Federal Way is moving closer to establishing its own hospital as initial steps are being taken to investigate the need for health care services here.

Two Federal Way groups met with Puget Sound Health Systems Agency (PSHSA) officials last week to devise plans to raise funds for project, known in the health profession as a "feasibility study." That study could cost as much as $95,000..

Current plans indicate that most of that grant will be solicited from the Weyerhaeuser Foundation. PSHSA, which appears to be the strongest bidder to conduct the study, declined to specify how much Weyerhaeuser project.

Other community businesses and groups also will be asked for financial support and Weverhaeuser officials said this week that it is unlikely that that corporation would supply full funding for the study without that additional community support.

"Unless it is a matter that deals very directly with Weyerhaeuser, we usually won't fund an entire project," Stephen Mittenthal, Weyerhaeuser program manager, said Monday. "We like to know that others are involved

He said, however, that the review board could not consider the project until next month as the 1979 community funds already have been allocated.

Rape relief: good grades for police

by Loren Bliss

King County Police officers and detectives are doing a "very good" job of handling rape cases, a King County Rape Relief spokesperson said Monday.

The spokesperson, Volunteer Coordinator Lois Loontjens, said that "word is spreading about the sensitive way the county officers are responding to rape victims."

As a consequence, she added, "we're seeing what we think is a difference in people's attitudes toward the police.'

Thus more rape victims are willing to report the fact that they've been assaulted. But rape and sexual abuse generally is still the most under-reported type of crime in the United States, Loontjens said.

Better reporting, she said, may be one of the reasons that the incidence of reported rape in Federal Way has climbed steadily since 1976.

In that year, police statistics show, 10 rapes and attempted rapes were reported. In 1977 the number was 21. in 1978, 28 such cases were reported, while during the first nine months of this year, there have been 29.

BUT LOONTJENS thinks that better reporting is only part of the picture. She believes that the actual incidence of rape in Federal Way is increasing too.

"That would be part of the overall pattern of an increase in violent crime that other police statistics show," she said.

While the numbers of cases involved are relatively small, the incidence of assault cases in Federal Way appears to be on the upswing.

Both assaults with firearms and assaults in which the victims were slugged and kicked have increased, though assaults with "other deadly weapons," which include knives and clubs, appear to have declined.

"It's a growing area, there are rapid shifts in the population and the area lacks a sense of community," Loontjens said, adding that these characteristics often go hand-in-hand with a rising crime rate generally.

"WE STILL don't have a good handle on what percentage of local rapes are reported," she said, "but we know the rate of reporting remains low."

Even with growing confidence in county police officers, Loontjens said, it remains difficult for some victims to face the emotional ordeal.

She said that the Kinsey study on female sexuality, prepared in 1953, showed that one out of every four women surveyed had been subjected to some form of sexual assault before their 18th bir-

More recent studies, she said, suggest that the number may be even higher today.

Rape relief workers, Loontjens said, have handled nine Federal Way cases so far this year.

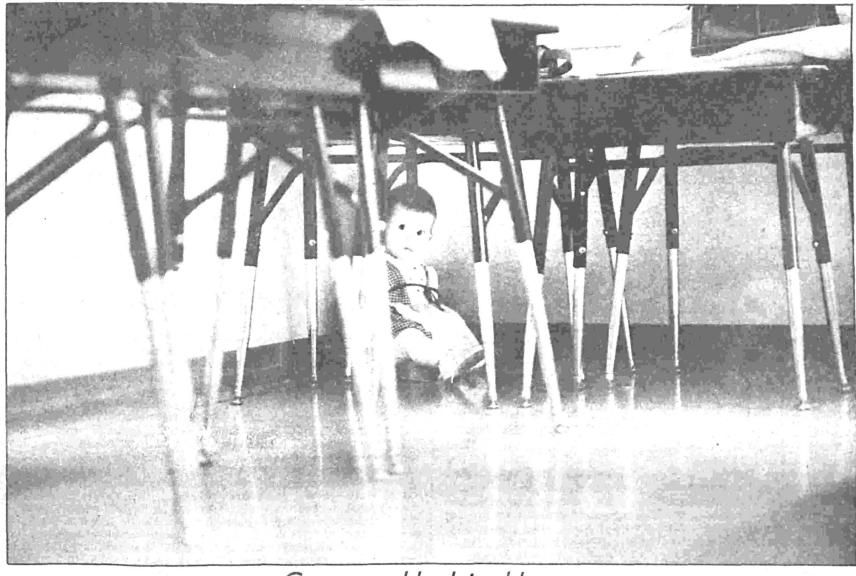

She said the agency is once again seeking volunteers to work with rape victims and suggested that those who are interested contact her at 226-0210.

Troopers enlist public in curbing drunk driving by Nathalie Weber Drinking and driving will not make holiday mixers more than ever this year as the Washington

Loning changes are topic

The King County Council will hold a public hearing Friday on the proposed revisions to the Federal Way Community Plan and accompanying zone changes.

The meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. in Room 402, King County Courthouse.

On the agenda will be changes recommended by a citizens committee for four fringe areas of Federal Way faced with current and future development.

The Federal Way Community Plan is an addendum to the county comprehensive plan and is used by the county as a guide in making land use decisions.

State Patrol last week initiated a "get tough" drunk driving program here and in the rest of the

The program, heralded by the state patrol as the first of its kind in the nation, depends upon public participation to succeed. According to Lt. Ed Crawford, local spokesman for the patrol, motorists are asked to report drivers who appear drunk behind the wheel to the state patrol so that they may be apprehended.

"Those who see a driver who looks like they're headed for an accident - weaving, not stopping at a sign, crossing the centerline - we want to hear about it," Crawford said. He said, that in as many cases as possible, a law enforcer will be sent to apprehend the driver, if warranted.

The program was initiated as a result of high accident rates caused by the drinking driver. According to State Patrol records. about one-half of the traffic deaths in the state are caused by drunk drivers.

"It's a constant problem that seem to be more drunk drivers will be on duty to handle the between October and February, but it needs to be worked on all the time."

The intention, he said, is that with the citizens' additional eyes, more drunk drivers will be removed from the roads before an accident, and those who habitually drink and drive will begin to reform.

WHILE NO additional troopers

Crawford stressed that anyone reporting such an incident will not be asked to appear in court as a witness against the driver.

The state patrol reports that last year it arrested 17,000 drunk drivers. Local police enforcement removed an equivalent number. Yet police enforcement investigated more than 20,000 traffic accidents involved alcohol; 534 people were killed and 16,028 injured.

Those are the figures the state patrol is attempting to decrease through public assistance, Crawford said. He added that, when possible, motorists should call the patrol office as soon as they sight the drunk driver.

"Don't wait until you get home, or it may be too late," he advised.

Editorial Do rich guys ever dream about tuna?

In an old issue of Forbes magazine we found this week, a discussion of salaries of top executives caught our eye. Of 25 top national corporation executives, one of whom is our own T.A. Wilson, at Boeing, the best paid was the man who runs Louisiana-Pacific.

His salary? A whopping $3,423,220, according to Forbes. Most of these men have a listed salary that is more modest, say $283,000, but stock options and other contingencies boost most of them into the range between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000.

Don't get us wrong. We know the risks of corporate life and the talent they possess make those salaries seem reasonable in that marketplace. And most of those men, among the top 25 at least, have paid their dues. Their average time in service with their respective company is 22 years. Typically, they've been boss for about 7 years. Their average age is 55. In background, they are most likely to have come from the fields of finance or business administration. An interesting bit of data is that more than half of the 25 come from the East, New York, Chicago, Ohio, Pennsylvania. Since these are the men who run our corporations, and who make the decisions that influence the economics of our cities and our international trade policies, we are wondering, how much does their personal wealth and comfort influence their decisionmaking?

How, given that recent studies indicate a $20,000 salary is barely sufficient for an average family, does a $2,000,000 man experience our current economic pinch? Surely, with the energy bind, there are corporate level concerns that command their attention, but we wonder, do they go home and sit by the fire at night, asking themselves where in the cold wind by miles.

heck they're gonna get the bucks to repair the busted water pump on the family station wagon?

Do they sigh over breakfast, weighing the prospects of ignoring a toothache for a few more weeks to save on the dental bill? Do they ever decide to eat cheese instead of tuna because it's cheaper? Oh, we don't want them to feel they ought to suffer like the rest of us. Rather, we wonder what happens when comfort becomes habitual. In fact, we wonder that about everybody. We wonder that about the guy in the car ahead of us at the drive-in, ordering a prepared burger with a side of fries. We wonder it about the guy across the street, with three cars, one camper, two boats and a couple of motorcycles. Are we all a little too casual about our comfort?

