Hylebos overflows, rain threatens homes

by Nathalie Weber Flood water ebbed from acres of Federal Way Monday following a weekend of torrential rains that washed out two bridges on the Hylebos Creek and threatened some area homes.

Continued heavy rains late Monday morning again threatened some of the homes on low land sites in Federal Way although most of the immediate danger While the Federal Way Fire Department worked most of Saturday evening pumping water from several Federal Way homes, those sites most affected by the flooding were the Spring Valley School at South 366th Street and Pacific Highway South and the cluster of homes on the west side of Hoyt Road at about Southwest 334th Street.

by the burgeoning development in Federal Way and that there was no adequate emergency relief during last weekend's flooding from services at either the King County or the state level.

THE SPRING Valley School began flooding unexpectedly Saturday morning when the Hylebos Creek running through the school's property began rising and overflowed its banks

Four members of the Justus family, which owns the 12 acres including Spring Valley School, had to be rescued from their home on the far side of the creek at about 11 a.m. that morning. The Federal Way Fire Department completed that rescue with a ladder truck as the flooding waters flowed within seven feet of the house, Robert Justus, son of Hylebos from the Justus house to the school. That bridge then washed down the stream, lodging against a car bridge of concrete and wood. Pressure from the foot bridge and silt that had built up against the car bridge caused the larger bridge also to wash away. Robert, who spent most of the summer building that car bridge, said he had never seen the volume of water that flushed down the Hylebos Saturday morning. "I've lived here 20 years and I thought I knew what to expect. At the worst the creek was never more than 10 feet wide. With the effort we put into building that bridge I thought we wouldn't have to put it in again," Robert said.

Monday, however, workers were salvaging whatever remained of the bridge after the creek swelled a record 20 feet. Madeleine Justus, director of Spring Valley School, recalled the Saturday morning scene.

"I saw the water was angry, but when it rains it does get angry," she said. The threat of flooding became evident that morning when the school fire alarm was tripped by the rising water. Madeleine, who was teaching a course in the school at the time knew there was danger.

In what seemed like only minutes, the rest of the Justus family was trapped in their home on the other side of the stream. The water continued to rise, flooding the creek banks and carrying silt across the school yard and toward the other buildings.

THE WATER subsided before causing any major damage to the Justus home or to the school, but the land's water system was clogged and the bridges were gone None of it was insured and so far no aid has been secured from it." government emergency services.

"You never have insurance for a thing like this," Madeleine said. "Somebody's responsible here and it's not us.'

She explained that it has rained harder during previous storms and that the creek has never flooded her property before.

foot bridge that crossed the don't want to be unkind to anybody, but it's due to development up the stream," Madeleine said. "This used to be very marshy land up above, but all the development has caused the water to run off into the creek."

Both the county and the statewere requested to assist in the disaster, but both declined, she said. "They keep telling me it's somebody else's problem," she BETTY AND ROBERT White encountered a similar reaction last Thursday when their home just west of Hoyt Road became an island in a sea of rushing water and mud. The couple maintains the water drained off a development of single family houses on Southwest 340th Street, just above the cluster of homes in which the Whites live.

Wes Allan, who has lived in the area for 25 years, said there was never a major drainage problem until the development was constructed. "There's absolutely no ifs, ands or buts about it. It's caused by the development," he

When the flooding began on Thursday the Whites said they called King County for assistance. "It was a disaster. The water was running like you wouldn't believe," Betty said. The next day the county dropped off some sandbags, leaving the placement of the bags up to the Whites. By Monday, some of the water had drained off the land, but more rain fed the streams

"The county said they'd have someone come out and re-do the culvert that drains the water into here, but so far I haven't seen nything," Betty said. "There. not much igore we can do about

As of Monday there was no ma jor damage to the White house.

At King County Public Works no one was quite sure who had information on county investigations of the weekend floods. Those officials thought to be involved were not available for comment at press time.

Auburn development could clip exotic birds' wings

by Nathalie Weber There's a graceful silver-blue fowl that occasionally can be seen winging through the sky on the outskirts of Federal Way.

