

Metro proposals:

New bus service gets yeas, nays

by Loren Bliss

Some 40 residents, a bus driver among them, showed up at Federal Way High School Thursday night to critique Metro Transit's proposals for expanding local and express bus service in and around Federal Way.

The proposed expansions, which include two new shuttle routes and midday express service to downtown Seattle, will be effective in May 1980 if they are approved by the Metro Council.

While the overall response was generally positive, some of the residents expressed displeasure with the way Metro has designed the proposed new routes.

And Federal Way Community Council Member Todd Johnstone, who also sits on a Metro citizens' advisory group, demanded to know why Metro had not adopted all the Federal Way routes proposed by the King County Council.

Transit Planner Don Winston, one of the Metro officials who conducted the discussions, replied that Metro didn't have the money to add all the routes the council sought.

ONE OF these would have provided express service to the University of Washington, while the other would have run from Federal Way to Southcenter.

Winston said the routes might be added later, but said that they had been deleted from the proposed May expansion because fewer persons had wanted them.

Jim Shahan, the Metro councilman who chaired the meeting, had said earlier that with the tightening of credit, Metro's sales tax revenues might fall off, with the result that some of the expanded service might be delayed.

Much of the criticism was aimed at the proposed Twin Lakes - Camelot shuttle, a route that would connect the two communities with SeaTac Mall and the newly-opened Park-and-Ride lot at South 320th Street and Interstate 5.

Residents said some of the streets on the eastern (Camelot) end of the proposed route are too narrow to accommodate buses, particularly in the vicinity of 45th Place South.

SHAHAN SAID that Metro officials would "take another look" at the streets over which the buses would run.

Some of the residents also wanted to know why the Twin Lakes - Camelot bus had not been scheduled to stop in West Campus.

Winston replied that because of the rate at which West Campus is being developed, planners had decided to wait until the community stabilized before adding service there.

A group of Redondo residents asked that bus service be extended to the waterfront. Winston said the streets in Redondo are too narrow for buses.

The second shuttle, between Federal Way and Auburn, would connect the two areas directly with SeaTac Mall Sundays.

Midday Federal Way - Seattle express service would operate between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., with commuter service expanded to operate until about 7 p.m.

The fourth proposed new route is a direct express bus between Federal Way and Harbor Island. This would link Federal Way with Boeing, the Duwamish industrial area and the Harbor Island complexes.

Light sought at busy intersection

Metro bus driver Bill Lincoln surprised Metro Transit officials Thursday night by showing up with a petition for a traffic light at the intersection of South 312th Street and Eighth Avenue South.

The petition was signed by about 150 persons, all of them bus riders.

They were complaining about delays of up to 15 minutes caused by congested rush-hour traffic at the intersection. Lincoln said that the length of the delays had been documented by Metro supervisors.

The petitions were turned over to Metro Councilman Jim Shahan, who said he would pass them on to King County Councilman Paul Barden.

Auburn annexation killed

On the advice of its lawyer, the King County Boundary Review Board has turned down Auburn's request to annex a 120-acre portion of the Meredith Hill neighborhood of Federal Way.

A board spokesperson said Friday that the move effectively kills the proposed annexation. But if the area is not included within the city limits of an incorporated Federal Way, Auburn could reopen the proceedings.

The board denied the measure, it said, because the Federal Way incorporation petition, which includes the Meredith Hill area within proposed city limits, was filed earlier than the annexation request.

Therefore, the board's attorney said, the incorporation question would have to be settled first.

WORLD WAR I veteran John Heitzman, a Judson Park resident, will observe today the 61st anniversary of Armistice Day, commemorating the end of "the war to end all wars." Formerly celebrated on its own, Armistice Day has since become part of Veterans Day, also observed today.

WW I vet 'lucky to be alive'

by Brad Broberg

When it comes to war stories, John Heitzman has a real heart-stopper.

Blasted from his sleep by a six-hour German artillery barrage and eventually isolated more than five miles behind enemy lines, Heitzman, along with another soldier, miraculously survived World War I's bloody Second Battle of the Marne.

His 250-man company was later described as annihilated and his mother was informed of his assumed fate.

"She got the telegram from the War Department — we regret to inform you that your son is missing in action," recalled Heitzman.

In casualty reports, missing in action was often tantamount to dead.

"A lot of times they were blown into so many pieces you couldn't find enough pieces to tell who they were," Heitzman explained.

The War Department's error gave Heitzman a macabre opportunity.

"I had the chance to read my own obituary, you might say," noted Heitzman, who still has a yellowed clipping from his hometown Palouse, Wash. newspaper that reads, "John Heitzman Among Missing."

HEITZMAN, an 81-year-old resident of the Judson Park retirement complex in Des Moines, doesn't often talk about his harrowing escape, but, "As Armistice Day (today) approaches, it always seems to come back to me."

Heitzman's National Guard outfit, company C of the 10th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, was manning a front line position on July 15, 1918, when the Germans opened a massive advance on nearby Paris with a devastating barrage just after midnight.

"I was sound asleep when the barrage broke out," Heitzman said.

He got up and left momentarily and when he returned to where he had been sleeping, "The very spot where I was lying had a direct hit."

HELPLESS, Heitzman and his unit waited out the shelling while others fled. Face down in a shallow ditch, he used a pair of trench shovels as armor to cover his back.

"The others had orders to drop back, but they never got to us," he remembered.

As the sunrise began to filter through the smoke and illuminate the wasted terrain, Heitzman said he could see German soldiers filing past on either side of him not more than 150 feet away.

"They turned out to be the choice shock troops, Prussian Guards."

"It soon became apparent we had no business there."

So, a band of about 25 survivors began to cautiously make their way back to Allied lines, which had been denied by the Germans.

The situation eventually degenerated into every man for himself and when they arrived at an open wheatfield, some chose to hide in ditches rather than risk a dash across the field in full view of nearby Germans, Heitzman said.

Those that stayed died. The Germans hunted them down.

"The only ones that got away were like me. They ran to beat hell," said Heitzman, then only 19 years old.

"We took out running across that field. Zing. Bang. I could feel the bullets all around us. I had a couple holes in my shirt and they hit my ammunition belt."

THAT SET the pattern for the rest of the day.

Get up. Run. Get shot at. Lay low. Get up. Run. Get shot at. Lay low.

"Every time we got up and ran, we were shot at. Lead was whistling all around us. We had to play it cagey. We'd have to stay still so they'd forget about us."

After zig-zagging his way across that first wheat field, Heitzman, a corporal, linked up with a captain and together they fought their way to safety.

They frequently encountered Germans, "But we always saw them first. They outnumbered us, but they didn't know it," recalled Heitzman, who added that a round of rifle fire often scared them off.

If it didn't, they stood their ground and fought.

The German infantry was not their only nemesis.

"There was a lot of air action. Every once in awhile one of 'em would swoop down and take a burst of machine gun fire at us."

Finally, just before dark, the two exhausted men made contact with a French unit. Their ordeal was over and the Allies went on to win the battle.

TEN DAYS after receiving the War Department telegram, Heitzman's mother got a welcome notice from the Red Cross.

It said her son was alright, although he was undergoing treatment for poison gas.

Reminiscing, Heitzman said, "I always thought I could dodge a German bullet. I thought to myself, these Germans sure are lousy shots if they couldn't finish us off any better than they did."

But he isn't complaining. "All the time I'm thinking, I'm lucky to be alive. I'm living on borrowed time."

Heitzman and other Judson Park World War I vets will participate in an Armistice Day observance today, but he is a bit miffed that it's no longer a separate holiday, just an oft-forgotten part of Veterans Day.

"In a way it kind of gets to me. I can remember when Armistice Day was observed by a moment of silence at 11 a.m."

"There's never anything like that now."

State reps criticize Puyallup prison, call for new studies

by Nathalie Weber

If House Democrats have any say, there won't be a state prison in the outskirts of Puyallup in

Federal Way's first heroin OD reported

What King County Police and fire department medics believe to be Federal Way's first reported heroin overdose sent a 30-year-old 46th Avenue South man to Valley General Hospital Thursday evening.

Hospital sources said the man was in stable condition Friday.

Heroin is a dangerously addictive drug that sends its addicts into painful withdrawal symptoms when they cannot obtain it.

Many addicts turn to crime to support their habits. Police estimate that most of the nation's big city crime is committed by "junkies," as addicts are called.

four years.

Despite insistence by Gov. Dixy Lee Ray that the proposed prison will be built in one of the three sites recommended by the State Department of Social and Health Services, House Speaker John Bagnariol said Thursday that it's unlikely the legislature will support the governor's outspoken position. Two of those three sites are in the Puyallup area.