No, we don't think people who make a lot of money should give it away, ask for less, feel uneasy that they have accomplished so much in a world where others starve. Rather, we suggest that this is a fortunate time to be alive. When imminent crisis and talk of recession are afoot, we have the luxury, despite our thin pocketbooks, of being able to worry

We have the good fortune to live, even now, in a world where most people still have sufficient resources to stage garage sales of things they don't want anymore. In our shopping malls, teen-agers wander like sated young lions, looking for somewhere to spend their pocket money.

And we notice, as we hunt for a parking space in the Christmas madness, that nobody seems to be feeling guilty that we are still the richest of nations, or among the richest. If we suffer a little, or deny ourselves a little, or must adjust our budgets downward a little, it still beats a sharp stick and a

Key hearing Friday

Residents of Federal Way concerned about future development here should take the opportunity to speak out at a public meeting to be held this Friday.

At issue are various proposed changes in the Federal Way Communities Plan, the county's official zoning document for this area. The county is considering revised zoning which will control future development in these target areas: Meredith Hills, Jovita, Spring Valley, Lakota-Dumas Bay and a small area southeast of Twin Lakes.

The exact changes in the communities plan have been covered in previous articles, so we won't go into them

But we will take this opportunity to urge area residents interested in residential development of Federal Way to attend the public hearing, set for 9:30 a.m. in Room 402 of the King County Courthouse.

Important decisions on future zoning will evolve from this hearing, and county council members want to hear how the residents feel. You can bet the developers will be there.

We regret that the county is holding the hearing on a weekday during working hours. There will no doubt be many concerned residents who will not be able to at-

It seems a hearing of such importance should be held in the community it affects, and at a time most convenient to the persons who will be most affected by the zoning decisions.

Meet us at Mid-Way?

It's an ancient principle of government, one you may recall from having studied English history, that absentee landlords don't pay much attention to what's going on in the hinterlands until one of the warlords leads an uprising. When Metro announced last week that they didn't get enough coins in the coffers to allow them to provide all the bus services originally proposed for this area, was it a problem of dollars, or of distance?

Is Federal Way, 25 miles from Metro headquarters, so far out in the political south forty that Metro staff aren't much moved by our plight? We notice that the final discussion of the proposals will be held in downtown Seattle, December 13. Despite surveys conducted here in the past year about our interest in the matter, such tactics suggest that Metro is either a) insensitive to the views of local residents, or b)ignorant of the essentials of reciprocation, which dictate that if you want somebody's involvement, you meet them halfway. Couldn't we meet somewhere more convenient, like say, the Mid-way Drive In?

Immunization paradox

Immunization has had a significant impact when considering the history of catastrophic plagues which have devastated entire continents, virtually overnight. More recently we have not known such devastating plagues due, not only to immunization, but to the perfection of waste and sanitation systems, improved procedures in health delivery facilities and improved nutrition and diet habits. Collectively these procedures have probably been more effective than any specific immunization program.

The main weakness in any mass immunization program is the lack of testing to determine those individuals who are hypersensitive and may suffer a severe or fatal reaction. A secondary weakness is the lack of regularly scheduled reevaluation of the routine immunization programs to determine the need for continuing with the given program.

The classic example of nonselective immunization is smallpox when the risk from the immunization was greater than the risk of contracting the disease. A more recent example is the Swine Flu immunization program which cost the taxpayers millions and subjected the public to an unproven vaccine against a disease which wasn't even accurately identified.

In 1977, Dr. Jonas Salk testified, along with other scientists, that most of the polio cases which have occurred in the U.S. since the early 70's were probably the product of the polio vaccine itself.

Dr. Larry Schonberger has been quoted as saying that polio caused by the vaccine itself has become more common than the natural virus. This is borne out by statistics for 1970 which show that of seven polio cases in the U.S., five were vaccine-associated. Using 1977 and 1978 statistics, it is only reasonable to wonder whether the number of future vaccine-induced polio cases may well out-number the routine cases, if indeed any of the latter are proven conclusively.

The Revised Code of Washington states that children shall not be required to submit to vaccination against the will of their parents or guardians.

It does seem to be somewhat of a paradox to prevent a child from attending school because that child has not had his-her shots. If the rest of the children have had their "shots" where is the danger; if the "shots" work?

Some truckers rotten

Of course not all truck drivers are rotten - but some of them sure are!

Recently, I was driving my Datsun 610 on the freeway in the slow lane at 55 miles per hour. In my rear view mirror, I noticed a semi-truck coming up behind me very fast. He camped right on my tailgate and proceeded to blow the horn. My hackles still rise when I think about it. I held my ground for awhile but when he continued to honk, discretion and some stories I had heard in the past about such incidents cleared the red fog in front of my eyes.

If truckers want to keep a good name, they had better clean up their ranks.

The Shah: a burden

As I argued last week, there is much more at stake in the Iranian crisis than just the honor of the United States Government. The Ayatollah Khomeini and his band of Islamic terrorists have declared war on the entire system of diplomacy that has governed international relations for the past several centuries. And their success, which has now lasted slightly more than a month, means that there is no longer such a thing as a safe embassy anywhere on the globe.

Furthermore, an invasion of Iran by an international force is the only alternative by which President Jimmy Carter can gain what should be his paramount goals: the protection of U.S. interests, the maintenance of the international system of diplomacy, and the accomplishment of both without touching off a major war that might ultimately spread beyond the Middle

The fly in the ointment is the deposed Shah. Thanks to Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger, both of whom found in the Shah an understanding political and economic bedfellow, and thanks to President Carter, who seems unable to escape the ugly entanglements woven by his predecessor, the Shah has besmirched us with a bag of political garbage many times more foul than Watergate. As Don Juan was fond of telling Carlos Castaneda, a warrior must be impeccable, lest his own powers be used against him.

SEN. EDWARD Kennedy is the only major public figure who has thus far displayed the intelligence and courage to suggest that our position on the Shah might be less than impeccable. Earlier this week, when it began to look as if President Carter might grant the Shah permanent asylum, Kennedy remarked that the deposed monarch had run "one of the most violent regimes in history," and that under no circumstances should he be allowed to remain in the U.S.

The facts support Kennedy's claim. And it is certainly typical of Nixon and Kissinger to have found an ally and a personal friend in a man whose torture chambers would have gagged a Gestapo officer. It is also typical that our blundering state department and feeble-minded intelligence apparatus convinced President Carter to support the Shah until long after our credibility with the Iranian people had been destroyed beyond any hope of repair. After all, we made the selfsame mistake in Vietnam.

BUT OUR follies, however horrible their results, do not give the Ayatollah's terrorists the right to sack embassies, murder U.S. soldiers and seize hostages. Nor does the Ayatollah's barbarous conduct give the Ronald Reagans and the Kissingers of the world a case for demanding that the Shah be extended the considerable protections and benefits of permanent residence in the United States.

The point that Senator Kennedy was making, and it is unfortunate that he did not make it very well, is that if our government grants the Shah asylum, it will further jeopardize its ultimate freedom of action in Iran. What's more, it will have refuted the very principles for which we have stood since 1776.

Therefore the Carter Administration's charge, that Kennedy's criticism constituted gross disloyalty, is utter nonsense. But the accusation makes it clear that President Carter isn't above playing politics with the lives of his 50 hostages. And it smacks of the old Nixonesque inference that anybody who disagrees with the President is somehow "unAmerican."

MEANWHILE, THE Ayatollah has continued to make it clear that he believes Allah is on his side and that no compromise will be accepted. No doubt he feels that the Carter Administration's developing stance toward the Shah will prevent other nations from acting in our behalf when the hostages are finally murdered — which Khomeini has indicated is inevitable. The Ayatollah obviously also hopes that a unilateral invasion by United States forces will turn into a Jihad, an anti-American holy war, that will inflame the whole of Islam.

