caught in their first attempt and the father had to spend two months in jail.

Finally, last Feb. 7, they escaped on a small fishing boat crammed with 29 people, 10 of them children.

Their perilous voyage lasted eight days. They were stopped by Thai pirates six times and were stripped of their gold, jewelry and most precious belongings.

However, they were among the lucky boats who survived to land safely in Thailand. After a short stay in a refugee camp, they arrived in Seattle July 31 under the sponsorship of the International Rescue Committee.

FOUR OF THE Do children are enrolled at Southern Heights Elementary School in one of two ESL classrooms for monolingual students. There is also a one-year-old baby who was just six months old when the family fled.

The oldest child, De, is 14. He can vividly recall the traumatic trip to Thailand.

The first pirates to board their vessel took all of the refugees' valuables.

"They came with axes, pistols and swords," De said with the help of an interpreter. He said one of the pirates stuck a pistol in his stomach and took his wristwatch from him.

In their search for more booty, the pirates even drained the water supply, hoping to discover hidden treasures.

The other pirates who subsequently waylaid the refugees came up empty-handed, but they took pity on them and gave them food and water.

The last pirates to board the refugee boat went so far as to tow them to shore in Thailand.

DE'S FATHER, who was a coastal pilot in Vietnam, was at the wheel of the refugee vessel during its entire voyage.

They encountered only one storm, but it almost cost them their lives.

De recalled the refugees crying, "All of us will die. We will never reach land."

But not only did they reach land, they eventually reached America, a fact that split De's normally sober face into a wide grin.

Grass Roots Gardening

by Ginna Koontz

The sweet fragrance of pastel hyacinths must be a part of the spring garden. To be captivated by the sweetness and delicate bell-like flowers on sturdy stems next spring plant hyacinth bulbs this month.

The hyacinth of the lily family, acquired its peculiar name from "Hyacinthus" of Greek mythology. Hyacinthus was beloved by Apollo and accidentally killed by him. From his blood Apollo caused the hyacinth to spring. Originally hyacinth flowers were only blue. About 30 species grow wild in the Mediterranean area and in South Africa.

H. orientalis (common hyacinth) is the parent of the large DXUTCH FORMS OF HYACINTH THAT HAVE BEEN DEVELOPED. BH. ORIENTALIS IS AN APPEALINGLY MODEST PLANT MORE OFTEN SEEN IN ROCKERIES OF European and English gardens.

Hyacinth bulbs are graded in Holland according to their circumference in centimeters. An exhibition size bulb is one over 19 centimeters in circumference, measured at the widest part and gives the largest size bloom. Disadvantage of such a mammoth size blooms is that they are so heavy they easily topple over in the slightest breeze or rain. First size bulbs are 18 to 19 centimeters across and second size 17 to 18 centimeters across and fine for indoor pots or large mass outdoor plantings. One centimeter equals .3937 inches.

The huge exhibition size hyacinths make impressive displays when massed in borders or beds. Always group hyacinths, at least three bulbs, the same color. Plantings in single or even double rows look stiff and skimpy. Hyacinths are excellent plants for under spring flowering trees and shrubs, in ground covers, rockeries and of course in window and planter boxes for close up whiffs of their heady perfume.

Hyacinth blooms are pastel blue, lavender, pink, yellow, intense purple, red, rosey red and white.

Roman and French Roman hyacinths are graceful loosely flowered spikes, several to a bulb. The flowers may be white, pink or light blue. They bloom ahead of the Dutch hyacinth and unfortunately are not often seen in local gardens. As container plants massed in large pots they are unsurpassed when placed on patio or deck.

Hyacinths are deep rooted and heavy feeders. They grow best in deep rich sandy loam. To set them out properly dig trenches a foot or more deep and work in 5-15-5 fertilizer into the bottom of the trench. Place five or six inches unfertilized soil over bottom layer. Dust bulbs and soil with bulb dust. Set bulbs at least six inches deep and six to eight inches apart.