Bagnariol, who described the governor's attitude as said the state has been negligent in providing "arrogant," alternatives to placing the prison facility in Puyallup or Kitsap County, the third site. Those alternatives, he said, include acquiring McNeil Island, a federal penitentiary scheduled to close by 1982, and expanding existing facilities.

ACCOMPANIED BY house Democrats Phyllis Erickson and George Walk, Bagnariol addressed his concerns over the prison placement to a standing-room-only crowd of news media representatives and interested residents at Puyallup's Summit

District 9 fire station.

He said the House Rules Committee has authorized a $30,000 feasibility study to determine whether McNeil Island is a viable alternative.

Erickson said McNeil is a possibility that appears to be ignored by the Ray administration. "We haven't gotten any good factual information about why McNeil is unacceptable, and we need this information to make a decision," she said.

"The study DSHS made was not viable," Bagnariol reiterated. "They took a few hours, walked around and said it wouldn't be an effective prison."

The other possibility for establishing more prison beds is to increase the size of currently-operating facilities, the legislators agreed. Erickson, a Parkland representative, suggested that the Shelton Correction Center could ease the need for the additional 500 beds, the size of the proposed facility. Shelton, she said, presently has room for 120 beds, and the Monroe facility could provide the remaining room needed.

WALK, A Puyallup representative, added that it is impractical to construct a free-standing 500-bed prison. "By the time a 500-bed facility is built, it's already outdated for size," he said.

The legislators were specifically critical of the state's disregard for the residents of the communities surrounding the proposed site. Walk said that DSHS made no effort to consult with local officials before selecting either Puyallup site. "So now we're going to go through a lot of wasted time and money and still come up with no site," he said. "We have to revise our study plans."

Bagnariol summed it up: "Siting a prison is never easy. Perhaps we should be looking at places that already have prisons if we want to build a new one because I doubt that we'll find a place suitable to the state and residents that doesn't already have a prison."

Street Talk:

Credit-card spending may be cheaper

Andrea Maestas

It may be wise to cut back, but nothing is going to stop my husband and I from buying what we need.

Jan Bos

No. If a person wants to spend his money at any rate of interest, he should have the freedom to do so. And the banks should have the freedom too. It should be allowed to take its natural course.

Dorothy Meek

Yes. I've cut up all my credit cards except my gasoline card. I am retired and live on a fixed income.

Don Vosburg

You'd better believe it. There has got to be an end somewhere to these interest rates. I've cut back considerably.

Are you planning to cut back on credit spending?

Bill Murphy

I've been thinking that I should spend on my credit cards to the limit. If a person has a need, he is foolish not to use credit cards rather than borrowing at a bank or loan company, where he'll surely pay a higher rate of interest.

Judie Lind

I don't have credit. I pay cash for everything because I can't afford the interest rates these creditors ask.

Tom Yarbrough

I already have. The cash flow is too tight. You need more money for everyday expenses now.

Linda Sims

Definitely. I don't really have a choice. I'm just kind of stunned and am not sure whether the rates are going to keep going up or not.

Under the Capitol Dome

by Robert C. Cummings

Now that this year's election is out of the way, serious campaigning for the "big one" in 1980 won't be far behind.

A sizeable number of candidates have already made their intentions known, accompanied by statements that they will make their "formal" announcements this month.

Such announcements will be anti-climatic, of course, and a far cry from previous campaigns, when the strategy was to get as much publicity as possible by keeping people guessing.

Many Will Fade

This year, however, the field of potential candidates is already so large that it is advisable to start lining up support before it is committed to somebody else.

But despite the large number with stars in their eyes at this time, it is a safe bet that many of them will have dropped out before the filing period opens next year.

There always are a few self-starters who get into races for reasons known only to themselves.

But the number of serious candidates for top offices who are still around at filing time probably can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

Money Does More Than Talk
Lack of money will tell the story. It is estimated a successful campaign for Governor will cost at least $500,000. And with a U.S. Senate race also on the ballot, competition for the big money will be terrific.

On the Democratic side, Gov. Dixy Lee Ray already has $300,000 in her war chest for next year.

U.S. Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, bidding for still another term, always wages a well-heeled campaign.

That won't leave much for the other hopefuls.

Off to Flying Start

Republican Co-speaker Duane Berentson, who hopes to challenge Ray for the governorship, got off to an early start with a recent successful $150 fund-raiser.

As King County Executive, John Spellman, who was the G.O.P. standard bearer in 1976, is in a favorable position to raise funds.

This could spell lean pickings for others.

Attorney General Slade Gorton may have a clear field for the Republican nomination to run against Magnuson.

And because Magnuson holds such a high position in the Senate, there could be considerable Republican money for his challenger.

But to get it, Gorton will have to make a convincing showing in the primary.

And that will cost money, too. There's Always an Exception
The only exceptions have been for the office of Land Commissioner.

Jack Taylor defeated A.C. Martin, the Democratic incumbent, in the 1940 primary, and went on to win the election.

Then in turn, he lost the nomination four years later to Otto Case in 1944, but then came back to win election again four years later.

Others Willing to Try

Which could be one reason why at least two Democrats appear poised to challenge Democratic Land Commissioner Bert Cole.

They include Grays Harbor County Commissioner Mike Murphy and former Clark County Commissioner Dean Cole, now head of the Planning and Community Affairs agency.

An incumbent Clark County commissioner, Dick Granger, may seek the Republican nomination.

Open Offices Beckon

With Attorney General Slade Gorton and Secretary of State Bruce Chapman vacating their present posts for higher offices, these open spots are certain to attract numerous aspirants.

tract numerous aspirants.

Sen. Gordon Waigren, Bremerton, the Senate majority leader, is building his campaign chest early with a $250-a-person fund raiser Nov. 9.

He might use the office as a stepping stone to the governorship in 1984. But he faces a challenge for the Attorney General nomination from a colleague, Sen. Dan Marsh of Vancouver.

Possible Republican candidates are former Rep. Ken Eikenberry, the state chairman, and Yakima County Prosecutor Jeff Sullivan.

First candidate to surface for Secretary of State is Ron Dotzauer, Clark County auditor. But there will be others, even though campaign contributions for this and some other state offices will be hard to come by.

Rewards important

Editor:

A recent article by Ann Hagen appeared outlining the student discipline program at Brigadoon Elementary School. The article detailed punishments involved in this program. An additional and integral part of the program emphasizes daily positive reinforcement of individuals and groups.

Each day individuals and groups earn rewards for good academic performance and good classroom behavior. Rewards include notes home, phone calls to parents, free time, and special privileges. Entire classes earn rewards for good work and good behavior. Teachers and classes mutually determine the nature of these rewards.

The Brigadoon staff, principal Don Swanson, and Brigadoon parents spend a great deal of time and energy on this program. We feel the results more than justify this expenditure. We are convinced that the total program of rewards and punishments is responsible for this success.

Sincerely,

List may help beat housework blues

by Ann Hagen

Juggling housework, job and family can sometimes be detrimental to your eyesight. Sometimes you fail to notice those simple household chores that scream "I'm going to take over so you'll never catch up if you're not careful."

The other night, I got my first clue. When I went in to take a hot, bubbly bath, the only soap available was a bar of Ivory that had Snoopy embedded in a coating of thick wax on one side.

Its only redemption is that it floats. It had been a kindergarten project of son who recently graduated from high school. That's how popular it is.

Though I generally hate lists because they create an existence of all work and no fun, I decided it was time to make one. In it I would jot down things to watch for that would help me stay ahead of the game (or at the very least, break even.)

Listed below are the attention grabbing factors that should be clues:

—That certain expression husband gets before leaving for work when he can only find one sock even though he's recently purchased 28 identical black, orlon pairs.

—The kids, running in and out of the bedroom beginning at 5:30 a.m. to use that single tube of toothpaste that hasn't willingly seen the light of day for a week.

—The cat, as he claws your pantleg frantically hoping that this will be the day he will hear the gentle rumble of catfood in a cardboard box.

—The emptiness when you reach into the linen closet for a towel only to find that the heavily embroidered and scratchy handtowel that Aunt Sue gave you for a wedding present is the only thing left.

—The dishwasher detergent box, peeled to the base so that each granule can be directed toward dirty dishes.

—The windows are replacing public restrooms for their quality graffiti with such statements as "untouched by human hands," "rub here for peep show," and "Smug is in, man."

—Dust pinnies have nested in the corners of the steps and around the room and they're beginning to bark when you get too near their territory.

—The dining room chandelier has become a finely laced shelter for eight-legged creatures who are never seen in the daylight.

—Grocery lists are tacked to the refrigerator, bathroom mirror, pillow, steering wheel and front door knob to remind me to stop at the store.