The logical path out of this dilemma is for President Carter to turn the Shah over to an international court for trial on charges of crimes against humanity. Then we should encounter no difficulty at all in raising an international expeditionary force, one made up of American, British, Russian, French, German, Israeli, Iraqui, Pakistani and perhaps even Chinese troops, to invade Iran with the understanding that constitutional government, including autonomy for the beleaguered Kurds, would eventually emerge from the ruins. WITH A substantial contingent of Moslems included among its ranks, the composition of such a force would counter any claim by the Ayatollah that the non-Islamic nations of the world were seeking to exterminate Islam. It would guarantee the cooperation of communist and noncommunist nations in containing the conflict, and it might even attract the support of the many Iranians who suffer as much from Khomeini's inquisitorial execution squads as they did from the Shah's secret police.

But the fact that the crisis has dragged on for so long suggests that President Carter is motivated by other, more clandestine considerations. Perhaps Kissinger has influenced him far more than we realize.

they're wrong.

In fact, Heimlich, who teaches at Valhalla Elementary School, says it's not traditionally a female occupation.

"It started out all schoolmasters were male and then it switched to females."

History aside, both men have encountered people who found their choice of occupations a bit "I hadn't thought about it until people presented it as unusual,"

Browning said. "Now, I'm trying to figure out why more men haven't been interested in it. "With the loosening up of malefemale role images, I think it's not going to be such a unique thing. I think other men will go into the field of elementary education." While some have found it unusual, others have been supportive of the two men.

Women teachers have also been "very supportive," Browning said.

Comparing his position to that of a woman firefighter, Browning said she would probably encounter a lot more problems.

"I feel her acceptability would be questioned far more than mine is," he said.

Despite the fact they both feel comfortable teaching the early grades, both have seen some reluctance on the part of some school districts to encourage

When Browning was interning as a University of Washington student, he was refused kindergarten on the excuse he wouldn't learn the necessary skills to teach other grades and Heimlich was once refused a job as a first grade teacher because, the reason went, as a man he couldn't provide the "tender, loving care" the kids need when coming out of the home.

Regardless of what some school districts believe, the men think they bring a special quality to their roles as early childhood teachers.

"As a male, I'm here to set an example for the child who doesn't have a male in the home or who may not have a sufficient male image in the home," Heimlich said. "I try to be caring and fair, something which may be lacking in the home."

Browning agrees he probably presents a different male image than that found in the home.

"Fathers are sometimes aeen as negative authoritarian figures," he said. "I represent a male image which is positive, kind and concerned. I don't feel I can get positive feelings out of being a strict disciplinarian."

Heimlich, a Pacific Lutheran University graduate, also has some idea about discipline, based primarily on the student's own self-control.

"I think I'm a real stickler for a lot of individual responsibility and self-control," he said. "I set up a basic rule system which is within each student's means. I don't remind them each day of the rules' but I let them know when they're out of line. I try to build responsibility in each stu-

Responsibility is just one of many things Heimlich would like to teach his students before they pass onto 2nd grade.

"My philosophy is I'm responsible for making sure each of the students has been instructed and has a minimum level of competence in each of the basic including reading, writing and arithmetic. I feel a lot of times they don't get a good base of skills in those areas.

Teaching the basic skills is something new to early childhood education, Browning said, but now people are beginning to see that early childhood education is crucial.

"It seems to me that for a long time, people looked at kindergarten and preschool as a kind of orientation to school — a fun and games place. They argued the children were not ready for learning - not ready for the basic skills.

"Yet we don't use that same logic, or lack of logic, when looking at 1st, 2nd or 3rd grades," Browning said.

"Just in the last few years, we're seeing they can learn. We're making an attempt to tap the resources a 4-year-old has."

The attitude is now becoming 'let's see what they can do," he said.

Browning sees the recent change as an extremely important move because "early childhood development is crucial to development in later years. What you learn as a young child can greatly influence your attitude and your self-image. Your self-image plays an important role in your production."

The kindergarten program, or the lack of one, was what initially prompted Browning to go into early childhood education.

"I looked at the area of the greatest need and I felt there was a definite lack. When I started in education, curriculum (in kindergarten) was non-existent."

"They weren't learning anything," he said, "probably not even the social skills. It was a glorified babysitting service with few exceptions. In 90 percent of the programs, there was no reading, no math, no language arts, no consistent organized structure." With the introduction of a curriculum and the realization that early education is extremely important, Browning and Heimlich chose no easy task when they decided to teach young children. "I know it's a challenge because it's not easy" Heimlich

Their decisions may have also signaled a trend to return to the days of the male schoolmasters.

English classes make incomprehensible clear

by Cathy Stone
Kyoung Lee was frankly scared when he walked into the third grade classroom at Mirror Lake

Elementary School.

He was surrounded by people who looked and acted different than he did — people who were jabbering in a language he couldn't begin to comprehend.

Today — three years later — Kyoung is Casey Lee. Casey is not only speaking the incomprehensible English language, but he's understanding it so well, he's earning better than average grades, mostly Bs or above.

A major aid to Casey's success has been the English as a Second Language program (ESL), Casey said.

Over 90 students are participating in the program at Mirror Lake, Olympic View, Twin Lakes and Valhalla Elementary Schools, Federal Way High School and Illahee and Saca-erage grades, are Korean, followed by. Cambodian, Vietnamese and Filipino. Other nationalities include Chinese, Thai, Laotian, Arabian, Japanese, East Indian, Spanish, Danish and German.

When Casey came to the program, he could speak about four words in English, Mirror Lake ESL teacher Sue Tebeau said.

jawea Junior High Schools.

Now Casey speaks pretty well, he said, except he still has trouble with some of the hard words. Getting Casey out of the classroom and into the ESL program not only helped him, but the teachers as well, Tebeau said. "It helps just to take them out of the classroom for a while," she said. "It also very quickly gives them something to do while they're in class. "Once they start to learn

"Once they start to learn English, they just really take off."

It took Casey about six months before he could really comprehend what was going on in the classroom, he said, but he began communicating with his classmates almost immediately, if only by sign language.

One of the problems the ESL program has faced, Tebeau said, is a lack of materials.

"We really haven't had a comprehensive program until last year," she said. "Even though it's not a structured program, materials are hard to find."

Because the teacher and student rarely share any one language, much of the teaching depends upon pictures.

Tebeau, who is in her fourth year of teaching ESL, said she spends hours making her own materials.

But, she notes, "I think the program is coming along. It just gets better and better.

"Another thing the program is trying to do is sensitize the other teachers and eventually, the community, to the needs of these kids" she said.

She explained that sometimes the teachers' reactions are ones of rejection — they simply don't want them in the classroom because, at first, the children can do little but sit and watch.

However, observation is a part of their learning, she said.

She wants to educate teachers to a different attitude, she said, because the students "feel strange enough as it is. Everything is different. They're in a new country. There are different-looking people and they can't understand the language.

"It's probably pretty frightening."

Another big difference for the children is culture.

"We try to incorporate a little culture (of theirs) in the ESL program. They make their own flags and we have as many books in their own languages as possible," she said. "They get very excited when you show an interest in their country."

But culture is more than just flags and a teacher's lack of knowledge about the child's culture may create misunderstanding, Tebeau said.

For example, in the United States, persons expect others to look at them when they're speaking, but in Asian countries, it's extremely rude to look an adult or superior in the eye, she said.

A teacher could interpret that as apathy when actually the child is just trying to be polite.

Overcoming the cultural differences has apparently been a greater difficulty for Casey than learning English. While he still does not look persons in the eye, he is already helping others with their English.

A "graduate" of the ESL program, he now returns to the ESL classroom at Tebeau's request to help her with new students.

Thus the student has become a teacher — a teacher who probably relieves some of the fear experienced by children who are entering the American classroom much as he did three years ago.

ONE-TIME STUDENT in the ESL program, Casey Lee now returns to the classroom to help other non-English speaking students to learn the language. ESL students listening as Lee reads are (clockwise) Eui-Jin Kim, 2nd grade, Lee, Eui-Jung Kim, 1st grade, and Khun Leng Chiu, 1st grade.

The picture of a physically spoke. When asked about her husband, she humbly said that he was a wonderful guy but she found it difficult to please him. At the least provocation, he'd fly inof what triggered his violence, but if she could only please him, he'd surely quit. In an effort to reach out to these women whose lives are wrecked through domestic violence, the Group Health Medical Center of Federal Way and the Family and Child Service are offering a workshop.

THE SESSIONS, HELD on Tuesdays from 4 - 5:30 p.m. on Tuesdays beginning Dec. 11 will be taught by social workers, Pat Nelson and Julee Rosanoff.

Ms. Nelson warns that domestic abuse, defined as "the act of violating another's psychological and-or physical space" knows few limits. "It always escalates," she said. "It starts off with pushing and shoving and moves on to all kinds of violence.'