Drug seminar to feature pot film

The second session of a three-part seminar on drugs and drug abuse will deal with answering a number of questions that were asked by members of the audience at the first session last week, organizers said Friday.

Also featured on the program — it will be held at Decatur High School — will be a film entitled "Reading, Writing and Reefers," a documentary on marijuana use in the school system.

The program will begin at 7:30 p.m., and not at 7, as the organizers had originally planned. Confusion over the starting time occurred last week, when one set of circulars sent out by the organizers said 7 p.m. and another said 7:30.

Meanwhile, spokespersons for Federal Way Organized Services for Youth (FWOSY), the group that put the series together, were expressing delight with the turnout last week.

An estimated 200 persons showed up, making the turnout one of the largest in the community's recent history.

PARTICIPANTS AND members of the audience last week heard a panel of local teenagers say that probably 80 percent of Federal Way's youth population uses marijuana.

A King County Police narcotics detective later said that the figure was probably accurate.

The second session will open with a review of the material that was covered last week and will proceed immediately into the film.

At the conclusion, the audience will divide into small groups for discussion with persons who are specialists in drug abuse and in the treatment of drug problems.

Organizers say they hope to adhere to a fairly tight agenda, so that the meeting will begin promptly and will end on time at 10 p.m.

A third and final session will be held on Oct. 24, also at Decatur High School.

The New Life group is co-sponsored by the Auburn Ministerial Association and Price Helton Funeral Chapel. All widowed people are invited. For more information, call 939-1000 or 833-2990.

Widowed group to meet

Widowed-New Life Group will meet in White River United Presbyterian Church, 526 12th St. S.E. in Auburn, Tuesday, Oct. 16. A fellowship and get acquainted time will start at 7 p.m., and the meeting will start at 8 o'clock.

John L. Holmes, head librarian at Auburn Library, will introduce those attending to the library and explain how they can get more from it.

Orchestra offers cut-rate samplers

Three new conductors have been added to the slate of guest conductors for the Northwest Chamber Orchestra's 1979-1980 season.

Alun Francis and Victoria Bond will conduct the orchestra Nov. 10 to 13 and January 19, 20 and 22 respectively, and Jorge Mester will be on the podium March 6 in the Opera House for a concert featuring soprano Elly Ameling.

The orchestra is also offering a new Sampler Series to its audience. Sampler subscribers may attend any five of the remaining seven concerts for the price of four. In addition, Sampler subscribers will receive discounts on tickets for other concerts such as those with James Galway and Elly Ameling.

Featured in the series are seven guest conductors as well as guest soloists Mark Westcott, piano; Jeffrey Cohan, flute; Gary Karr, double bass; and Daniel Lords, marionettist.

Francis, Bond and Mester join previously engaged guest conductors Paul Polivnick (Associate Conductor, Indianapolis Symphony); William McLaughlin (Associate Conductor, St. Paul Chamber Orchestra); Carl Topilow, (Exxon-Arts Endowment Conductor, Denver Symphony); and Brian Priestman (Music Director, Florida Philharmonic) on the podium during the upcoming season. Conductors for the final concerts in March and April will be announced later.

Sampler subscriptions start as low as $24 ($16 for students and senior citizens).

Ticket information is available at the Orchestra's office in Seattle (624-6595).

'Apocalypse' takes 1 toke too many

by Barbara Butts
Director-producer Francis Coppola took the proverbial unchewable bite when he set out to capture in "Apocalypse Now" the tragedy of America's involvement in Vietnam.

The catharsis that he hoped would evolve from his portrayal of "what Vietnam was really like — what it looked like and felt like" — does not arise out of the film.

The result that he sought — that Americans would then be only "one small step away from putting it behind them" — will not come from viewing his movie, which premiered in Seattle Thursday night and is now playing at the Town Theater there.