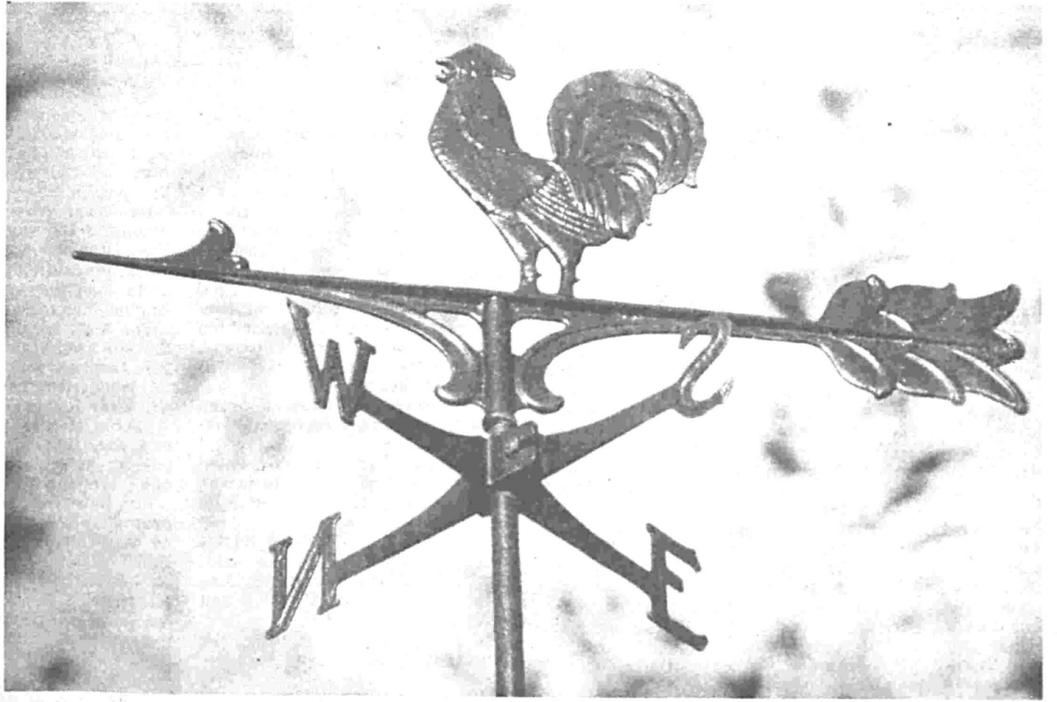

—Last week's lettuce has decided to put up a fight to retain control over the refrigerator. It's contaminating the celery, tomatoes and zucchini in an effort to amass troops.

—The car is overflowing to fill up with remnants of Herfy's soft drink cups, Jack-in-the-Box hamburger wrappers and McDonald's french-fry bags.

Now, if I could only find somewhere to tack this list, I'd be all set.

Follow the wind

Rusted, corroded, often dented or stripped of paint — they're things that spin in the wind.

Perched high on roof tops to catch the breeze, weather vanes mark the wind's direction for those below.

Their arrows, in tune with every gentle whisper, catch the softly or harshly swirling forces without hesitation. Their movement is ever-constant and never-ending.

Over 30 years ago, Earl and Margery Mann of Brown's Point Heights looked over their recently purchased property and noticed the abundance of pheasants that nested nearby.

Incorporating that idea, they had a pheasant hammered out of iron and made into a weather vane. The distinctive wind-tester is perched high atop their English-style brick home that is nestled within the trees on the hillside overlooking the Tacoma Harbor.

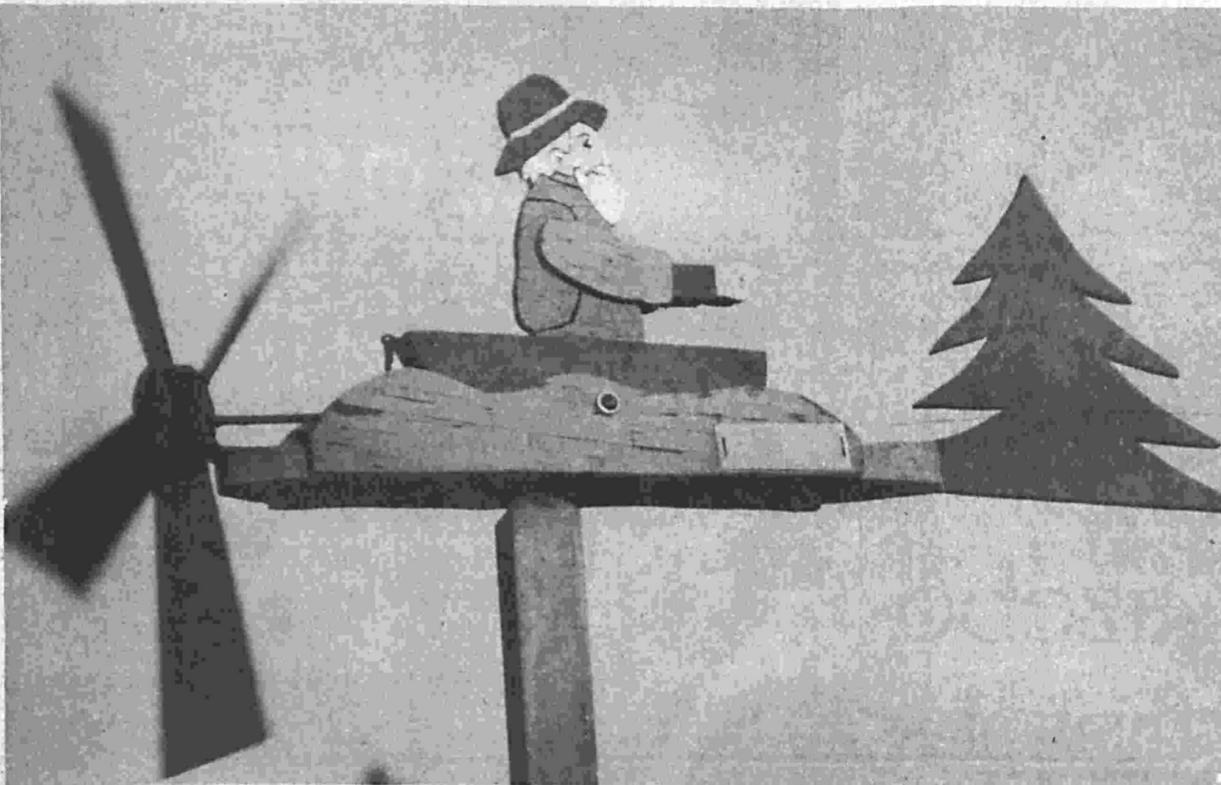

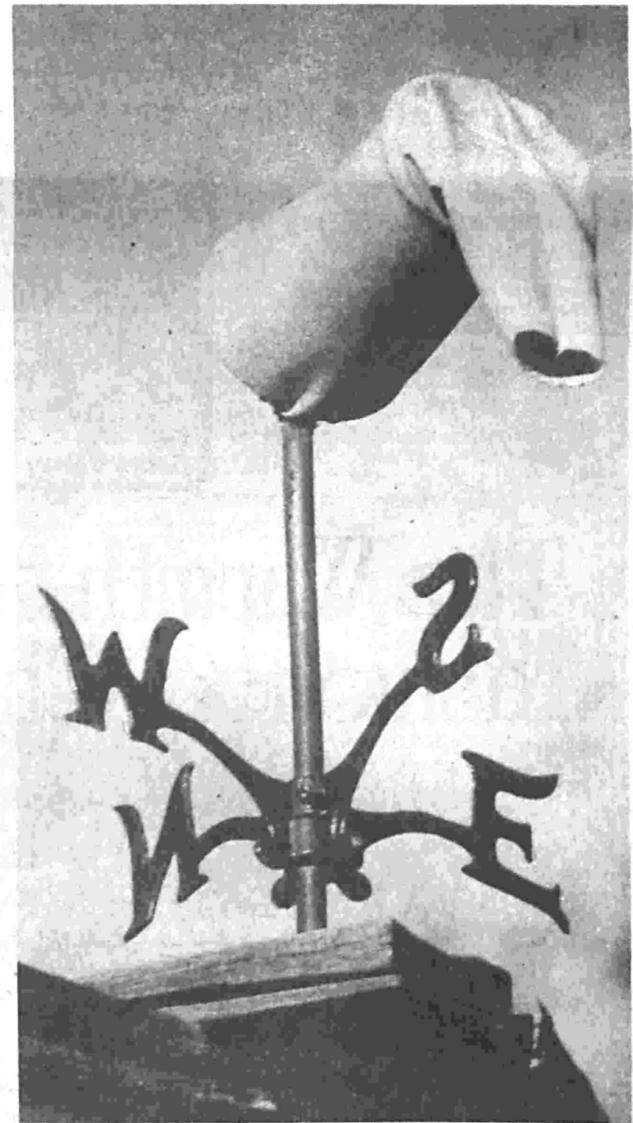

Always interested in the weather and the wind's forces, the Lee Biermann family in Marine Hills take note of their weather vane and wind sock that flutter on their roof. The wind sock was a gift from their son, St. Luke's Lutheran Pastor John who is well aware of the family's interest.