The workshop is an effort to reach those women with problems before the situation gets Preschool out of hand by providing a support group, information for signing assistance and...a way out, if necessary.

Of those patients she sees at her job as Group Health psychotherapist, Ms. Nelson said Preschool is accepone of six are battered women. However, that doesn't account for its three-year-old the women that are hurt severely enough to warrant going to the held on Mondays and hospital.

In a recently started domestic violence program that opened with little announcement at the South King County Multi-Service Center, (MSC) there have been 24 cries for help since June.

Julie Matuzak, MSC community liaison said with publicity, she expects that number to greatly increase. The MSC recently applied for a federal grant of $34,000 to fund a 24-hour crisis line, advocate training and community education.

The fact that Federal Way is a sprawling suburb with, at this point, no shelters complicates the solution for battered women, said Ms. Nelson. "We can encourage people to get out, but that's very difficult here.

"People like to stay in their community rather than be shifted away to strangers," she said. "If they are moved to Seattle or Tacoma, transportation of children, and belongings is almost impossible.

IN A LOOSELY KNIT community, Ms. Nelson warns that the advantage falls to the batterer rather than the battered "Often, the men are charming and no one suspects that's what is going on," said Ms. Nelson. "The wife decides that 'it must be me that is bringing it out."

In a religiously-oriented community, the notion that the husband is the head of the household and is responsible for the decisions of his wife and children often helps convince a battered woman to stick with the marriage in spite of her problems, said Ms. Nelson.

Hoping to make more women aware of their rights, Ms. Nelson said their intent is "to go slow so they don't increase the danger."

Emphasis will be on showing women how to protect themselves, informing them of their legal rights and teaching them ways to better the situation if at all possible. "The younger they are, the better their chances to change."

TOYS, BOOKS and candies were among the numerous items collected by students at Sacajawea Junior High School in a four-day Christmas stocking drive last week. The students gathered enough items to fill nearly 500 stockings, including some items too large to fit in the stockings. The annual event, in its 5th year, was organized by the Honor Society. "We didn't reach our goal," Honor Society advisor Jean Durspek said, "but we still feel we had a very successful drive and we got some real nice things." The stockings will be distributed by the Red Cross through their Santa Workshop to needy families and disaster victims. Chairman of the drive was Matt Fikse. Among the students helping collect the stockings were Dawn Williams (left) and Kim Feldt. Adelaide Elementary School had their own drive, collecting 120 stockings.

picknick tables were pickup truck left the stolen from the Des Des Moines Suds-N-Moines marina sometime the night of his gas bill around Nov. 26th or early 6:35 p.m. Nov. 29, acmorning of Nov. 27, according to local employee told officers

The pair of wood, checkerboard tables were taken only hours after they were installed in a public area at the north end of the marina, police said. The tables were part of the ongoing park located Pacific construction project at the fishing pier. Workmen had bolted the tables down, police said, but the bolts had not yet been secured. Police said the tables were valued at $400.

Thieves took an older model Chevrolet from an apartment complex parking lot sometime during the night or early morning of Nov. 26, but the car was returned to the same spot the following day, police said. The car was taken from a lot at 22620-28th Ave. S. and returned without damage, police said. The same evening at the same location two other cars were broken into, according to police. About $50 damage was done to one car after someone apparently attempted to start the vehicle by tampering with the ignition switch, police said. Another vehicle which was broken into had an estimated $468 in items taken from it, police said. Those items included a CB radio, a case of tapes and a radar detection unit, officers said.

Police said the woman called police around 5 a.m. Nov. 27 after she had an argument with her boyfriend and another couple staying at the apartment. No arrests were made in connection with the incident, officers said.

Two Des Moines juveniles were arrested but not not charged after officers were told that the two and another youth were picking mushrooms at the Des Moines field house, according to police. Officers said the three youths had been warned not to pick the mushrooms, believed to be psilocybin. Charges against the youths are pending the results of lab tests, officers said.If the mushrooms are found to be psilocybin, a hallucinogenic fungi, the two juveniles could be charged with a violation of controlled substance laws, Police are continuing their investigation into an alleged assault at an apartment on South 220th Street around 3:20 a.m. Dec. 1. MOTHERS AND THEIR babies are involved in a group that is part therapy, part fun and part education at Panther Lake Elementary.

Mother hood

section

Just one step at a time

In a new class in Federal Way, new mothers find out what makes baby tick, older mothers have their memories jogged and the all have a good time discussing the pros and cons of motherhood.

The class is part of a 10-week course offered by Highline Community College at Panther Lake Elementary. In this group, mothers with children 12 months of age or less meet once a week to compare notes.

week to compare notes.

The goal, according to instructor Sally Baird is "to give parents support and education during a critical time of their child's life."

"Parents are often isolated from their "Parents are often isolated from their families in a mobile society," said Ms. Baird, a registered nurse. "This class offers a support network."

Though most of the sessions deal with babyoriented topics such as nutrition, discipline, physical and social advancement, this class was tuned into mom's needs.

"Some days go smoothly and others do not," said a young mother rolling her child gently across and inflated plastic tube. "It's just something that I guess you have to get used to."

Another mom, her child playing with plastic blocks near her side, said though she hated to admit it, she often breathes a sigh of relief when 10-month-old Terry is safely tucked in his bed at night.

As the mothers talked, the youngsters were free to roam the room, playing with scattered toys on brightly covered mattresses, and each other.

One child scooted over to the corner to play among the chair legs; two children sat near each other, laughing with carefree glances.

"You simply can't be spontaneous," piped up one mother as they all shared their feelings openly. "You have to plan and be more organized."

Instructor Baird suggested they devise a time wheel and "adjust your time." "Maybe there's a way you could be spending your time more wisely," she said.

Tips were passed around on ways of finding satisfactory babysitters in daytime hours, how to work up a co-ed babysitting group with friends and how to make inexpensive, yet stimulating toys.

Lucy Bush, who has older children, said she lost contact with other adults when she stayed home with her child. She said she finds the socializing good for herself and "good for my child."

Highline Community College also offers classes for children 12-18 months, 18-24 months and a co-op pre-school. New sessions, that cost $20 for a two-credit course, will begin winter quarter. For information, call 878-3710, ext. 499 or 461

FOR JUST A MOMENT, Lauren Bacon, nine-and-a-half months, needs the consolation and security of mom's arms around her.

BOB STEWART, Federal Way High baseball coach, re-unites with Federal Way students during Friday's basketball game. Stewart washospitalized last June and had to go through a series of operations. He plans on returning to his regular duties in January.

Stewart plans diamond return

by Harry Brooks

Bob Stewart is about to make good on his promise of returning to his teaching and coaching duties at Federal Way High School.

He made that pledge from a Virginia Mason Hospital bed five months ago after a medical death sentence was overturned by the results of a second exploratory surgery. The operation found that stomach tumors, diagnosed as malignant in the first exploritory, were benign growths caused by a rare disease, Retracile Mesenterites.

The findings discounted a 2 percent chance of survival and an eight-week life expectancy forecasted after the initial operation, but complications arose that forced the 39-year-old history instructor and baseball coach back to Virginia Mason for two operations to removed blockages in the abdominal area...

last of those, a seven-hour surgery that inserted a bypass of Federal Way fans don't like to see an inflamed area between the but the league's umpires love to pancreas and liver, seven weeks hear). ago, but he was re-admitted to Virginia Mason a week later because of severe abdominal

"They thought I was suffering a heart attack," he recalled. "That's all I needed to hear."

Further diagnosis found that the pains were caused by overexercise combined with a reaction to a strong anti-inflamation drug. Doctors switched Stewart over to a weaker medication, which appears to be working.

"I'm feeling pretty good," Stew said last week. "I'm getting stronger, especially in the last two or three weeks I'll probably be able to teach half days through January and full days from then

"I still plan on coaching, but I

> "NO MORE operations...I hope," Stew sighed with a chuckle of relief. "That's the main thing."

A two-week stay near Dallas, Texas benefitted his recuperation

"It was flat country and about 70 degrees, so I got a lot of walking in. My appitite really increased. I gained nine pounds there."