Coppola's $30 million attempt, which took more than four years to complete, misses its mark essentially because it is such an exaggerated, that is to say psychedelic, rendering of what happened there that it becomes too unreal for the "unstoned" to identify with.

If it was Coppola's intention that the whole sensibility of the movie be one of drug-induced impressions, as was suggested in a recent report of an interview with a Seattle writer, he has succeeded.

The horrible, absurd and irrational scenes of war are non-involving, removed and isolated from the beholder as are the images of the world when viewed through the eyes of one who has taken LSD.

The dialogue drifts in and then out, at one time loud and then almost unintelligible, making the following of the plot extremely difficult.

This style may in one sense portray the "real" Vietnam, as many of our soldiers purportedly saw these events under the influence of drugs. But it is an unsatisfactory device for making the experience meaningful generally.

And the film is crucially flawed in that it fails to offer a protagonist that the audience can identify with, an essential ingredient of all cathartic tragedy.

The movie's protagonist, Capt. Willard (Martin Sheen), is sent on a mission into the jungles of Cambodia to assassinate a renegade colonel, Kurtz (Marlon Brando), who has established his own kingdom of butchery.

And as he progresses on his journey into the darkness of the jungle, he makes another journey — from innocence to depravity, from sanity to insanity.

But Willard's character is not developed sufficiently for the audience to identify with his initial state nor to experience vicariously his descent into madness.

The moral dilemma that plunges both Kurtz and Willard into insanity — that of distinguishing between "good" killing and "bad" killing is not resolved.

After confronting Kurtz in his jungle hell, Willard simply rides off in his boat staring into space, the horror of his experience etched into his face.

But this is not what ails the movie, as it is the nature of a dilemma that it is unresolvable.

What makes it unsatisfying is that the viewer is not allowed to fully participate in Willard's journey into madness and thus come away with a lucid understanding of this barbaric human activity.

The film, however, is an admirable attempt by one of America's greatest directors to come to terms with what has become almost a national disease.

The photography by Vittorio Storaro is overwhelmingly beautiful at times; the movie's scenes of destruction are astonishing in their ferocity.

And it is valuable in that the movie-goer may well come away from it with a renewed need to sort out and make understandable this most unsettling of wars.

'Phaedra' coming to UW Showboat

Racine's "Phaedra" will inaugurate a new season of plays this fall at the University of Washington's School of Drama.

On the stage from Thursday, Oct. 16, to Sunday, Oct. 28, in the Showboat Theater, Phaedra expounds passion and poetry in the French Neo-Classical tradition.

Written in 1677, the ranks with the finest works of Shakespeare as a world masterpiece of passionate drama.

Advanced students in the University's Professional Actor Training Program will fill the cast, performing Robert Lowell's English translation of the tragedy. Anthony Cornish will direct the play.

Those wishing reservations or further information should call the School of Drama's Central Box Office at 543-5636 on weekday afternoons.

Tickets are $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for students, senior citizens and members of groups numbering 20 or more.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. for all performances except Sunday, Oct. 21, when the curtain will rise at 7 p.m.

Airport operators buy noise system

by Carolyn Logan
The Port of Seattle Commission last week approved purchase of a new Sea-Tac Airport noise-monitoring system, which will enable airport officials and airport area residents to determine exact noise levels from aircraft using the airport.

The system arrived at the airport about six months ago, and engineers have spent much time since then installing it and "working the bugs out."

Shortly after the equipment arrived, Port Engineer Richard Ottele said the Port didn't want to pay for it until they saw if it worked.

It must work now because a staff recommendation was to pay for the $128,345 system and the $11,680 monthly maintenance contract from E. G. & G., San Diego.

The way it works is that nine noise monitors ring the airport, collecting data from aircraft noise. The monitors send the data via telephone lines to a computer in the airport. There, the public can observe the results on a screened map of Highline. Red flashing lights indicate when noise limits are being exceeded. A Teletype gives hourly printouts of aircraft and community noise, both measured separately in units of dba (decibels "A" weighted).