It's called the great blue heron, a bird that stirs thoughts of a prehistoric animal with its wide wings and crooked neck. It can be seen, but not frequently, as the birds nest in only two known roosts in South King County. One of those is Dumas Bay. The other is at the bottom of Peasley Canyon, a blue heron habitat that may soon die if development is not controlled in the valley.

The latest threat to the exotic bird is the proposed construction of Auburn 400, a 368-acre tract

The alternative to allowing the birds to die is to relocate them, but McCulley lent little hope to a successful transfer, "Blue herons nest in colonies and only in tall trees. They're very particular about nesting," he said. "When one colony is lost, the chances of another springing up is unlikely."

According to Thais Bock, also of the Tahoma Audubon, there isn't much hope to coax the herons into joining the other roost at Dumas Bay. "They're just very independent birds and aren't moved easily," she said. THIS IS NOT the first time

Bock has defended the herons that nest at the bottom of Peasley Canyon. In the mid-1960s, she initiated the crusade to prevent construction of the Peasley Canyon Road through the marsh where the herons now nest. Instead of laying the road through the heron habitat, the road was curved around the marsh.

Now it's time to try again, she said. Some government agencies, such as the Department of Game and the Department of Fisheries, also are indicating interest in the

Send a card to Iran

Imagine yourself tied up, closely guarded, aware that at any moment violence might erupt in the room with you, and that you would be mostly helpless to resist it. Imagine this, for 30 or 40 days. Imagine, too, that in spite of your best efforts, the strain of staying optimistic gradually eroded your confidence, and that all the fantasies and fears you tried to forestall finally overcame

Far from home and cut off from the simplest of comforts, you can only guess and hope that the nation you represent is working to help you. Now, imagine that you were to be deluged by a boatload of Christmas cards, so many that the Iranian post offices had to be assisted by government intervention.

KOMO radio suggested this week that we all send Christmas cards to the hostages in Tehran. They even provided us with an address: US Embassy, 260 Takhtejamshid Avenue, Tehran, Iran. Thanks, KOMO. We don't know if you invented this idea, but our card is in the mail. Let's give the Ayatollah a Christmas to remember.

Where's the help when we need it?

When the Spring Valley School flooded Saturday and Sunday, numerous calls went out to various governmental agencies in the county. Since several people were trapped in a home by the torrent, and a school was being undermined by the rising water, the calls were more than casual in tone.

One call went to King County Hydraulics, but got no help. Another went to the Washington State Department of Fisheries, because the stream involved is a spawning ground. Others went to the Federal Way Fire Department and to King County Public Works.

Only Bud Thorson, Federal Way Fire Chief, felt there was any reason for concern. Thorson showed up, with some of his men. The rest of the bureaucrats called gave the callers the feeling that they were wasting their time. It was always somebody else's territory, or outside of 'our jurisdiction.'

Maybe that's how it was. But we can't understand, especially when there was even the slightest danger to individuals, why this sort of buck-passing has to happen.

Why isn't there a network which takes responsibility for guiding the caller through the unending maze of trying to get help? Why isn't there a systematic plan to designate priorities and to assign responsibility?

And barring such a plan, why isn't the switchboard at the service end set up to give the helpless caller an answer more helpful than 'sorry, we don't go out there.'

We hope it doesn't take a tragedy to get an answer to these questions.

Saturday morning safari

I was attacked one recent evening by a fit of innocence. In the glow of an after-dinner meditation I said to Chloe, "I don't have any habits."

She's used to this sort of television era come-on. We're all working on our act these days, as if any minute they might cancel Mork and Mindy and we'd be on the air, with our own series. Admit it, you've considered it. And your family sometimes sounds like a casting director's nightmare, everybody tossing off oneliners like what's-his-name on the tube.

So she just looked up, raised her expressive brows, and returned to her reading. "Wait a minute," I urged. "I'm serious. I have no

Half-suspicious, she looked up once more. "What about the crosswords.." she said. "And cleaning your fingernails with a fork?" "Me?"

"You like to straighten things." The way she says straighten, it sounds like a mildly immoral behavior.

"Fooling around with that dental fixture with your tongue," she continued evenly, unperturbed. "Biting your lower lip when you're writing."