However, Stewart is still 20 pounds below his normal weight of 180. He came out of the hospital seven weeks ago at a peaked 144

Stew now is able to drive and attend events, but "I still feel drained afterward," he admitted, recalling a Christmas shopping venture that had to be cut short. When the subject of baseball comes up, the 10-year skipper at FW High immediately begins analyzing next season's talent. His interest and insight in Federal Way's baseball welfare has paid off in the past. With Stew at the helm, the Eagles have won outright or shared five South Puget Sound League titles, including those of the last three years. His 1978 squad finished third in the State AAA Tournament. Fifteen of Stew's former players received baseball scholarships to colleges, and three are playing professional baseball.

Stew is an active sort when Federal Way is on the field. He wares a path in and out of the dugout when coaxing the Eagles to peak performance, and the restraints that he must place on his usual vigor are unpleasant. So, Stew found a way to release some of stored up tension:

"I grew a mustache; heck, I had to do something!"

FW girls cage showdown by nipping Spartans

by Harry Brooks

It's showdown time.

The undefeated Federal Way Eagle girls' basketball team, now 4-0 in South Puget Sound League play, pulled off its second straight one-pointwin, a 35-34 squeaker Monday at Sumner, to remain tied with the Clover Park Warriors, who beat Curtis 82-30, for the early leadership in the SPSL.

The deadlock will be broken tomorrow when the Eagles travel to Clover Park for an 8 p.m.

The Warriors, who took the State AAA Tournament two year that tonight." ago and were SPSL champs the last two seasons, "are big and quick and fast," noted Federal Way coach Greg Bushaw.

Federal Way has enough of those elements to pull through in close ones — "too close," according to Bushaw.

"WE'VE HAD the tendency to play the other team's game," the Eagle leader said. "If they slow it down, we slow it down. If they speed it up, we speed it up. If we'd just play our game, we could pull away. I think our girls learned

The tone of Monday's game backed Bushaw's outlook. The winless Spartans used a timeconsuming passing game in an attempt to penetrate the Eagles' shifting zone. Federal Way did likewise on offense. The sluggish action wore on at a tedious pace until the final three minutes.

Then the tempo picked up, and the final 17 seconds brought out the stored emotions from the standing audience.

The stretch-run frenzy began when Federal Way's Patty Davidson was tied up while driv- charity stripe early in the fourth ing the key. Sumner won the ensuing tipoff and scampered down the floor for a final chance at a game-winning bucket. The Eagle defense closed down the inside passing lanes as the clocked ticked down from 10 seconds.

The Eagles finally stopped the threat when Michelle Ballentine intercepted a pass and dribbled away the final two ticks.

THE EAGLES, who canned a dismal three of 11 free throw chances in the first three quarters, found a touch from the quarter and grabbed the lead for the remainder of the game. Six unanswered foul shot successes - three by Cindy Bolam, two by Ballentine and another by Carol Wingate — gave the Eagles a 35-30 edge with 3:11 left to play.

Federal Way gave Sumner numerous opportunities to make a comeback in the remaining time. After the Sparts closed the count to 35-32, Ballentine was charged with a technical foul for slamming the ball after a referee's whistle stopped a scramble under the Sumner basket. Sumner failed to cash in on the free throw opportunity or the inbounds possession. The Eagles also missed free throw chances at 1:30 and 1:18. After the last foul-shot miscue, Sumner rebounded, and Spart Shannon Blanusa hit her team's last field goal with 53 seconds remaining.

Although being slightly perplexed with his team's play the past two games, Bushaw is excitedly surprised by the Eagles' fast start in his first year at the helm.

"It's a little scary!" he admitted while jumping with joy.

TJ girls split 2 contests

Lisa Hackett, a senior forward, put in her second shot of a two foul shot opportunity with two seconds left to play to give the Jefferson Raider girls a 40-39 win over the Bethel Braves in SPSL basketball action Monday on the TJ court.

The win countered a 48-44 loss to Puyallup Saturday and upped Jefferson's league record to 2-2. The Raiders host Rogers tomorrow in an 8 p.m. contest.

Jefferson jumped to a 13-2 edge in Monday's game as Donna Orr canned eight points, but a sixminute Raider scoring drought in the second quarter narrowed TJ's lead to three, 20-17, at halftime.

Bethel captured the lead at 33-32 in the third quarter and took its biggest edge of the night at 35-32. A three-point play by Peggy Halwachs tied the score at 35-all, but Bethel had a 39-37 advantage entering the final minute. Orr hit two free throws to knot the score with 52 remaining. Bethel blew a chance at the foul line by being whistled for a lane violation with 30 seconds left, and Jefferson put up two errant shots from the field before Hackett received her free throw chance.

Orr led Jefferson scoring with 12 points. Halwachs, Hackett and Peggy Fokkema each scored eight.

Communication. With it, things are able to run smoothly and efficiently. Without it, dissension and disorganization seep quickly into the void.

In the dispute over South Lake's Mastis Soccer Field, located at 360th and 32nd south, both dissension and disorganization have lecherously attached themselves to the controversy concerning the cutting of Mastis' area size, because of the new Federal Way Fire District station currently under construction adjacent to the soccer

The main friction stems from the fact that Fire Chief M.L. "Bud" Thorson said to South Lake officials that he would not encroach on the field's area any further, following an initial 30foot reduction. Now, however, Thorson claims the construction site demands more land due to a design change, leaving South Lake officials with a nonregulation state soccer field.

But the fire chief says he never made any kind of agreement with the local soccer folk to leave the field alone. And besides, he said, the field is on fire department land anyway.

Legally, Thorson is quite within his rights. The field does indeed sit partially on fire department land. But morally where does the public official

The fire chief has commented that no South Lake officials attempted to contact him concerning the soccer field matter. But Thorson has been acutely aware of the growing discontent among the neighboring community. A few weeks ago I met Thorson, strictly by chance, out on Mastis Field stepping the grass enclosure off to get an approximate measurement—he was obviously aware of the situation.

The amount of non-

A moral infraction

communication that has resulted from the dispute has no doubt added to the angry sentiments that have followed between the two parties, but a public official such as Thorson should have the courtesy to explain to a community-oriented group like South Lake, why their field must be shortened. Then, he should sit down with the group and try and work out a solution to the problem.

Thorson is a paid official of Federal Way, with the duty of serving the community, whether emergency-fire situation, or matter of community sporting activities.

The fire chief is wrong in assuming there is nothing he can do about the plight of the soccer field. True, it's no fault of his that design chamges on the site dictated a physical change of the hydraulic system. But to disregard the effect of those plan alterations on the adjacent soccer field, and on the kids who use the field, is not what I would call "serving the community."

The fire district's hydraulic designer, Randall Parsons, who made the design change on the site, said there could have been alterations made to avoid the soccer field, but added that those changes should have been requested last Spring. The designer also said that no request was ever made to avoid the soccer field when he first laid out the hydraulic system.

Thorson showed an obvious disregard for the soccer field from the beginning. One look at the boundary specifications of the site would have shown that the site was in obvious danger of huge cuts. However, the fire chief requested no alternate plan to preserve the field.

Now, South Lake parents, children and soccer officials are in a bind because of the fire house construction. They are not pleased with Thorson's actions, nor should they be. Mastis Field supporters have a right to be screaming about the abbreviation of their soccer gridiron. They are possibly losing a valuable community tool, and should cry "foul" as loudly as they can. The only problem, however, is that legally they are in the wrong. But in a case of morals they are right. Now, they must find an official to whistle Thorson for a moral in-

Mt. Rainier to join Seamount League?

by Bart Potter

Mt. Rainier High School will have an enrollment of less than 1,000 students next year, but it is still too early to say if the Rams will compete on the AA level in the 1980-81 athletic season.

Mt. Rainier's enrollment is expected to decline to about 960 students in 1980-81 in grades 10 through 12, according to projections of the Washington Interscholastic Activities Association. The Rams currently compete on the AAA level, for schools with an enrollment exceeding

The WIAA allows a one-year grace period for schools with declining enrollment to change classifications' according to Doug Ringenbach, assistant principal at Mt. Rainier. It would be advantageous, Ringenbach said, for Mt. Rainier to leave the AAA North Puget Sound League and join a AA loop before the 1980-81

But there are several factors that still must be determined before the Rams could make a move of that nature. The most important, Ringenbach said, involve obtaining a release from the NPSL, which is now formulating schedules for next season, and finding a suitable league to join.

A logical move, Ringenbach said, would be for the Rams to join a re-aligned Seamount League to replace Glacier, which will be closed. But it is no sure thing, Ringenbach said, and it is far from the only alternative.