"LOTS of data will be generated," Port Director Richard Ford said, adding that the system implements the SeaTac Communities Plan.

But, he cautioned, more time is needed to work out a format, to put data in manageable form.

Commissioner Jack Block of Normandy Park recommended that the other commissioners make an on-site inspection, as he has. "You can see the effects. When people have a complaint, they can find out who (which plane) is the guilty party," he explained.

However, Ford pointed out that the system, "doesn't take a picture (of the guilty party)."

Yet Block said later that the guilty party can be identified by calling 433-5229. Callers need to report the time the flight occurred.

By contrast, Don Shay, director of aviation, said, "It's premature to suggest that people call now because data is still being put into a format."

After the meeting, Block suggested that the Port display the noise-monitor screen in the airport lobby, instead of on the fourth floor of the garage.

IN ANOTHER matter at the meeting, Commission Chairman Henry Kotkins and Sen. King Lysen, D-31st District, almost locked horns.

Lysen asked to speak in the packed commission chambers on the plea of unionized restaurant workers told by a new lessee that they could not work for the new lessee. This restaurant operator leases space from the Port, under an agreement which says operators will avoid labor unrest and bring to a swift conclusion any labor dispute on Port property.

"Are you here as a citizen or a politician who wants publicity?" Kotkins asked Lysen, who seeks to unseat Commissioner Henry Simonson in the Nov. 6 election.

"Both," Lysen replied. "You could revoke the increase in parking spaces given in the lease (unless workers are reinstated)."

"Since you're seeking publicity," Kotkins demanded, "how would you handle this dispute?"

"Tell the employer to reinstate the workers or he will have a difficult time reinstating his lease," Lysen replied. Kotkins dismissed his idea since the lease doesn't expire for 20 years. Again, he demanded an answer.

"You should have heads rolling on the staff which put you in this difficult position," warned Lysen, drawing applause. "If I'm commissioner, there's going to be some heads rolling." It was reported that staff didn't query the new lessee on whether union help would be retained.

The commission decided to investigate where it stands legally in the labor dispute.

Federal Way struggles past winless Decatur

by Jon Buchholtz
Dean Youngblood's 60-yard scramble with an intercepted pass highlighted Federal Way's somewhat (yawn) ho-hum 12-3 victory over the Decatur Gators Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

The win lifted the Eagles record to 4-2. Decatur's shadow is now at a 0-6 tint.

Federal Way's lone touchdown came following a 43-yard Todd McGrady punt, which placed the Gators on their own 34 yard line. After Mike Hagen dove for two yards up the middle, sophomore Greg Andal pitched off to Randy Moen, Gator halfback. Moen drifted right, then launched a 40-yard spiral toward the right sideline. Youngblood stepped in front and started his dance to paydirt. First cutting through the middle, he glided to his left and made his way across the scoring plane.

"Again, it was our big play on defense that put it away," Doug Adkins, Eagle mentor recalled. "Our defense has through for us most every game."

Decatur broke the first quarter drought with a 37-yard field goal, compliments of Valtyr Jonsson. The Gators drove 19 yards following a minus three yard punt by Layne Crowston. Jonsson split the uprights and the Gators were up 3-0 with three minutes remaining.

The Eagles, perhaps somewhat flushed, rose to the occasion with their best drive of the night. Using strictly running plays, Federal Way moved the distance of the field to the Gator 21. An Eagle score seemed assured until quarterback Butch Cratzenberg bobbled the ball on the subsequent play. Luckily for FW, senior Mike Bourbonnie piled on top. Blaine Wilson tied the score three plays later with a 36-yard field goal.

Several punts ensued with Federal Way taking advantage of Decatur's field position. The Eagles, with 4:14 remaining in the half, tookover following a punt, on the Gator 43. Four plays later, Federal Way was in business on Decatur's 13.