As I suspected, she had a list longer than my innocence could endure. Fortunately, she spared me the cruellest feedback, that making unmerited generalizations is one of my chief amusements. BUT SERIOUSLY. THERE MUST BE OTHERS OUT THERE WHO, LIKE ME, HAVE ALMOST NO HABITS. Or who lapse periodically into a sense of being habitless.

In more lucid moments we know better. But HABITS?

When we say habits, we mean something vaguely distasteful, like fiddling with your eyelids, or snorting in the morning, making a noise like a back-hoe trying to start. We mean something unpopular, like taking a long time in the bathroom, answering the phone in a fake voice, toying with your

Oh, there are habits the health teachers of America told us we should acquire. Exercise daily, get rest, eat balanced diets, get an eye exam every year, and watch your posture.

But do they realize what a job that; is? No wonder we're attracted to the other kind of habit: tugging up socks that have lost their muscle tone, brushing our teeth with only a half-hearted elbow action, drinking right from the carton. Some habits are simply too solemn.

Not only that, but even those guys who seem to have strolled out of a picture book entitled Fabulously Healthy Humans have their own little idiosyncrasies. Bet on it.

The ones who gargle with blackstrap molasses also do things like leaving the spoon on the counter where it makes a sticky spot.

The gleaming girl who sells you cans of life-giving herbal additives loses her pericil all the time.

And the jogger, the one who puffs past your justbarelyopen eyes at ten to eight like The Little Engine that Could? Never fear. He leaves his running gear behind the door in a damp pile all day. His wife has mentioned it several times, but finally she's become resigned to it. "We all have our little habits," she sighs, making her voice sound like Edith on All in the Family.

If the residents of Federal Way sometimes suspect that they're getting the shaft from the bureaucrats of Metro Transit, it's easy to understand why. The events of the past few weeks, during which a proposed service expansion was first publicized, then gutted and finally restored to something approaching its original proportions, provide a perfect example of bureaucratic intransigence.

What happened to the proposals, and how Metro Councilmen Paul Barden and Jim Shahan managed to save them, has already been reported in the news columns. What hasn't been told is how certain members of the Metro staff did nearly everything in their power to obscure the magnitude of their attempted gutting.

On Wednesday, Dec. 5, a staff spokesman announced that the proposals had been reduced to help Metro cope with declining sales tax revenues and rapidly escalating diesel fuel prices. But he claimed he didn't know the number of annual service hours that would have been allocated to either the original proposals or to the revised versions.

IT IS truly interesting that such data wouldn't be at his fingertips. Service hours are the nuts and bolts of transit planning, for ultimately they represent the bucks - at about $30 per bus per hour for Metro - that go into operating mass transit networks. It is just as interesting that at first, the spokesman said he didn't know how it had been decided to shelve some of the measures and recommend enactment of others.

But early the following week, two things had become clear: one was that Barden was absolutely furious about the staff's decision, and the other was that proposals that originally called for 29,050 hours of service to Federal Way had been reduced by 61 percent to to a mere 11,300.

Metro's bureaucrats, however, argued from a curious conception of mathematical reality. They said that the proposals had only been reduced by 21 percent, to a total of 23,050 hours of service. Their figures were based on the almost-contradictory claim that the 11,300 hours could not be considered apart from an additional 11,750 that "might" be added to Federal Way in September -God willin' and the creek don't

MEANWHILE, SHAHAN and Barden had gotten access to the real numbers. And Shahan's Transit Evaluation Subcommittee opted to reallocate 6,000 additional hours of service and direct the staff to restore the original proposal, with changes only in the starting dates for the new routes. The two steps brought the total hours back up to the original 29,050.

Shahan dug the additional 6,000 hours out of a block of 10,000 that unreasonably optimistic Metro pencil-pushers had set aside in anticipation of the opening of a park-and-ride lot at Star Lake. But the Star Lake facility depends on construction of the phantom South 272nd Street interchange, a vague state highway department obsession that periodically shows up on various planning documents. As Shahan and Barden both wisely reasoned, it isn't likely to be built anytime

Thus the newest version of the proposal calls for the community to get the much-demanded Duwamish-Harbor Island commuter buses and weekday service on the Auburn-Federal Way shuttle in May.