The WIAA's study of projected enrollments in area schools, undertaken to determine the best league alignments with regard to energy conservation, declining enrollment in Kent and Renton schools which could make for new leagues, and simply the reaction of Mt. Rainier student body and parents to the change make for an array of possibilities, all of which will be considered, Ringenbach said.

Ringenbach said Rainier coaches are generally in favor of a change, despite long association with the NPSL.

"You hate to give up the tradition," Ringenbach said, "But we have to be realistic."

FW area high schools vault to gym victories

by Brien Lautman The Federal Way area high school gymnastics squads enjoyed a fruitful week on the mats as Thomas Jefferson and Federal Way both captured meet wins, while the Decatur Gator girls dropped a close decision to state gym powerhouse Clover Park. The Raider gymnasts eked out a slim win over Bethel last Tuesday, nipping the Braves, 95.725-94.825, while also downing Rogers in the threeway affair, 95.725-66.025.

While Bethel was busy capturing the majority of first place honors in the meet Thomas Jefferson was grabbing a lion's share of the second and third slots. Bethel's Lisa Downey took the all-around title with a 6.1 average for the four compulsory events, while TJ's Joanna Rodd was runner-up with a 5.0 average.

Rodd turned in her finest performance of the meet in the vaulting event, coming up with a third place, 6.65 showing while teammates Robin Carper (6.15) and Mary Krofshek (5.9) were fourth and ponents, 108.2-85.3.

"Teresa Layton turned in just an outstanding performance on the beam," Coach Debbie Hunter said. "She really looked good."

Hunter was particularly pleased with her team's consistent performance, citing solid scoring as the main reason for the slim win.

"E verybody was pretty consistent and turned in solid scores" she said. "We were just really solid all the way around, and that's what made all the difference."

by Terry M. Sell Seattle Seahawk cornerback Dave Brown has beaten the odds to stay with the Seahawks as long as he has, but he gives all the credit to God.

Brown is a rarity, an original Seahawk, and the only player to have started every game that Seattle has played. After a year with Pittsburg, the expansion draftee has tuck and stuck for the Seahawks.

"I was sent here for team's failures, reason," he said. "It despite often call it a successful selped me to see God operating from season. and to find Jesus atrocious field posi-Christ." Countless professional athletes ''I won't say said, but that won't ri-bave joined the Lord's anything to that," fle him either when team, and Brown offered a reason for that after Seattle's thrilling 28-23 win over Denver last Saturday in the Kingdome.

'What did man do to give me the abilities to run?" he asked. "You look at those trees and mountains out here. When you look at your abilities, where does it all originate?"

There are only a half-dozen original Hawks left, and expansion players usually go the way of the buffalo much quicker than then the pioneers were able to dispatch hem.

Seattle has had a large turnover of players in the defensive backfield, and only Brown and Don Dufek are left. Dufek, a regular draft choice, might have been given a better chance to stick at the outset, but Brown was and still is a starter. ''I don't think negatively, I think positively," said Brown, who expressed no worries when Denver quarterback Craig Morton was suddenly throwing to his side of the field late in the game, after working on left cornerback Kerry Justin for most of the con-

"A team is trying to score points, they'll go where they think it will work," said Brown. But that bothers him not, even against dangerous receivers like Haven Moses and Rich Upchurch.

Today, the trend toward lighter rigs is presenting new problems. One trailer change is to reduce tant. tongue weight so that a lighter car can handle it.

When the tongue weight is reduced, the selected trailer is balanced more, with a higher all-league percentage of the weight on the trailer wheels. There's a tradeoff here, for the lighter the tongue weight, the greater the tendency for a trailer to sway.

Anyone who has pulled a trailer for a number of years is familiar with the sensation of a rig that is either too heavy or too light on the tongue. If it's too heavy, the rear end of the tow car is forced down and it's a lot harder to steer. If your new car happens to have front wheel drive, this would also mean a loss in trac-

SNIFF, SIP, and ponder, David Lamb selects a flavorful wine for a festive feast.

Christmas sampler of wines

With the gourmet's eye looking towards holiday cooking and feasting, it's only appropriate that good wine should accompany the exquisitely prepared roast goose or glazed duck.

"Fine foods deserve fine wines," says David Lamb, a wine connoisseur and employee at Poverty Bay Wine Co. in Federal Way. He explained wines can complement that fabulous yuletide banquet from beginning to end.

As a prelude to the evening's festivities, Lamb suggests an aperitif of vermouth that has been flavored with herbs and spices. Served with appetizers, the vermouth will whet a diner's appetite for the forthcoming meal, says the 21-year-old expert. His favorite before dinner drinks include bottles of St. Rahpae Raphael and Lillet. He also added that a fine dry sherry could also be served.

For a Christmas dinner consisting of poultry with spiced dressing and gravy, Lamb recommends a mellow-flavored wine that will complement tham.

His first suggestion is a dry Gewurtramier from the winery of E.B. Foote. The wine's light spicy flavor blends well with the seasoned stuffing and potatoes. Another wine that will create the same effect is a chardonnay with a buttery flavor.

The heartier meats, such as a ham or lamb, call for red wines from the French region of Bourdeaux.

"What is needed with these meats is a mellow wine that has the rich flavors of the earth," says Lamb. He suggests a cabernet sauvignon with a vintage of 1974 or older. A blend of vintages also makes a palatable wine, such as the win wine produced by Liberty School wineries.

When serving a rich roast baron of beef or prime rib for New Year's Eve, the connoisseur says a fine red bourdeux makes a perfect match.

For the meal's piece de resistance, whether fancy or light, Lamb advises the sauternes. "They have a sweet, interesting taste that will go perfectly with plum or carrot pudding, or even a cheesecake," he said. "The flavor will stay long after the last sip.

He also suggests a glass of the classic bubbly for an elegant dessert. Champagnes make a natural sweet end to a meal, especially when served during the holidays.

When guests have gathered around the Christmas tree for for singing and conversation, it's time for serving a class of elegant port from Portugal. An old English favorite, the heavier wine has a warming effect when casually sipped.

For Lamb, who knows wines like the European wine regions which he has traveled through, the texture and flavors are very important, especially when served with foods. "To some wine may be like food, it's important to have a perfect combination at a meal."

POP THE cork of an elegant champagne for the holidays

THE BEGINNINGS of a perfect meal, start with mellow wines that complement the yuletide banquet. A variety of corkscrews ease opening.

Vine gifts for the cellar

For that wine connoisseur on your Christmas list, local wine shops offer a variety of handy gadgets, accessories and bottled gift packs for both neophyte and the experienced collector.

For starters, what wine master would be without a corkscrew guaranteed to remove the cork with ease. There's the efficient and dexterous waiter's corkscrew. Or, how about the "Ah-so" which will have you saying "ah-so" as the simple two-prong opener slides out the cork. But the newest cork remover to hit the wine shops, uses air to pop the cork, instead of muscle. This cork extractor, designed like a black hypodermic needle, pumps air in through the cork into the bottle. The increased pressure removes the cork.

For the beginning wine student, a mini cellar complete with a sampling from the vine may be a welcome gift under the tree. Many shops and wineries have boxed samplings ranging from roses to pinot noirs to burgundies. These small cellars offer from five to 16 bottles.

Speaking of cellars, wine racks also make terrific gifts. They come in many styles such as Scandinavian designs or Spanish iron with room for nine to 54 or more bottles.

The "must" item on the expert winetaster's list might be a tastervin, a small silver-plated wine cup. This small item accompanies the wine master into the dark cellar when he or she samples the wine. Designed with small indentations, the cup allows the tester to examine the wine's color in the dim light.

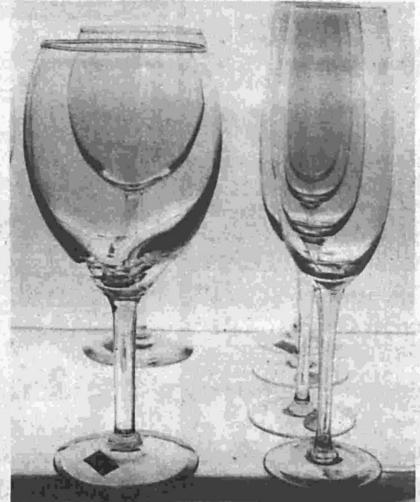

Another gift item that comes in handy at the dinner table is the "Wine Brix," which keeps the bottle chilled during the meal. This eliminates the practice of serving wine that is, either, too warm or cold.