Cratzenberg pitched to Brian Beringer for a proposed sweep around the left side. Beringer iron-elbowed the ball, allowing it to bounce harmlessly to the turf. Decatur's Mike Mitchell interrupted the ball's freelance by smothering it on the Gator 18, thus killing another Eagle drive.

Decatur's anxious receivers fought over the second half kickoff, which resulted in a Gator fumble. Once recovered, little room lay ahead, and Decatur had a first down on its nine.

"Poor field position is really a problem," Greg Flynn, Gator coach relayed. "Especially when you can't move the ball in the first place."

Decatur needed just three plays before punting the ball back to the Eagles, who graciously accepted it on their own 45. It took exactly 3:00 minutes to cover 51 yards and Wilson again drilled the uprights for an Eagle 6-3 lead.

Jefferson shocks Clover Park, 12-7, with resiliency

by Harry Brooks
B-O-I-N-G!

Just like a big rubberband, the Thomas Jefferson Raider football team bounced back from two straight losses to post the most stunning upset in the South Puget Sound League thus far this season, taking a 12-7 victory over the then title-contending Clover Park Warriors Thursday night at Federal Way Stadium.

SNAP!
Jefferson took advantage of a Clover Park punting miscue to score the game's first touchdown with a 27-yard march in the first quarter.

BOING! SNAP!
The Raiders stopped the Warriors at the TJ 17. Two plays later, quarterback Jay Gard hooked up with Greg Joshlin on a 77-yard pass-run play to recapture the lead at 12-7 in the second quarter.

BOING! BOING! BOING! BOING!
Clover Park stretched the Raider defense by entering Jefferson territory four times in the second half, but the Raiders kill the threats at the 10, 31, 6 and 41 yard lines.

"WE BENT a little but we didn't break," TJ coach Jim Gard said through a proud grin in a festive post-game locker room. "I was really pleased with our guys in the second half. We preached to our defense all week — rally to the ball — and everybody hustled to the point of attack just like we hoped for."

Warrior skipper Bob Collieran was bitterly tight-lipped after his squad outgained Jefferson 266 yards to 183 but suffered its third loss, which all but eliminates the Warriors from the playoff race.

"Jefferson played well," he quipped. "We told our kids that once we get them down, we can't let them get back up, but we never had control. Jefferson just played with a lot of heart, and we didn't execute very well."

The Raiders' win should bring added verve to Jefferson's homecoming clash with Curtis next Friday at Federal Way Stadium. The contest will kickoff at 8 p.m. The Curtis scouts left Federal Way Stadium Thursday night visibly concerned about coping with Jefferson, and the Raiders, now 2-4 in SPSL play, gave them good reason to worry.

Jay Gard, who is making giant strides at landing the All-SPSL quarterback spot, threw just nine times against CP, but he connected on five for 140 yards, a 28 yard-per-completion average. After the scoring strike to Joshlin, Jay found Mike Brogan with a 48-yard bomb early in the third quarter. Brogan was downed at the Warrior 5, but Clover Park recovered an errant pitch-out on the next play to end the threat.

"WE FIGURED since Bethel threw 45 times and beat them (13-9), we could have success going for the long passes," coach Gard said, referring to his son's aerial show.

Fullback Dean DeMulling added balance to the Raider attack by "running the hardest he's run this season," according to his coach. The 205-pound senior pounded for 66 yards through the line in 15 carries. He aided Jefferson's first scoring drive with a nine-yard romp to the CP 11 and, in the game's waning seconds, crashed the line three successive times to gain a first down that allowed the Raiders to run out the clock. Jefferson's first touchdown came after Clover Park punter Terry Hansen bobbled a one-bounce snap from center and was swarmed under at the CP 27. Four plays later, Gard cut inside left tackle for an 11-yard touchdown, but Todd Ringenbach's extra-point kick attempt hooked left of the goal posts.