"The wind sock tells the direction of the wind and you always land into the wind," said Mrs. Biermann. "It's been a good symbol for us."

A flying family, Mrs. Biermann said that her husband, Lee, has been an airline pilot for 40-plus years; her youngest son is a flight engineer and her daughter is a flight attendant.

However, the interest in weather vanes is dwindling. Very few homes now sport the elevated banner.

Perhaps it's because of their expense. To get one that is unique and original, a local welder estimates the cost would near $200-300 or more depending on the size and design. "We don't get any call for them any more," he said. "With labor costs, they just cost too much to build."

Competence tests:

Students who flunked getting special help

by Loren Bliss
Federal Way students who fail competence examinations — passage is prerequisite to graduation — will be given "every opportunity" to correct their deficiencies' school officials said Thursday.

The officials, Curriculum Director Julia Wan and Assistant Superintendent Ron Johnson, also said that the district is already trying a variety of approaches to solve the problem.

The English and reading exams are finished with them, but the math tests will be given to all 9th, 10th and 11th graders whether they pass or not.

After the worship hour the congregation will meet in the social hall for the traditional "Turkey Sunday Dinner."

Competence testing began here last year, when some 1,200 9th graders were given exams in reading, English and mathematics. While about two-thirds of the students passed the reading and English exams, nearly the same number failed the math portion.

He said the reason for repeating the math tests is to keep students' skills sharpened. "The kids routinely take a lot less math than they do reading and English," he said.

"We hope by the end of the year to have a number of different programs fully developed," he said.

Whether a student passes or fails, parents receive reports of how their kids fared.

Those who flunked, Johnson said, are being given remedial instruction.

The tests are administered in the 9th grade, said Johnson, to give teachers and students time to work together to correct whatever deficiencies show up.

"Aside from kids who just don't have the ability, the biggest problem is motivation. If a student scores highly on one part and does poorly on another, we know the intelligence is there. So we

The students who flunked are identified to guidance counselors, who then work to develop programs that fulfill the routine academic requirements and correct the deficiencies as well.

Youthful motorcyclists flee police in separate incidents

A 16-year-old youth was arrested for felony flight after he refused to stop for an officer last Tuesday. The youth was riding a motorcycle with no head lights or license when the officer first observed him. The suspect accelerated to speeds of between 60 and 70 miles per hour before the officer apprehended him at South 248th Street and Marine View Drive South. The suspect was taken to the Youth Service Center. A second motorcycle chase the same night resulted in a 13-year-old boy being cited for reckless endangerment and driving without a license. The officer attempted to stop the driver because he had no headlights. The youth fled, but crashed while attempting to make a turn. Neither the youth, nor a passenger who was riding with him, were injured in the accident. WD 54 takes no action

No action was taken at the Water District 54 meeting last Monday because, as of Oct. 31, only Bob Ricketts remains on the Commission.

Commission President Max Dodge tendered his resignation effective that date on Oct. 1, one day following the effective date of the third Commissioner, Jack McCumsey. Dodge and Ricketts were unable to agree on a replacement for McCumsey before Dodge's retirement. The Commission lacks a quorum of two only until King County Elections and Records certifies the winner in Tuesday's election between Frank Jovanovich and Martha Simmons (the results were not in at press time). The certification may take place as early as Nov. 21. Ricketts said a special meeting will be called very soon after that.

Highline Civic Symphony opens

An evening concert is planned as the Highline Civic Symphony opens its 1979-80 season on Sunday, Nov. 18, at 7:30 p.m. at the St. Francis of Assisi Church, 15326-21st SW, Burien.

R. Joseph, music director and conductor of the Bellevue Philharmonic Orchestra for the past thirteen years, will be guest conductor for the concert. The program will include Aaron Copeland's Fanfare for the Common Man, Roman Carnival Overture by Berlioz, Prelude and Quadruple Fugue for Orchestra by Alan Hovhaness, Symphony No. 2 by Vittorio Giannini, the L'Arlesienne Suite No. 1 by Bizet and Les Preludes by Franz Liszt.

Babysitting will be provided and there will be a donation of $2.

Unsung Heroes

by Harry Brooks

There is a lull in the local sports scene. The high school and junior high fall seasons have ended, and the winter portion of the school sports year won't begin for about three weeks.

However, the break between seasons is a busy time for the Federal Way District Activities Department. Activities director Bud Hatley and his office staff of one, Carol Lettich, now are churning out quantitative and qualitative studies concerning the completed autumn athletics campaign and organizing specifics of the coming winter period.

The department is responsible for the welfare of 15 separate sports for the district's three high schools and 10 offerings at five junior high schools. It also assists with other activities — including drama, band, debate and school newspapers — and is in charge of the district's traffic safety program. Last year's activities budget was $140,000 and traffic safety budget was $170,000. The district's sports involved 2,400 turnouts. Traffic safety included 1,300 participants and non-sports activities 1,600.

Carol Lettich

CAROL LETTICH'S efforts are a major factor in the Activities Department's ability function gracefully through its responsibilities.

"Without her, they'd bury me," Hatley matter-of-factly stated. "She has tremendous responsibilities and does an excellent job. There's plenty of room for error but not with her around."

After getting the information from Hatley, Carol is responsible for producing the department's notorious point-by-point, dollar-for-dollar reports. She also handles gate receipts from athletic events at Federal Way Stadium, transportation requests from the schools and publicity.

The Lake Geneva resident, who has been Hatley's assistant for three years, "enjoys her job" even though it is geared to sometimes hectic deadline pressures.

"It's a busy, interesting, frustrating job," she noted. "Before coming here, I was never involved with high school sports, having two daughters and no sons; so, I've learned a lot."

"It takes a lot to put them on. There's a lot more behind the program than what people realize."

When the school sports use Federal Way Stadium in the fall and spring, Carol spends after-hours time situated in a ticket booth before each contest.

"I FIGURE that if you're in charge of ticket sales, you should be there when it's going on," she said. "Besides, it's nice to see the students and parents come through. I admit I get a big charge out of it when we get a big crowd."

Bud and Carol share a strong working relationship that results in solid productivity, and they take turns crediting each other for the department's success.

"Mr. Hatley is the reason why I look like I do a good job," Carol lauded without reservation. "It's taken two years to understand my job, and he's been patient all the way."

Hatley's responsibilities often force him to attend meetings around the state, but he isn't squeamish about leaving his office with Carol in charge of supplying information.

"SHE'S UP on everything," he confidently pointed out. "I know that when someone calls, she'll get them the right answer. If she doesn't know right off, she'll search around until she finds the right answer."

Carol exhibited her decision-making prowess when being interviewed by the NEWS last Tuesday. A soccer coach phoned to verify a stadium reservation for his team. Carol referred to a list and acknowledged the commitment. Then the coach said he was supposed to share the stadium with another team and asked if the other party had contacted the department and, if not, what he should do about it.

"If his team shows up, charge him half the rental fee," Carol answered.

The reply fulfilled the question, and Hatley nodded in agreement as she clicked the phone receiver in place.

'Kids growing up' is third in family series

The third in the family series sponsored by the Federal Way Organization Serving Youth is entitled "Kids Growing Up," and is slated to begin at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 14 at Decatur High School.

Featured speakers on the topic are Claudia Blackwell, Federal Way Schools psychologist; Mal Green, Auburn Elementary School counselor; and Iris Marshall, a counselor at Decatur High School.

South Seattle Mothers of Twins (second Wednesday, each month, 7:30 p.m.) Members' homes for information call 839-9321.

The presentation is intended to assist parents in understanding a child's developmental stages. Dealing with stress as it relates to nurturing trust, confidence, communications and initiative will be a major focus for the evening. Parents will be instructed on how to help a child through stress, while understanding that stress itself is good.

The public is invited to attend. The evening will be sponsored by the American Association of University Women. Decatur is at 2800 S.W. 320th St.

County faces budget deficit auditor says

by Darlene Himmelspach

King County faces a budget deficit in 1980 "and all subsequent years" according to a county auditor's analysis of the proposed executive budget now under consideration by the county council.

Auditor Rol Malan said the fund balance analysis by Bob Williams of his staff indicates "a strong possibility that there will be a deficit next year" of around $2.7 million. By law, the county cannot operate in the red.