For that special Christmas gift, or New Year's celebration, a fine bottle may be the answer, such as a $42.95 hand-painted bottle of Perrier-Jouet champagne.

Last, but not least, wine glasses make a welcome gift, especially for those who customarily toss their glasses in the fireplace, after a $50 bottle of champagne. There are many sizes and styles available ranging from large wine goblets to the tulip-shaped champagne glasses.

Let the imagination run wild while you're shopping. Don't forget about the good, inexpensive wines or cheese and wine combinations. Your average wine-lover will welcome the gifts with a ready glass.

TOAST THE season with a set of wine glasses.

What's Cookin' in Ruth's Kitchen

by Ruth Jurich

by Ruth Jurich Whereas an white meat away seek to cover a multitude of sins with herbs, sour cream and tomato sauce, a prime attribute of truly fine cooking is a respect for delicate flavors.

This truth was brought home recently when a group of us from the NEWS were invited to a luncheon at Weyerhaeuser Headquarters where famous chef John McGarry prepared a special menu for us.

One of the most heavenly dishes on the menu, in fact one of the most heavenly I have ever eaten was a Sole Mousse, which Chef McGarry said was a favorite of Jacqueline Kennedy when he was White House Chef.

I'm an old hand at detecting the seasonings that have gone into a dish just from tasting it, but this one stumped me. And when I saw the recipe I was surprised to find out how simple the seasoning actually

IT WAS PERFECT for sole and would be for other filets of white fish which Chef McGarry said might be substituted.

Sole is delicate both in flavor and in texture, and unless you're making a puree for a mousse, both texture and flavor should be treated with the utmost respect.

We have eaten a lot of fresh sole lately. Draggers who catch it commercially have had difficulty in selling it, because by the time it has been cleaned and fileted and gone through all the channels of trade, it's hard to make a profit.

Some of these fishermen, friends of my husband's have given him quantities of fresh sole right out of the water. He has cleaned it but has not fileted it. I have fried it, handling it carefully, and it has been delicious.

This raises a question in my mind as to why sole should fileted. Fileting is wasteful in time, effort and materials. If sole could be sold with merely heads, tails, fins and visceral matter removed the marketing process might be simplified and the price reduced. Then maybe the fisherman could sell his catch profitably. THERE'S LESS REASON really for fileting sole than fileting salmon, which is seldom done. If you place a carefully fried sole on a plate, you

1 teaspoon lemon 1/4 cup brandy Sour cream

12 whole strawberries Prepare pastry mix as package directs. Shape into a ball, and cut into 12 wedges. Reshape each wedge into a small ball and roll each on lightly floured board to a circle about four and one-half inches; trim edges. Fit each pastry round into a muffin pan (2-1/2 inches diameter, about 1-1/4 inches deep). Do not prick pastry. (To prevent pastry from puffing during baking, set a fluted paper baking cup in each pastry, and fill with uncooked beans or rice.) Bake on lower rack of preheated 450 degree oven for approximately 10 minutes. Remove pans from oven, and gently lift out filled paper baking cups. Return pastries to oven and bake about two or three minutes longer, until browned. Cool slightly before filling. Soften cream cheese. Combine sugar, flour and salt; add to cheese, and beat until smooth. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Blend in lemon juice and brandy. Spoon into baked tart shells. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes, just until fill-ing is set. Cool.

Gala holiday punch

A charming old custom is to adorn the traditional punch bowl with a little supply of totally unex-pected gifts at trimthe-tree parties, covered-dish suppers, even black-tie galas.

For a very special punch bowl, use boiled water in ice trays for very clear cubes. For fancy cubes, food coloring can be added to the water. Sprigs of mint, curls of citrus peel, maraschino cherries - all can be frozen into cubes. Striking ice floats can be made by freezing exotic blossoms into the ice. Add dry ice for the dramatic effect of clouds of vapor and super chilling.

During this time, many traditional dishes are prepared from treasured family recipes that have been handed down from great-greatgrandmothers. But today's holiday cooks face different problems than the orginators of those delicious, but often long and involved seasonal goodies. With today's hectic lifestyles, there's a need for streamlined holiday dessert recipes that are impressive, but also fit into busy lifestyles.

In this collection of Dazzling Desserts for the Holidays you'll find festive, makeahead treats which require only a small amount of time and result in some of the most elegant and delicious desserts ever created!

ideal time to propagate many shrubs. There are three types of rooting techniques, ground layering, hardwood cuttings and conifer cuttings.

Azaleas, rhododendrons, wintering blooming jasmine, hydragea, grape, camellias, magnolias and daphne cneorum are broadleafed evergreens that possess characteristically low to the ground branch growth and these branches root readily when wounded and placed in soil under the parent plant. Observe the plants and select pencil size limbs that can be easily bent to the ground. Mix equal amounts of sand and peat moss with soil to a three- or four-inch depth where the branch will be 'planted."

Cut a notch about half way through the selected branch, eight or 10 inches from branch tip and directly below a leaf joint. Dust the cut with a rooting hormone and keep the wound open. Scoop out a four-inch trench in the cultivated spot and plant the wounded section. Cover with soil mix, press firmly and water. Hold the branch in place with a wire hairpin. Stake the parent plant.

Say hello to Mischa the Bear. He's the official mascot of the 1980 Summer Olympic Games in Moscow.

And he's all yours — free — when you invest in a $500 one-year Guaranteed Income Bond at Puget Sound National Bank.

If you don't happen to have that much handy, you can still take Mischa home for only $7.

Either way, everyone wins. Because a part of the proceeds is donated to the U.S.Olympic Committee. You don't need an account with us to get Mischa. But Puget Sound National Bank is the only place in town you'll find him.

He stands 12 inches tall in his bear feet. So he

Talk to Santa

There's a direct line to Santa Claus in Federal Way and it's just waiting to be used by the local children.

Sponsored by the Federal Way Jaycees, the line allows children either to call Santa or have Santa call them.

Those wishing to call Santa can reach him at either 839-1300 or 927-3100.

The following information is needed for a call to Santa: child's name, age, if the child will call or if Santa is to call, special instructions for Santa, brothers' and sisters' names, pets' names and breed, desires from Santa, good habits, poor habits, and whether the child already has talked to Santa, when and where.

The information may be put on a sheet of paper or on forms available from any Jaycee and at the special mail box at Pay-n-Save in the SeaTac Village.

Forms may be dropped off at Pay-n-Save or mailed to Federal Way Jaycee Santa, PO Box 3542, Federal Way, Wash., 98003. Those asking Santa to call will receive that call between 6 and 8:30 p.m. Dec. 18. Santa also is available for parties, and will appear at home or office parties for a donation to the Santa Fund. Those proceeds will benefit area needy and handicapped. For more information call 839-

New life in urbanized stream?

Ask a long-time resident of the Highline area about Miller Creek and you are likely to hear about the salmon and other fish which used to crowd the stream.

Miller Creek, which begins just north of 136th Avenue South and continues southwest until it empties into Puget Sound just south of Three Tree Point, has changed considerably over the past 30

Fish are no longer abundant there. Salmon do not spawn there as they used to.

Urbanization has changed the creek. Parking lots, commercial and residential buildings, streets and a major airport now surround the creek, altering the means and velocity rainwater flows into the creek and affecting what kinds of material enters the stream.

Acting as if it had finally had enough of this man-made tampering, the creek rose in rebellion in December, 1975, and surged through Normandy Park in full

Among the damage the rampaging creek caused was the sudden removal of some 2,000 square feet of soil from the back yard of Phil and Elizabeth Pincha's Normandy Park home.

The sudden fury of the creek set into motion a relationship between the creek and the Pinchas; one of respect.

THIS RESPECT eventually led to a research study on the creek as part of Elizabeth's (Betty's) successful attempt at earning a Bachelor's degree in Geology from the University of Washington, awarded last year.

The study not only served to shed more light on why the creek is in its current state but also offered some possible solutions for its regeneration.

The creek has already shown improvement since the 1975 flood, possibly as a result of the removal of houses in the north clear zone at Sea-Tac International Airport, where the creek's headwaters lie. Yet, there were still no signs of a return of fish life, especially salmon, to the creek - until about 10 days ago.

Betty said she heard an usual splashing sound coming from the creek one morning while she were working in their yard.

Upon investigation, she spied three salmon who had stopped their journey upstream to rest for a few minutes in a small pool.