IN SEPTEMBER, weekend hours would be added to the Auburn-Federal Way runs. In addition, express service on Route 177 — from the park-and-ride lot at South 320th Street to Seattle and back - would be expanded to run throughout the day, and the neighborhoods of Camelot and Twin Lakes would be added to the service map as well.

But Metro bureaucrats don't want to talk about how they'd accomplish the last of these measures. Originally they suggested running a shuttle between Twin Lakes and Camelot, routing it through SeaTac Mall and timing it to make connections with the expanded 177 service. Now they say simply that the two neighborhoods would get the service. "I don't think we should be going public," a Metro official said last week, "until we're absolutely clear about what we're going to propose."

Nor will the Metro staff willingly discuss the differences between service in Federal Way and in other parts of the county. They say it would require too much effort to gather the necessary data.

THE BASIC problem is twofold: Metro's paper-shufflers are answerable only to the Metro Council, and the Metro Council is accountable only to itself. Its members gain their seats either through election to other local governmental posts or by appointment.

Furthermore, despite the fact that Federal Way has two able voices in Barden, who is a member through his election to the King County Council, and Shahan, who is a Barden appointee, the community has but two of 37 seats. Yet it is the most populous (65,000 persons) and most rapidly growing area in the county.

The full Metro Council has yet to vote on the Federal Way proposals, which means they're far from a certainty even now. But the lack of adequate mass transport is rapidly becoming one of the community's most critical questions, particularly since 76 percent of its residents work elsewhere. As Barden indicated on Friday, the situation will have to be watched closely - lest Federal Way find itself once more being robbed.

Letters from our readers CBers can help apprehend drunks

I read your excellent article in the Dec. 12 issue on the Washington State Patrol's request to help apprehend drunk drivers during the holiday period this year. While reading your article, a great idea came to me.

CB radios are all over the road today, and I believe that most of theCB owners want the drunks off the road also. If stories were run in all papers requesting CB owners to report drunk drivers to another CB operator at any base station with a phone, the state patrol could respond immediately, and up-dated positions of the suspect vehicle could also be obtained to assist the state patrolman responding to the call. This would work on an organized basis for those who would want to get together and volunteer time to monitor specific channels to ensure constant coverage. Even if it wasn't organized, many people would monitor enough of the time to greatly assist the state patrol. I believe that all we need to do is ask the public for their support, and they will willingly give it.

Unfortunately, I do not own a CB radio to help, but along with the contribution of this idea, I may be able to help in some other

Is soccer dispute a lesson in basics?

When I was young, a group of us built a cabin on someone else's land without obtaining permission from the owner. When the owner discovered it, we had to take it down. It was a grand cabin to us, and we were mad at having to take it down, but we learned something from it.

The current dispute between Federal Way Fire Chief "Bud" Thorson, and the South Lake officials, seems to be very similar. The main difference is that some of the South Lake kids are over 21 years of age.

One question is whose land is the rest of the field on, and has permission for use been given for it? Another is, if the field can be extended to the east, why don't all of the irate and enthusiastic members of the South Lake organization put that energy to work clearing that land. By the time they are done, all anger will be gone, and they will have the self-satisfaction that they solved their own problem by themselves.

If each person and group within our society would take care of their own problems, we could eliminate 95 percent of this kind of dispute, and welfare. When will we learn the basics?

Rescue at Spring Valley

WHEN THE flooding Hylebos Creek surrounded the Justus family house with water Saturday morning (top), there was only one safe way out: the Federal Way Fire Department ladder truck. Ten firefighters worked to carry the four family members and the family cat trapped in the house to higher ground (above and left) as the swelling creek came within seven feet of the home. The flood was caused by heavy rains that have greeted Federal Way and the rest of Western Washington for the past week. Rains continued on Monday but no immediate flood dangers were reported that day.

The firemen were already there when I arrived at Spring Valley School just before noon Saturday. They huddled in the main parking lot, planning the rescue. Fifty yards across the usually melodic Hylebos Creek the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Justus, who operate Spring Valley School, was surrounded by rising water.