The analysis was questioned by John Rose, county budget manager. Rose said he anticipates an ending fund balance in 1980 of $10.4 million, of which about $8.8 million will be used for cash flow requirements by the executive proposed estimate.

Rose said "We're planning on reducing the fund balance next year by about $3.5 to $4 million and I think it can be done prudently. We can turn it on or off if the money isn't there."

Helen Sommers, budget analyst for the county council, said "it's not a question of who is right" of the two viewpoints. She said the auditor's report provided important and useful information that the council needs to make final budget decisions in the coming two weeks.

The auditor's claim that historically the county has spent more than the operating budget approved by the council is correct, according to Sommers. But she said the supplemental appropriations have been tied to revenues becoming available such as federal grants.

Rose said the auditor's assessment is "wrong" because the executive has a "strategy" for supplemental appropriations that specifically calls for that spending to be supported by new revenue sources, unanticipated increases in estimated revenues or cutbacks in other spending.

Sommers said she doesn't believe the county council would approve supplemental spending if the revenues to support it could not be found and the executive would not even make a request for such spending under those circumstances.

Malan, however, doesn't buy that assumption. "They (the executive staff) are saying they won't be sending any supplementals over this year but our experience is that is just not the case."

Among projects the county expects to fund out of the current expense fund balance in 1981 are the bonds debt for the county's share of the West Seattle Bridge construction, payment on bonds for a new jail and new police officers and superior court judges. If those items come from the budget surplus in 1981 and the subsequent three years, the surplus will become a deficit of $26.5 million in 1984 by Rose's estimation.

But that won't happen, he claims, because cuts will be made elsewhere in the budget or unanticipated revenues will come to the county to cover the costs.

The council is scheduled to adopt the 1980 budget Nov. 21.

$122,000 spent for Port posts

by Carolyn Logan

Seattle Port Commissioner Jack Block may have been reelected Tuesday by 6,597 votes, apparently beating back a stiff challenge from Seattle banker Bob Buck. Absentee votes have yet to be counted in unofficial returns which give Block the edge, 116,376 to 109,779.

Buck does not concede the race, but calls a reversal "a long shot." The second incumbent, Henry Simonson, trounced Sen. King Lysen, D-31st District, 136,048 to 78,050. Simonson, a businessman, outspent Lysen two to one.

"Simonson and Buck ran parallel campaigns, using a lot of TV," Lysen said. "You have to have $15,000 to even get on TV, counting production and other costs."

Lysen's campaign coffers held a total of $15,229; Simonson had collected $41,269. Buck's $50,000 campaign purse was twice as fat as Block's.

All told, the four candidates spent more than $122,000 for two seats which pay $1 per year.

Buck, the biggest spender, said, "the amount of money spent measures the amount of confidence people (contributors) have in a candidate."

He added that he spent several thousands of dollars from his own money, some of which he recouped from donations.

LOOKING BACK, Block said Simonson's publicity was more professional than Buck's. Buck's inexperience with the Port also hurt him, Block maintained.

"He had the roles reversed with King County and the Port on establishment of a new airport. I backed him into a corner and trapped him," Block said.

"Buck was not aware of the problems out here (by SeaTac Airport). His statements about the Sunset recreation area had to hurt him." Buck favored industrial use of the planned recreation area.

The biggest mistake Buck made was to heed former Commissioner Merle Adlum's request to run, Block contended. In rebuttal, Buck said he entered the race because he believes he is better qualified than Block, not because of Adlum.

However, Block recounted, "Merle and I had some disagreements. Merle said he'd get someone to take over my seat. He (Buck) did not take it over."

BLOCK didn't always feel that triumphant.

On election day, he passed literature out until 6 p.m. "I knew it was going to be tight; I was really concerned," he recalled.

Simonson worried, too. The day before the election, "I was so nervous. I went to the barber shop and got a haircut — and I didn't even need a haircut!"

Simonson and Lysen ran neck and neck in the primary election. After his general election defeat, Lysen said, "Money and power certainly have a leg up."

Lysen campaigned vigorously, pushing two main issues: He wanted to end the taxpayers' subsidy of the Port and he questioned the Port's role with foreign-made goods, calling it "exporting jobs."

Simonson dismissed the job-export item as not an issue.

IRONICALLY, Lysen's tax issue may gain attention with the commission.

"One basic issue came out of the campaign," Simonson said, agreeing with others that tax termination was a major issue.

"We can phase it down. In two or three years, it would be gone. "That is one of the changes I foresee."

Block concurs that the tax should be phased out in three or four years.

Simonson added that, "It was not right for Lysen to opt for another job, particularly now (that voters passed) annual legislative sessions. Something would suffer."

Lysen acknowledged that some people questioned the idea of maintaining a dual role.

Simonson campaigned on Port prosperity, and on Port stabilization of the local economy. Block, a senior ship and dock foreman, stressed his experience.

Both won a second six-year term.

County voters pace election issues

King County voters set the pace in Tuesday's election for the outcome of statewide elections on such matters as the bottle bill and annual sessions.

In a comparison of voting totals for King County and the state as a whole, the percentages were nearly equal. (Figures for the state are based on 85 percent vote totals from the Secretary of State's office.)

The sale of bonds for facilities for the handicapped, Referendum Bill 37, won overwhelming 3-1 support in the county with 213,450 yes votes and 73,126 opposed. Across the state the bill won but by a 2-1 majority 498,314 to 245,822.

Initiative 61 which would have established a minimum deposit of $0.05 on beverage containers, lost by about the same percentage statewide as the three point spread in King County. Here the vote was 152,926 against and 143,642 in favor while the state total was 472,822 opposed and only 333,062 yes votes.

Tying state tax levels to personal income levels won by a 2-1 margin in King County and in the state. Initiative 62 drew 193,336 yes votes here and 92,624 no votes and the state total was 509,349 in favor and 235,431 opposed.

Establishing annual state legislative sessions was also approved with 179,786 county voters in favor and 97,779 against. Senate joint resolution 110 drew 417,823 affirmative votes across the state while 266,790 voters opposed it.

Senate Joint Resolution 112 that will ease the restrictions on legislators who want to hold other offices was adopted with 415,410 yes votes and 313,875 on the state level of which 170,506 in favor came from King County and 101,152 opposed were cast here.

A law that will permit municipal utilities make loans at low interest for energy conservation home improvements won more than

! 2-1 approval in King County with a vote of 194,128 to 84,452. Senate joint resolution 120 didn't fare quite as well statewide although it did pass by a vote of 457,176 to 265,099.

Almost half the 640,495 registered voters in King County voted in Tuesday's election either at the polls or by absentee ballot, according to the county election division.

2 youths honored as Eagle scouts

Two Zenith youths received their Eagle Scout Awards at a Boy Scout Troop 955 Eagle Court of Honor on Oct. 29 at Parkside Elementary School.

Peter F. Nichols and Curt W. Steigers completed their requirements for the Eagle honor through projects including the construction of shelters known as Eagle I and Eagle II at Camp Waskowitz and a trail to the shelters. The projects involved more than 300 hours of work.

Nichols, a 9th grade honor student at Pacific Junior High, has served as Patrol Leader, Buglar for Troop 955, Assistant Patrol Leader and is currently Senior Patrol Leader. He has also been elected to the Order of the Arrow and Leadership Corps.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Nichols, 23246 Marine View Drive. His two brothers, Robert and David, have also received the Eagle ard.

Steigers, who is an honor student at Mt. Rainier High School, has served as Patrol Leader, Librarian, Senior Patrol Leader, and is presently Assistant Patrol Leader. The high school junior has also received Boy Scout's Brotherhood rank in the Order of the Arrow, was elected to Leadership Corps and is a member of Explorer Post A1AA.

Steigers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Steigers, 1005 S. 234th St. His brother, Chad, has also received the Eagle Award.

EAGLE SCOUT awards were presented to Curt W. Steigers (left) and Peter F. Nichols in an Eagle Court of Honor on Oct. 29. Both youths have been active in Scouts, serving in various capacities from Patrol Leader to Assistant Patrol Leader.

POWER plugs into fight against electricity costs

by Nathalie Weber
Puget Power may be running out of power, but members of POWER, the group known for its opposition to electricity rate increases, isn't.

Those members last week reaffirmed that opposition by agreeing to step up efforts to monitor Puget Power's rate increase requests and serve as watchdogs of that company's conservation programs.

POWER — People's Organization for Washington Energy Resources — is comprised largely of low-income and elderly who say they cannot afford the escalating cost of power. Its members were visible last winter at Puget Power stockholder meetings in opposition of last year's rate increase, maintaining that the poor cannot afford to pay the rates that resulted from general public electricity waste. The attitude at Thursday's meeting in the Kent Library appeared to be the same.