Betty said two of the salmon were red in color, indicating they were ready to spawn. The Pinchas said they think the salmon were no larger than 13 or 14 inches in length.

BETTY DESCRIBED the sighting as, "a memorable day in our lives since we came to Seattle from Huntsville, Ala. We saw fish coming up to spawn."

Betty and her husband, Phil, both of whom hold engineering degrees, moved to Normandy Park in August, 1975.

While obviously pleased with a visible sign the creek is apparently showing indications of revitalization, the Pinchas are

Of special concern to them now is the proposed North Sea-Tac Park (The Sunset Plan), which lists construction of a golf course south of SR 518 as one of its features. The golf course would be located near the creek's head-

They said they are worried about the effects of golf course construction on the creek as well as what would happen when fertilizer and pesticides used at the course enter the stream.

They said they are also worried about the future of a proposed holding pond at the golf course site, designed to help compensate for the ground area covered by Sea-Tac which would normally filter and store water before it reached the creek.

They fear a repeat of the kind of problem which bought on the 1975 flood unless steps are taken to insure construction of the golf culminated a sixcourse holding pond and several others along the creek.

DAVID McLEAN, a planning consultant for Jongejean, Gerrard and McLean planning consultants, who are working on the park plan, said Miller Creek was not forgotten in the plan.

"We know there are impacts, both positive and negative," McNeal said of the golf course. "There would have to be some storage improvements and methods to pick off fertilizer or whatever."

McNeal said the park plan will "probably" include policy guidelines suggesting all local and state requirements be followed on water management to protect the creek if the golf course is McNeal said the same considerations would hold true for other facilities, such as soccer fields, planned for the park.

"We have seen evidence of good things," Betty observed, 'So we have to continue to keep pursuing them."

WHILE THERE appearto be sufficient provisions for protecting the creek during and after park construction, the existing problems along the creek pose a different question.

The research study pointed to problems with drainage from culverts into the creek, carrying not only an excess of water from streets and parking lots but also depositing traces of oil and other

Betty added some other items to her list of concerns about Miller Creek not specifically pointed out in the study.

Her main point was to stress cooperation by the people living mental regulation of nearest the creek in helping to maintain it.

But she also stressed her feeling the whole community has a share in the creek's keeping.

"I don't like this idea that the person on the creek has all the responsibility. That's not true," she said.

V.A. plans skill center

The Veterans Administration is expanding an experiment in operating job development centers from Vietnam veterans by opening, additional centers in Seattle and 34 other major cities.

"The centers deal with three veteran populations," Cleland said, "the disabled, the disadvantaged and the undecided.

"They will provide motivational encouragement to all three groups. The disabled are shown avenues to realistic marketable skills; the disadvantaged have to be convinced they are employable; and the undecided are exposed to a world of information to help them choose a career.

"We hope to have about half the additional centers in operation by the end of 1979 and the remaining units as early as possible in 1980," Cleland said.

Usury law will be legislative target

by Brad Broberg

Highline area legislators anticipate high interest in high interest when the Legislature convenes in January.

And much of their attention will undoubtedly be focused on the state's usury law.

The law establishes 12 percent as the maximum rate that may be charged for consumer loans, including mortgages. While national banks and small loan companies are exempted from its provisions, locally chartered lending institutions are not.

Consequently, many banks and savings and loan associations have stopped extending consumer credit. And available mortgage money is dwindling as outof-state investors seek more profitable markets elsewhere.

THE SHRIVELING flow of out of state money into Washington has State Sen. Eleanor Lee (R-33rd District) worried.

"This state has begun to be a money exporter. That is very bad as far as I'm concerned," said Mrs. Lee.

Looking ahead to possible changes by the Legislature to the usury law, Mrs. Lee said she favors tying the home loan interest rate to A national indicator while a floating the 12 percent ceiling on maintaining other forms of consumer credit, such as charge cards.

"I think that kind of measure would have a chance (of passing)," she predicted.

State Rep. John Jovanovich (D-31st District) said he is opposed to lifting the 12 percent lid because if it's raised, "they'll just squeeze every last dime out of the average working person they can."

Jovanovich acknowledged the 12 percent ceiling means less credit is available.

"Sure it's going to hurt business. It's going to hurt my business (marine supplies). But we have to draw the line.'

Politics will play a deciding role when changes are debated, Jovanovich said.

"This being an election year, a lot of them (legislators) that would really want to raise it. won't because of the district they're in."

STATE REP. Eric Rohrbach (R-33rd District) indicated he leans toward tying all consumer credit to a floating national indicator, not just home loans.

He said the slowdown in the construction industry caused by the shortage of mortgage money could have an effect on the state budget.

"We're starting to see an impact at the state level on real estate excise tax revenue."

Rohrbach said there is a chance interest rates will fall on their own as President Carter, in his efforts to be re-elected, pumps more money into the economy and loosens the federal purse str-

"Perhaps just dealing with the mortgage problem would do until interest rates go down on their own accord," he said.

STATE SEN. King Lysen (D-31st District) said he does not favor allowing higher interest

But, "I'll be listening to all the arguments. If I think it would be to the average person's benefit in my district to pay higher interest rates, I'll take a look at it.

"I haven't had any of my constituents contact me.'

Lysen criticized President Carter's move to allow higher interest rates as a way to fight inflation.

"This country was built on six percent money," he said, explaining that the one distinguishing feature of the United States used to be that the average person could afford his own home. "That has now been lost." State

Rep. Georgette Valle (D-31st District) said she favors retaining the 12 percent lid on credit cards and installment payments, "But we may have to do something for the housing market."

She offered no specifics, but added, "This is presently being discussed in the financial institutions committee."

State Rep. Dick Barnes (R-33rd District) was out of town and not available for comment.

If you want to voice an opinion about the Port of Seattle's land condemnation powers, you'll have a chance at a legislative hearing in Burien.

Rep. John Jovanovich, D-31st District, announced Monday that a hearing will be held, probably in the Burien Library. Arrangements are being made for a yet-to-be scheduled date between

"We're trying to figure out the best day so as many legislators as possible can attend," Jovanovich explained.

The House Local Government Committee, chaired by Rep. Donn Charnley, D-44th District, will take testimony.

Jovanovich expressed concern about several residents who he said were hurt by the Port's

"I understand one man was paid $2,000 an acre; then the Port sold it for $4 million. How would you feel if they did that to you?" he asked.

power of condemnation.

"I THINK something really rotten is going on," he added.

Long a critic of the Port on several issues, Jovanovich has condemned condemation of the Weyerhaeuser site. "I was told Weyerhaeuser started showing interest in it in about the same time that they started taking (condemning) it," he explained. Weyerhaeuser plans to build a airplane hangar, west of Sea-Tac Airport. Jovanovich said it was condemned for open space-

"I'll have citizens there to testify," Jovanovich vowed.

One of those citizens is Edward Marschall, who has faulted the Port for selling his condemned land for a higher price than that paid him. The dispute has gotten into details on airport plans, and the Port has denied any wrongdo-

The Port condemned Jovanovich's home in the past, and, after seeking court recourse, he said he received about about twice the original offer. In a recent scrap with the Port, Jovanovich and the Port reached an agreement, and he moved to another home.

He also said he'll introduce his bill to elect Port Commissioners by district, in hopes of gaining more responsiveness.

And they have only increase the amount until Dec. 31 to advise VA of these expenses or lose forever pension money to which they are entitled.

The pensioners are primarily veterans or their survivors who chose at the end of 1978 to remain under what is now called the "old" VA pension plan because it was to their advantage to do so. Their pension rates were frozen at the end of the year.

A smaller group of pension recipients chose to switch to a more recent plan which offers higher rates to some pensioners, depending on individual circumstances.

VA said it estimated the potential loss to a pension recipient could run as high as $100 a month.

The agency said persons enrolled under the old plan who find they did not report all 1978 medical expenses may do so by con-

manual

Two Boy Scout explorer posts have recently been called into action by the federal government to help develop and field test an emergency preparedness manual.

Explorer Post 950 in Tacoma which has specialized in search and rescue and Post 530, the law enforcement post in Puyallup, were chosen along with six other posts in Seattle and Everett to field test for six months.

The effort is part of the federal government's plan to help citizen's become aware of how to react in case of nuclear attack, massive oil spills, bomb threats. riots, pollution alerts and massive power failure.

The government, in 1978 through Federal Emergency Mobilization Assistance. (FEMA) secured Far West Laboratories of San Diego to develop the manual