Between the firemen and the Justus house was a rushing muddy soup, thickened by brambles and boulders, stumps and snags torn loose upstream.

rn loose upstream. The firemen decided to telescoping rescue and firefighting tower. In the meantime, the people in the house could only wait, while the water continued to rise.

The Justus home is built between the stream, customarily about 6 feet wide and a wondrous natural classroom for the Spring Valley students, and a sylvan lake of perhaps 5 acres.

At about 10:30 Saturday morning, a footbridge connecting the Justus home to the parking lot gave way to the force of the flooding creek, at that time about 30 feet wide and growing. The footbridge, heavily built with 4-by-6 planks, smashed into the car bridge some 30 yards downstream and, along with accumulated other debris, tons of water-borne gravel and the force of the raging stream, crushed the concrete structure which was the Justuses' last link to safety.

With the car bridge gone, and water rising in front of and behind their home, they were effectively stranded on an island. Mrs. Justus, who holds classes for teachers on Saturdays at the school, had earlier crossed over to the main buildings. Inside the house were Mr. Justus, his daughter, Mrs. Marta Foldi of New York, and her sons Christopher and Gregory.

By 11:30, gritty water had worked its way over the stream beds and into the parking lots near the school buildings and was grinding away at the foundations of one building, built on pier blocks. Then the scope arrived and Chief Bud Thorson took charge of the rescue operation.

The scope was gingerly worked under power and phone lines stretched across the stream and extended to the waterlogged frontlawn of the home.

As Mrs. Foldi and the children stepped into the caged platform on the end of the scope, the worth of this device became clear. Short of a small bridge-building project, attempts to rescue the people stranded at the house would certainly have taken much more time and energy. With the fire department's scope, the task was quickly accomplished. A second trip across and Mr. Justus was picked up, along with the family cat.

All were now safe and dry on the main side of the campus, thanks to the fire department and a device also useful where things are cold and wet, as well as hot and dry.

Police demotion case dismissed

A Superior Court judge has refused to grant a restraining order to keep a police lieutenant assigned to Precinct 3 from being demoted to sergeant.

Judge Peter K. Steere dismissed the request of Lt. Jerry E. Lane Monday. Lane had asked that the King County Department of Public Safety be restrained from demoting him pending the outcome of an appeal of the action to the Civil Service Commission of Sheriffs.

Lane was promoted to the temporary rank of lieutenant in April and placed on one year probation in that position. An unfavorable evaluation of his performance by Capt. James O'Brien, commander of Precinct 3, in July and a second low evaluation in October lead to the demotion, according to court documents filed

The 10-year veteran of the police force contended in a deposition that the demotion would destroy his livelihood and asked that the department be made to show cause why the action shouldn't be blocked.

Lane, who has never been demoted or incurred a disciplinary action before, will lose about $94 a month because of the demotion.

According to court documents, Capt. O'Brien was overheard telling another officer he was "going to submarine" Lane when the two we're transferred to Precinct 3. No reason was given why O'Brien might have made such a statement.

In his motion to the court, Lane asked that his pay raise and rank be reinstated and that the demotion proceeding be stayed.

The five teachers commenting on discipline in Federal Way schools are members of the eightperson task force implement a plan for establishing the student behavior standards and possible solutions to discipline problems. John Metcalf, Decatur High School teacher and president of the Federal Way Education Association, said discipline is a minor problem in Federal Way as compared to larger urban districts where teachers are threatened or actually attacked by students.

"On the other hand," Metcalf said, "from time to time, the teaching function is interrupted by students who can best be described as disruptive."

But, notes Metcalf, this is a good year.

"From what I've heard and personally observed, the students are considerably better behaved."

Cathy Stone

Last Friday morning, I was awakened by the sound of a fire truck's radio blaring the sounds of an emergency. When I opened my eyes, I saw the reflections of strobing emergency lights. Looking out my bedroom window, it seemed Pacific Highway South had been taken over by a myriad of emergency vehicles. There were aid units, Medic I, a fire truck and several police cars.

An accident. Later that day, sirens once again drew me to that window. It was a repeat of an earlier scene.