THREE FEDERAL Way senior citizens attending that meeting agreed they are doing their best to conserve, but it doesn't seem to keep the bills down.

"My bill keeps going up and up," Edna Coats said. "I don't take hot baths, I keep the lights off as much as possible, yet my bill last summer was as high as the winter before. I can't figure it."

Ada Thomas added that she keeps her house at a low temperature to conserve and if she gets cold, she puts on more clothes. "I just can't afford it," she said.

Meeting with a spokesperson for Puget Power at last week's POWER gathering, members of that group were critical of the power company's programs for rewarding conservation efforts. Members suggested that those who use less electricity should be entitled to lower rates. "I don't want to pay a higher rate for those who waste electricity like it's water," one member said.

MAB TOCHER of Puget Power responded that Puget Power supports government energy aid to the poor because it is more "equitable" than any program her company could offer. "Direct aid to those who really show the need is more efficient," she said.

She added that the real challenge is to operate so as to make rates increase as slowly as possible. "That means an aggressive conservation program," Tocher said.

POWER members were skeptical as to the direction of that conservation, some maintaining that industry, the large power consumer, received more rate breaks than did the conservative homeowner. "Most energy is wasted by industry," one member said. "I just think it's ridiculous to turn down the heat and freeze in our homes, because in relation to industry use it's not going to help that much." Tocher emphasized that every bit of conservation helps. "Puget is sincerely running close to having a total breakdown of its system because of high demand. This is not a scare tactic. We almost ran out of electricity last year, and if it happens this year, it's going to be very real."

POWER organizer Julie Matuzak said she anticipates the group to be at least as active as last winter. "I think once people figure out what the rate hikes are all about, they'll want to help out more," she said.

Although Puget Power is not requesting another rate increase, it has requested the ability to adjust rates according to what it costs the company to purchase or generate additional power this winter. Puget Power is the largest private supplier of electricity in the state.

Hoppe fires Gaston; cites 'inefficiency'

by Darlene Himmelpach
An employee of the county assessor's office who was rated an "excellent" worker in an evaluation by a supervisor only months ago has been fired for inefficiency and neglect of duty.

Parke Gaston was canned the day after the re-election of Harley Hoppe as assessor. Gaston had released studies during the campaign which he said showed that Hoppe's assessment practices favored the wealthy at the expense of poorer taxpayers.

Hoppe wasted no time in firing Gaston, through his supervisor, then left for a two week vacation, according to his office. Gaston said he has not decided whether to appeal the firing. "Is it worth the hassle to appeal?" he questioned.

Gaston has worked as a statistician in Hoppe's office for more than a year. At the beginning of last month he released an in-house study he did which indicated that Hoppe's assessment practices were not fair to all taxpayers. He said he was told to keep the study quiet but he made his findings public in a television interview early last month.

Gaston's finding seemed to support the contention of Hoppe's Democratic opponent Hank McGuire that Hoppe was overtaxing the lower-valued properties in the county while under-assessing the higher value land.

Hoppe repeatedly denied those charges and claimed during the election that he was keeping taxes low throughout the county. He said Gaston's studies were inaccurate and denied that his employee had ever been instructed to keep the study findings under wraps.

The timing of the firing was "purely political" according to Gaston, who said "I think the motivation is pretty obvious." Gaston was handed a letter of termination in front of co-workers Wednesday afternoon by S.T.

Schreiner, manager of the accounting division of the assessor's office.

The letter said Gaston was being terminated for "inefficiency, neglect of duty, waste of public resources" and "discourteous treatment of the public or of other employees." Gaston said he had been given no warning that he would be fired but said he expected it to happen after the television show was aired during the campaign.

Schreiner refused to comment on the matter except to say "It (public firing) did not occur in that manner." He said it is a personnel matter and he will not discuss it until after the 14-day appeal time has elapsed. The department must show just cause before it can legally fire a career civil-service employee.

Gaston said the firing is "a typically hysterical Hoppe hit shot" and predicted that the action would be reversed on appeal, if he decides "it is worth the hassle."

Treasurer says apathy could trigger collapse

by Loren Bliss
The Federal Way Community Council is in danger of collapsing, Treasurer Harry Keinath warned last week.
Keinath, who is also a co-chairman of the Federal Way City Committee, said that the difficulty stems from apathy, adding that if the council fails, the community will lose an agency that has traditionally functioned as its ombudsman.
His remarks echoed those made earlier in the week by Jim Mawson, the council's vice-chairman. Mawson urged residents to get involved either by running for council seats or voting in the November 13 elections.

At the time, Mawson had reported that 19 of the group's 32 seats were vacant and that there were nowhere nearly enough candidates to fill them.
But as of Thursday, he said, seven additional candidates had announced, leaving 12 seats vacant.
These are in the Valhalla, Sunnycrest, Wildwood, Woodmont, Star Lake, Panther Lake, Olympic View, Nautilus and Lake Grove elementary school service areas.

KEINATH SAID that the apathy problem is compounded by the fact that many former council activists are now involved in the incorporation drive and a variety of other functions.
"You can only stretch yourself so far," he said.
"And unless some other people are willing to commit some time, there's a real possibility the council could die," said Keinath, "which would be a real tragedy."
He said the council will continue to have an important role to play in the community even after incorporation.

"The group really is Federal Way's ombudsman," he said, adding that its involvements include consumer affairs, planning and zoning, social services, transportation and the creation of a local historical library.
"Consumer affairs is a new one," Keinath said. "Next year we're going to have people researching products, and we'll probably even get into tabulating grocery prices."

THE COUNCIL is best known for its activities in the realm of community planning, Keinath said, because it routinely reviews environmental impact statements, subdivision proposals and other planning documents and makes recommendations to the King County Council.
Another of its new projects, he said, is the creation of a historical library, a place that texts, documents and other records of the community can be stored and made available for use as reference works.

Mawson said earlier in the week that the council might also act as liaison between the voters and their elected representatives in a future city government, much as community councils in Seattle do now.
Persons wishing to run for office should telephone Mawson at 927-6726. The polls will be open from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m. in all areas except Lakeland, where the hours will be 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Booklet on countering stress available free

A booklet on dealing with tension and stress is now available free from the Washington State Mental Health Association, a locally-based group that is an offshoot of the National Mental Health Association.

Christmas ideas free

Various ideas for Christmas decorating will be demonstrated in a free holiday craft class at the Burien and Des Moines Libraries.
"A Christmas Sampler" will feature a 60-minute program led by artist Rosalie Pfeifer on tips for using fresh greens as door swags and making tree ornaments.
The program will be at the Burien Library, 14700 - 6th Ave. SW, on Monday, Nov. 19, at 10:30 a.m. and at the Des Moines Library, 22815 - 24th Ave. S., on Tuesday, Nov. 20, at 10 a.m.

Dale Leroy Watkins Auxiliary for Children's Orthopedic Hospital (fourth Monday, each month) Meetings in members' homes, contact Terry Engelstad at 839-7175.

Richard Sorenson, the organization's state coordinator, says that stress should be recognized as an "ongoing" part of life, and that by dealing with it constructively, "we can lead much happier lives."
He said that coping with stress also makes for better physical health, noting that "it is now generally agreed that people who lead harddriying stressful lives are much more likely to suffer from heart attacks."

Sorenson said that the booklet — it is entitled "How to Deal with Your Tensions" — contains a number of suggestions on how individuals can free themselves from burdensome stress.
It is obtainable by writing to the association at Post Office Box 4008, Federal Way, Wash., 98003.

Gators' early strike falls short

Renton nips Decatur from volleyball tourney

by Harry Brooks
Decatur's short, roller-coaster ride in Thursday's opening round of the West Central AAA Volleyball Tournament ended with the Gators taking a three-game fall.

Decatur rose to a 15-8 win over Renton in the first game and continued its rise by taking a 12-3 lead in the second contest. Then came a Gator tumble as Renton blitzed 13 unanswered points and an eventual 15-13 win in game No. 2. Decatur continued its skid with Renton taking a seemingly insurmountable 12-4 edge in the match decider, but the Gators regained upward momentum to knot the score at 12-all and 14-14.

Alas, Decatur's fortunes took a last dip as Renton scored two straight points to survive the loser-out scramble at the Kent-Meridian High gym.

Decatur coach Toshiki Kamakura defined his inner feelings about the Gator performance as "total contentment."

"Of course, we all wanted to win," he said. "I had predicted we would win in two games. I thought we'd be in trouble if we went to a third game."

"RENTON (a past state champion and consistent NPSL front-runner) has more tradition and experience behind them than we do. I think it was a big factor in their ability to come back when it looked like we would take the match in the second game."