CHUCK DENNIS, possibly the most explosive runner in the SPSL, scored the Warriors' tying TD on a 42-yard sprint over right tackle at 4:41 of the first period, and Steve Allen put Clover Park ahead with his extra-point placement. Dennis, a 155-pound senior, racked TJ's defense for 130 yards in 17 first-half carries but was limited to 41 yards in 13 totes during the second half.

"He was beating us on the ends, so we tightened them down in the second half by getting better movement from our linebackers (DeMulling and Jeff McCauley)," coach Gard noted.

The Raiders scored their decisive touchdown at 5:06 of the second quarter when Joshlin zip-ped behind the Warrior secondary coverage with a post route. Gard's floater caught him in stride at the CP 35, and Joshlin evaded an ankle grab by CP's Mark Williams at the 15 to complete the 77-yard play. Gard's pass for a two-point conversion fell incomplete.

JEFFERSON again was knocking at the goal line early in the third quarter. On the third play of the period, Brogan beat the Warrior defensive backs, and Gard hit him at the CP 23. The 48-yard play ended with Brogan being dragged down at the 5, but, on the next play, Gard rolled to his right and flipped an option pitch behind Mark Johnson. Warrior John Gore recovered the ball at the CP 10.

From then on, the Raiders held on, repeatedly turning the Warriors back near the TJ goal line. Jefferson's glue-like pass coverage was the key factor down the stretch. DeMulling ended a Warrior threat midway through the third quarter by making an aerial theft at the CP 25, and Todd Ringenbach ended the Warriors' last possession by picking off a pass at the TJ 40 with three minutes left to play. Late in the first quarter, Marc Ogata stopped a Warrior drive with an interception at the TJ 13.

Clover Park quarterback Jim Cassady completed just eight of 25 pass attempts. Four were of the screen variety.

THE TJ defense was penetrated for 139 first-half rushing yards but cut the allotment to 72 after halftime. The Raiders halted the Warriors on three of six fourth-down situations. Two of those stops came inside the TJ 10.

Referring to a dismal 34-0 loss to Sumner two Fridays ago, Gard said with satisfaction, "We got some of our pride back with this one."

Flynn, Adkins(?) satisfied

Eagles' win over Gators keeps playoffs hopes alive

By Harry Brooks
By listening to the coaches afterward, you'd almost believe the Federal Way Eagles were upset by the Decatur Gators Friday night at Federal Way Stadium.

But the Federal Way defense came through with its usual outstanding performance to enable the Eagles to take a 12-3 victory over the Gators.

"I'm satisfied with the win," Federal Way coach Doug Adkins muttered with a noticeably dissatisfied expression. "We were so flat. We've been flat all week. I think Puyallup (a 20-19 winner over the Eagles two Fridays ago) took the wind out of our sails."

Greg Flynn, in retrospect, praised his Gators, who were out-weighted more than 40 pounds-per-man in the front line.

"It was amazing!" he lauded with a bright-eyed grin. "Those guys were just great out there. Our kids are comin'. We just need to get a little bigger and a little stronger so we don't get physicalled out there."

PHYSICALLED, Flynn's new entry into the English language, is what the Federal Way stop corps did to the Gator attack. Federal Way's defense limited Decatur to 71 total yards and scored the game's only touchdown when Dean Youngblood returned an interception 60 yards.

So, Decatur joins the ranks of those dooped by the Eagle "D." In the past two games, the Federal Way stoppers have outscored their offensive counterparts 18-13 and enabled Federal Way to take a 7-0 win over Summer early in the season by recovering a fumble in the end zone.

Even after Decatur took a 3-0 lead on Valtyr Jonsson's 37-yard, first quarter field goal, Adkins maintained his confidence because of his team's defensive potency.

"I was pretty sure they wouldn't score on us again. I thought we could control them the rest of the way."

The defense forced the break that turned into a tying field goal as Mike Bourbonnie pounced on a Decatur fumble on the Gator 21 midway through the second quarter. Four plays later, Blaine Wilson booted a 36-yard placement.