Those two accidents, occurring within 16 hours of each other, had a great deal in common.

They occurred at nearly the same spot. It was dark. It was raining heavily. They were car-pedestrian accidents. Both could have been avoided.

They may yet share another similarity.

The victim in the first accident was killed instantly when a vertebrae of his spinal cord was separated. The second victim is in serious condition.

Kent Police say they don't know if he will live or die.

The first accident happened about 6:30 a.m. As I looked out my window in a sleepy haze, I had no way of knowing the 49-year-old man laying on the wet pavement was someone I had greeted on occasion, someone I had conversed with, someone who was perhaps not a friend, but who, from time to time, had some effect on my life.

The second victim was someone I had never seen before. But as I talked to his vouthful friend after the accident, I realized he must be a few years younger than my cousin, a few years older than my nephew and doubtless is someone's cousin, someone's nephew.

While neither "victim" had a significant influence on my life, I was saddened by both accidents. The sadness came not from a personal loss, but a knowledge that the accidents were needless. They could have easily been avoided.

The man, who was perhaps worried about missing his bus, cut across the busy highway. The youth did the same. During both incidents, a crosswalk lay unused a few hundred feet down the road under a traffic light.

I was also saddened because there were two other victims in these accidents who just as easily could have been me' They were the drivers of the vehicles who suddenly saw a human being in the headlights of their cars. There had been no warning, no hint of the disaster that was about to take place.

When the headlights caught the movement, they applied their brakes. They probably did everything they could to avoid the person in front of them but it was not enough.

They likely will carry that nightmare with them for a long time.

Caution required for buses

Highline area motorists were reminded again this week of traffic laws relating to school buses.

A school bus stopped at the edge of the roadway, with stop sign extended and red lights flashing, is taking on or letting off passengers, according to Ted Gary, bus safety consultant to the Highline School District.

It is unlawful for cars approaching the bus from either direction to proceed, he said. They must stop and wait until the red lights stop flashing and the stop sign is retracted.

Recently, an unloading Highline school bus was struck from the rear by a car that had stopped in accordance with the law, but was rammed from behind by another car. No one was injured, but considerable damage was done done.

"On these dark mornings and afternoons," Gary said, "drivers must be especially cautious of school buses loading and unloading The children often cross the street after getting off the bus. We don't want any tragedies caused by an unwary autoist."

School bus drivers have reported recently that an unusual number of cars do not observe the law and pass the bus while its red lights are flashing, according to Gary.

It's begining to look (yawn) a lot like Christmas

Some people shop early. They're the ones sitting at home right now, feet up on a hassock, fire roaring, hot toddy steaming nearby.

Some don't shop at all. They're probably out there in the garage getting sawdust in their pants cuffs, risking their thumbs and knuckles with sharp instruments, to make you a breadboard or a wine rack or a choo choo train (for your rug rat).

Most however, are sloshing through the parking lots, standing in line at counters, piling up the charge account. In the spirit of Christmas, your friends and neighbors are out shopping.

Our photographer found a few of them doing what comes naturally this week at Sea-Tac Mall, taking a break from the hard work of shopping. Even the stroller passengers and the normally unquenchable five year olds were beginning to show signs of wear and tear. Well, maybe Christmas morning it will all be worth it.

FOUR-YEAR-old Henry Caudle appears to be wondering if all the wear and tear is worth it as he waits for Mom to finish her Christmas shopping. Come Christmas morning, he's sure to think so.

THE JOB OF Christmas shopping doesn't seem to bother 11-month-old McKenna at all, in fact, "she thinks this is great," said mom Diane Dotson.

DINING SPOTS on the mall were filled as weary shoppers stopped to refuel.

TJ girls rip Gator baskets

by Harry Brooks

The Jefferson girls, basketball team showed definite signs of growing up Monday night, and, if the Raiders continue their maturity, they may blossom into the West Central District AAA Tournament.

With a consistent exhibition of balance and poise, Jefferson overwhelmed the Decatur Gators 64-41 in South Puget Sound League action. The win evened TJ's SPSL record at 3-3 and increased the optimism of head coach Sam Mitchell.