Decatur jumped to 6-0 leads in the first and second games and continued to hold momentum until they hit double-figure scoring, where Decatur has often lapsed in the past. In the first game, the Gators withstood a Renton rally, which closed their lead to 11-8, but, in game No. 2, the Indians overtook the Gators by scoring 12 of the game's last 13 points.

"It was a psychological thing," Kamakura recalled. "We were losing some confidence, so I wanted to call a time out. I thought I had at least one left as I didn't remember taking any before in that game. I was very surprised when the scorekeeper said I had none left. 'If we could have taken a time out during that time (late in the Renton rally), it could have made a big difference,'" Kamakura pointed out, adding that he never received an explanation of the time-out situation.

THROUGHOUT the first two games, Renton's potent spiking attack, made more formidable by the Indians' striking height superiority, was countered by Decatur's back-court coverage and net blocking.

But the Indians began pounding the Gators with kills from the net in the third game. After spotting Decatur a 1-0 lead, Renton jumped to a 7-3 lead, highlighted by four pointer spikes. Two more kills and two Gator miscues extended Renton's edge to 12-4.

Anita Suss began the Gators' comeback effort with an ace serve. After an exchange of service tallied no points, Darla Williams walked to the serving line and didn't leave until delivering five point-initiating offerings. A Cindy Suss spike and four unforced Renton errors fueled Decatur's drive to a 12-10 deficit.

Barbara Beem's booming hit narrowed Renton's lead to 12-11 and her ensuing service caused an errant hit in the Renton backcourt and tied the score at 12-12. A Decatur hitting error and a Renton block of a Beem spike gave Renton a 14-12 edge, but the Gators used two out-of-bounds spikes by Renton's towering Mary Leonard to re-tie the score.

HOWEVER Leonard regrouped to sike home the Indians' 15th point, and Cindy Suss' kill attempt on the next action landed inches wide of being in-bounds.

The Gators were in top form through the first game and much of the second.

"Before the match, I stressed that we'd have to have consistently accurate serving to do well, and we definitely served well," Kamakura said. "We alternated hard and soft serves, and I think it threw their rhythm off."

Consistency also described the play of Lisa Dolezal and Cindy Suss at the net as the twosome took advantage of almost every opportunity to put points away and formed a solid blocking wall against Renton's spike attack, while Beem added front-line strength. Decatur backcourt members Teri Erickson and Darla Williams continually spotted well-pace sets to the front row and repelled Renton threats.

KAMAKURA is confident that Decatur will be a power next season. Seven of the team's 10 members will return to the Gator nets. They include Erickson, Williams, Anita Suss, Beem, Vicki Melin, Rhonda Montgomery and Karen Kornell.

The Gator coach looks for aid from a talented, incoming sophomore crop to replace seniors Dolezal, Cindy Suss and Lisa Tooley.

"We're going to have a different dimension next year," Kamakura noted. "I know of three tall girls coming in from the junior highs, so we'll be more offense-minded and will have the ability to intimidate opponents."

The skipper admitted being surprised with his team's improvement this season.

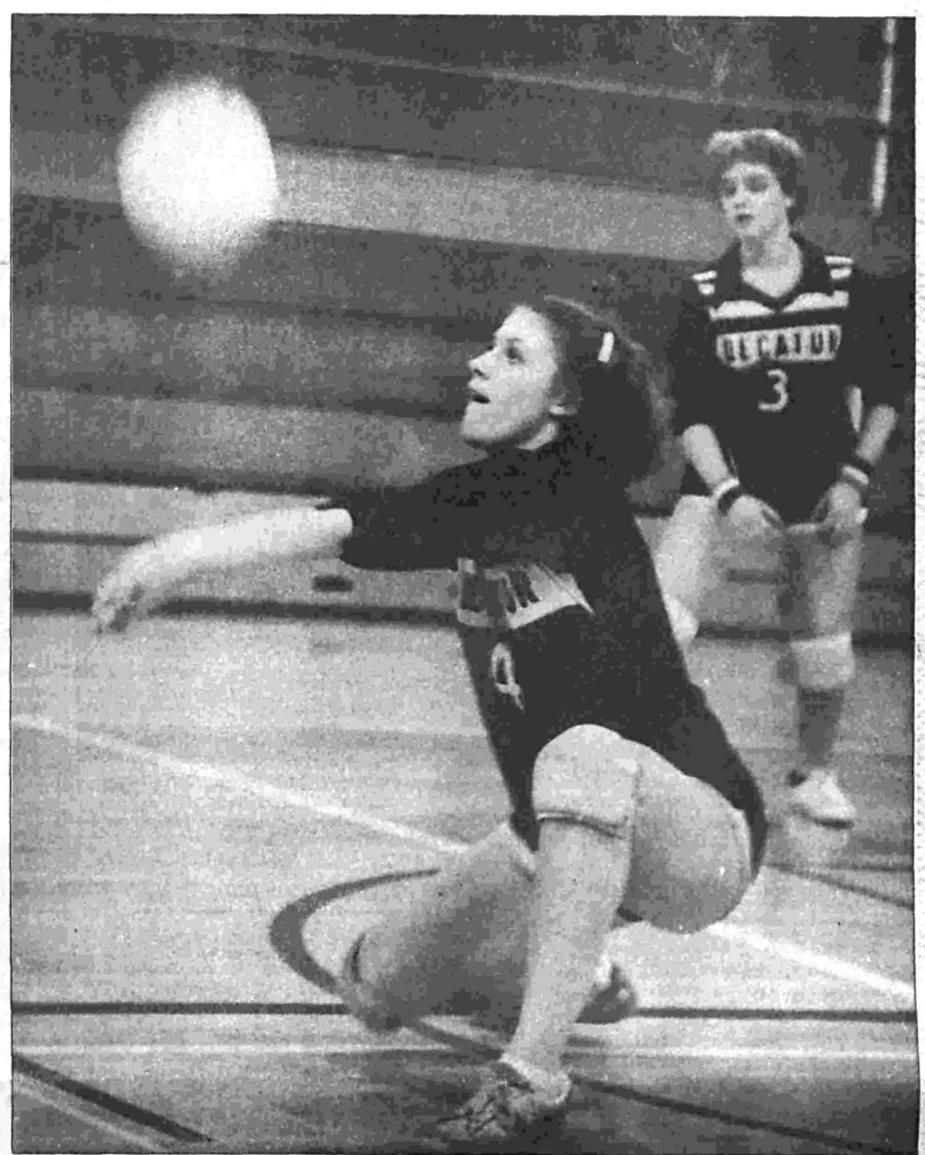

"We didn't look very good when we started the season (1-2 in the SPSL)," he said. "Then we started making great progress at mid-season. Skill-wise we proved that we can play at the state level."

DECATUR finished in a three-way tie for third place in the SPSL and swept a playoff for the league's third spot in the West Central Tournament. Curtis and Clover Park took first and second, but "I think we were actually the best team late in the season," Kamakura stated. "I feel we could beat either Curtis and Clover Park if we played them now. The way I see it, we were the best team from our league in the tournament."

Grid playoff format decreases local take

by Harry Brooks
Compared to last year, the Federal Way School District will take a dip of $1,650 in football playoff revenue this season.

Last Friday's AA-class playoff between Fife and Olympia was the only high school playoff game scheduled for Federal Way Memorial Stadium this year. Last year, the facility was the site of four games.

A district, which hosts a high school football playoff game, receives $550 rental fee from the gate receipts. All other stadium maintenance and manpower needs of the contest also are extracted from ticket dollars. Remaining gate revenues are divided between the state athletic districts involved in the playoff. Federal Way District schools are members of the Washington Interscholastic Athletic Association (WIAA) West Central District.

"The scheduling format worked against having more playoff games here," Federal Way District Activities Director Bud Hatley said. "Next year, it works in our favor." They (the WIAA) rotate the playoff locations around. It's too bad it worked out bad for us this year; we always like to make a buck or two."

Usually, Federal Way Stadium — with its astro-turf surface and equally accommodating, covered grand stands on both sides of the field — is chosen for the playoff game between the South Puget Sound League's No. 2 entry and the Tacoma City League's champion.

However, the Tacoma League, at the behest of its No. 1 team, Mt. Tahoma, objected to last Friday's playoff being located at Federal Way Stadium. Tacoma, desiring a better home-field advantage over its first-round opponent, Puyallup, made a successful bid to have last Friday's game at Lincoln Bowl.

Lincoln Bowl features a dirt surface — no grass or no synthetic rug. Hatley, who could only watch from the sidelines as the Tacoma League argued its case for the playoff location with the WIAA, has past playing experience in the grit and was somewhat amused when the final decision came down.