FEDERAL WAY showed the semblance of an aerial attack on its first possession of the second half. Butch Cratsenberg and Dean Youngblood teamed up on the game's first pass completion good for 10 yards and, two plays later, again joined on a 29-yard pass-run success to the Decatur 9. The Eagles moved no farther, so Wilson put them ahead 6-3 with a 20-yard field goal.

Adkins predicted that the win over Decatur will improve his squad's morale for the season at the important game against Rogers and Sparks Field in Puyallup.

"We absolutely have to win it," he stated. "If we beat Rogers (now 6-0), we're in the driver's seat for second place (and a playoff spot). Rogers has to play Puyallup (6-0) and Summer after us, and Summer's comin' like a house-of-fire."

Federal Way, now 4-2 and situated in third place in the SPSL, has games against Bethel and Jefferson after meeting Rogers.

DECATUR will try to score its first victory of the season at Bethel next Friday. It would the Gators exhibit the same defensive verve against Bethel as they did against Federal Way, they may hold off Bethel's pass-happy, run-and-shoot attack.

"It's going to be tough, but our secondary's coming along pretty good," Flynn said. The Gators will finish their season at home with games against Clover Park next Thursday and Summer the following Thursday. Both contests will begin at 7:30 p.m.

MR girls drop two in volleyball action

The Mt. Rainier girls' volleyball team isn't exactly tearing the North Puget Sound League net loop apart this season, but they are trying.

The Ram girls are now 0-4 following last week's NPSL action that saw the Des Moines club fall to Evergreen, 15-10, 15-18, and state-ranked Kenridge 15-4, 15-6.

Mt. Rainier Coach Neil Hutchison, regardless of their two-loss week, said his squad played well, especially against Evergreen last Wednesday.

"We hit every serve except one against Evergreen," Hutchison said. "The girls really did a super job in that respect of the game. That's what kept us in the thing, without it we might as well have gone home."

Hutchison cited spiker Denise Hendricks continual hustle at the net as instrumental to the Ram effort.

"She just hustles all the time," the Ram coach said referring to his senior spiker. "She played an outstanding game for us. She just never gives up."

Mt. Rainier ran into a little bigger obstacle earlier in the week, however, as they absorbed a convincing loss from the Chargers on Tuesday. But it wasn't all that poor a performance for the Ram girls according to Hutchison.

"We were right with them for a time," he said, "but if you give them an inch they'll kill you. There are not that many teams around that can spike like they do."

The Rams received outstanding play at the net as Hendrick, Pam Gossman and junior Lori Clark rose up to challenge the much bigger and more experienced Charger front line.

"We're playing with three players that are first-year volleyball players," said Hutchison, "and Kenridge has players that are really experienced. They will win a lot of games this year."

Mt. Rainier will try to break into the win column this week as they meet the Lindbergh Eagles on Tuesday at Lindbergh, and will host Highline at home on Thursday. Game times are scheduled for 3:30 p.m.

SELLING YOUR HOUSE

By Doug Fields

WHAT KIND OF PEOPLE?

What kind of people are going to buy your home? Most probably, when the sale is consummated, they will turn out to be a pleasant family with whom you have some rapport. You hope your old neighbors will like them, too. Until you find the buyers, though, there will be many others who are interested in your home, and some who will want to come and look at it. What kind of people will they be? The truth is, YOU DON'T KNOW.

And if you advertise your home for sale, you are going to hear from all kinds of people. You can't really tell, over the telephone, even at the door, what they are like. Do you want to deal with these people? Are they bona fide prospects?

You need help. You need someone to screen these people, separate the buyers from the lookers, separate the qualified prospects from those who simply cannot meet your price. And that help had better be expert.

That's where we come in. A professional real estate agent is experienced in screening the qualified buyer from all the other people who might come ringing your doorbell. we get results.