"It's quite a place," he said as he recalled his playing days at Lincoln Bowl. "The dirt grinds between your pads and your skin and gets in your mouth and, when it rains, it turns to a sea of mud."

Hatley looks at this season's high school football playoff situation as a minor setback for the local cause, noting that stadium receives frequent usage from groups outside the school district's realm.

In a one-year period from Aug. 25, 1978 to Aug. 24, 1979, the stadium's facilities were used by 28 non-district-related organizations on 102 dates. The district received $4,451.18 in rental fees during that period.

Rainier gridders look for a 1980 eruption

SCOTT MILLER, Mt. Rainier Ram end, eyes possible yardage up-field in recent North Puget Sound League football action. The Rams are now looking forward to the 1980 season as they return all but four players from this year's club. Coach Jerry Dotson labeled the recently completed campaign as "now history." Rainier finished with a 1-8 NPSL mark.

by Brien Lautman
Jerry Dotson, speaking from the archives of sports quotations, has already begun his "wait until next year" rendition of "we'll moider the bums." But the Ram head grid coach has altered the ancient verbage somewhat, saying that his club may not tear the league apart, although they won't be manhandled the way they were in the 1979 North Puget Sound League campaign.

"We're just now getting organized for next year," Dotson said. "And we're going to win other things besides the good sportsmanship award. They're gonna have to reckon with us next year. We're not going to punt the ball away every time."

The Rainier mentor isn't pulling one over on anyone, however, as he loses only three starters on offense and a scant two on the stop squad. A big loss for the Rams will be Val Blevins, who led the Rainier running attack, while also spearheading the defense.

Dotson won't find too much trouble filling his offensive needs next year, though, as quarterbacks Bob Forsloff and Craig Maley return to battle for the number one signal-calling position. According to Dotson, Forsloff will need work on throwing the ball this summer, while Maley, who already sports a strong arm, must learn to spot his receivers better.

Probably the biggest contributing factor to the Rams' demise this past season was the club's cavernous lack of depth. With only 33 players on the gridiron, Rainier was a mere skeleton compared to most other NPSL teams. But Dotson says that will change next year with a new influx of Rams, giving the opportunity for quality scrimmages in preparing for games.

Pizza Party for SW United soccer

The Southwest United Soccer Club will hold its first "Soccer Pizza Party" tonight from 5 to 8:30 p.m. at the Straw Hat Pizza restaurant located in the Twin Lakes Shopping Center at Southwest 336th and 21st Streets. Members of the Straw Hat Hawks Boys-Under 10 soccer team and their parents will be on hand at the restaurant to help host this event. The party is open to the public with half of all food purchase proceeds going to benefit Southwest United Soccer Club.

At the end of the evening a "Grand Door Prize" consisting of a five-piece oak dining set contributed by Washington Chair Co., will be given away. Many other door prizes will be given away throughout the whole evening. The first 1,000 customers will receive a $2-off coupon on future food purchases.

Fisheries stresses cooperative projects

For the past several years, the Washington Department of Fisheries has joined with Washington citizen groups in cooperative projects to raise salmon.

Generally these projects are operated by groups interested in rearing publicly owned salmon in egg incubation boxes, rearing ponds and/or saltwater net pens. Groups include city and county governments, educational institutions, sport and commercial fishermen groups and other organizations such as 4-H clubs, key clubs, civic clubs, resort owners, etc. The Fisheries Department acknowledges the value of such co-op projects and works closely with groups to help their efforts

TUNE-UPS ... OUR ONLY BUSINESS

Open Monday thru Saturday 7:30 am to 5:30 pm

GRAND OPENING BEGINS NOV. 5, 1979

From Mary Gilmore's "EVERYBODY BUSINESS" column in the Highline Times:

Quik Tune, which opened in mid-August at First Avenue South and South 112th Street is strictly in the auto tune-up business. Tune-ups are available while you wait, or if you prefer, leave your car in the morning and retrieve it after work. Either way, a properly tuned car is a gas-saver, and precision tuning is Quik Tune's specialty.

"We stick to fixed prices." "Customers can see their estimate right on the wall and learn exactly what the job will cost. We don't want anyone surprised. Our prices include all parts and labor, and we guarantee work and parts for six months or 6,000 miles, whichever comes first."

Staffing the Top Hat Quik Tune shop are manager Bob Nordstrom, assistant manager Paul Butler, and technician Tim Dolin. Nordstrom and Butler have 27 years of experience between them in mechanics, operating their electronic scopes and infrared machines like artists at the palette.

Manager Nordstrom, previously with Hertz Rental Cars reading sale cars for purchase, explained the dynamometer provides your car "a road test all its own." It's a and a half at 70 m.p.h. with a complete checkout enroute.

The electronic scope gives the lowdown on your wires and spark plugs, and the staff sets your timing and carburetor, checks your points and plugs-whatever needs doing to cruise in tune.

One more plus: For $15, the crew will analyze your car. If, within 30 days you decide on a full tuneup, they credit that diagnostic fee to the bill.

Quik Tune operates Monday through Saturday from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Chris Evert, Tracy Austin enter Seattle tennis tourney

Chris Evert Lloyd is returning to defend her title in the $150,000 AVON Tennis Championships of Seattle. The Seattle Tournament, which is the fourth stop on the AVON circuit, will be held at the Seattle Center from Jan. 28 through Feb. 3. The AVON Tennis Championships are being presented by Old National Bank. Along with Chris Evert Lloyd, 1977 Wimbledon champion Virginia Wade and

1978 U.S. Open finalist Pam Shriver have also announced their intent to play in Seattle. They will join Tracy Austin, Virginia Ruzici, Sue Barker and Wendy Turnbull in the tournament. This means five of the top 10 Women's Tennis Assn. (WTA) players in the world will be participating in the 1980 AVON Tennis Championships in Seattle. Tennis experts around the world consider Chris Evert Lloyd to be the dominant force in women's tennis today. She has won 93 major tournaments and won over $2 million in her career. She has won Wimbledon twice, the French Open three times, the U.S. Open four times, the U.S. Clay Court Championships five times, and played on the U.S. Wightman Cup Team eight times. The Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year in 1974, Chris was also named Sports Illustrated Sportsman of the Year in 1976. Between August of 1973 and May of 1979 she won 125 straight matches on clay (a streak eventually broken by Tracy Austin), and her 56 match winning streak in 1974 is a modern record. In total, Chris has won 6 percent of all the events she has ever entered and only 17 players have ever beaten her in competition. Last year, before taking time off to marry British tennis star John Lloyd, Chris Evert defeated Renee Richards in the finals of the AVON Championships of Seattle, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3. Chris also won here in 1977, defeating Martina Navratilova 6-2, 6-4. Virginia Wade, who will be making her first appearance in Seattle at the AVON Championships, has been ranked in the top 10 of the world since 1967. She has been ranked the number one player in Britain for nine consecutive years. Currently, Virginia is number seven in the WTA rankings. She is one of five players to ever earn over $1 million in her career. In addition to her Wimbledon championships, she has won the U.S. Open, the Italian Open, and has reached the semi-finals and finals at Wimbledon four times. An accomplished doubles player, she has won the U.S. Open Doubles twice, the Australian Open Doubles, the French Open Doubles, the Italian Open Doubles and has reached the semi-finals in Wimbledon Doubles eight times.

Born in Bournemouth, England, Virginia now calls New York her home. She was voted the WTA's Most Impressive Newcomer in 1978, following in the footsteps of Tracy Austin, who won the award the year before. Pam has ranked as high as 12th in the world by the WTA, and represented the U.S. on the Wightman Cup Team in 1978.

SELLING YOUR HOUSE

By Doug Fields

WHEN TIME MATTERS

There are always stories about eccentric old millionaires who put their homes on the market for some outlandish figure and then sit back, waiting-perhaps for years-until the market catches up with the price. Most of us can't enjoy that luxury. When we sell our homes it's because we're moving to a new job, or to a new house. Or we're retiring to some sunny spot. When we want to sell, we want to sell NOW. We don't want to wait a few years.

Most buyers want to choose a home that's new on the market, too. If a house has been on the market for years, prospects wonder why-WHY hasn't it sold? What's wrong with it? The difference between a house that sits for years, and one that sells quickly, is often the services of a real estate professional. We've the knowhow to price the house right. We've got the resources to bring in buyers.

When you're ready to put YOUR home on the market, list with-

Household Hints

Keep a working fire extinguisher in the kitchen and know how to use it. Water is generally the worst thing to use on a kitchen fire. Baking soda or flour should shut out the oxygen supply, put out the fire without spreading it. For deep fat frying, use a pot with a good cover. Keep the cover handy. Then if the fat catches fire, cover the pot to shut out the oxygen supply.