"Our players are starting to build more confidence," he said. "Th.ey're seeing some of the things we work on in practice work out in the game. With that going for us, we can beat some people now."

"I figure Clover Park (6-0) and Federal Way (5-1) are in pretty good shape for the (West Central) playoffs. The rest of us are the lead eight times, Jefferson fighting for the third and fourth grabbed a 26-124 edge on Donna spots."

THE DECATUR Gators are watching their playoff chance a seemingly reasonable goal at the the onset of the season season, steadily slip away. After winning their first two SPSL outings, the Gators now have suffered four consecutive losses. Coach Gary Baker and his girls were trying to start turning their fortunes around through a long chalk session immediately after Monday's demise; thus, the Decatur mentor was unavailable for comment.

Jefferson, showing solid play in all phases of its game, took command in the second half and didn't let up until the final buzzer when Marcy Smith's 12-foot jumper found net to give TJ its biggest point differential of the grabbed a 26-24 edge on Donna Orr's two free throws with 2:15 left before half time, extended its lead to 5 by break time and began a stampede with 8 unanswered points to begin the third quarter. Decatur could only get within 10 points of the Raiders once (41-32) in the remainder of the contest.

JEFFERSON'S COLLAPSING zone damaged Decatur's inside game, which usually is highlighted by talented front-liners Lisa Dolezal and Cindy Suss. The Raiders checked Decatur to just 5 points in the final quarter.

When Decatur got a shot off, TJ's Lisa Hackett continually came down with the rebound. She pulled down a game-high 15 and added 12 points; to the Raider cause. Jefferson's Donna Orr led all scorers with 18 points. The junior guard gathered most of those with outside shooting accuracy. She had 14 in the first half and 6 during one unanswered stretch late in the second quarter. Dolezal and Suss canned 12 and 11 respectively for the home team, but the rest of the Gators only managed 18.

Jefferson closes out the pre-Christmas portion of its SPSL campaign tomorrow at Sumner. Decatur travels to Lakes tomorrow. Both contests begin at 8 p.m.

Wes Stock is not a complicated man. He is eager to please, quick to smile, and impossible not to like. The Seattle Mariner pitching coach and 10-year Federal Way area resident is also highly successful at what he does.

Sitting at the kitchen counter of his Browns Point home beside his 1974 World Series championship trophy, Stock seems to exude an air of quiet confidence. The trophy's spray of reflected light covers the coach, properly tying him to the gold-plated symbol of baseball perfection.

Over the years, Stock has accumulated three world championship rings (one with the 1969 Mets, the other two with Oakland in 1973-74) in his lengthy major league coaching career. The Mariner coach also competed as a player for seven big league campaigns.

Stock, his wife Bev, and their two sons Jeff and Kevin first came to Browns Point following the 1969 season with the New York Mets. The former southpaw hurler is no stranger to the area, however, as he grew up near Shelton, Wa. in the small logging town of Allyn. It was there that the Mariner coach began his baseball career, although not exactly by his own choice.

"I didn't start playing baseball until my junior year in high school, and then that was mostly just a town-oriented team," he said. "I never really even thought about playing baseball until scouts began talking to me my senior year. I was more or less just out for a good time."

Following his senior year, Stock shunned "a chance to sign with four or five pro teams," and walked on at Washington State University in Pullman. There he pitched until the end of his junior year before finally signing with the Baltimore Orioles.

Success came quickly for the rangy left-hander as he compiled a 14-6 Class-C minor league record and grabbed the league's "Rookie of the Year" honors. The next season he was moved from C-ball up to Vancouver of the AAA Pacific Coast League. Stock was not long for the majors, though, as the Orioles elevated him to the parent club in June of that season (1959). He spent four years with the American League club before being traded to Kansas City in 1964.

With the Athletics Stock pitched three seasons until encountering severe arm problems in 1966 that ended his playing career.

KC's pitching loss was an immediate coaching gain as they assigned the seven-year veteran to be their AAA farm system pitching instructor. He was eventually lured away from Kansas City by the Mets in 1968, and escaped the Big Apple the next season to join the ill-fated Seattle Pilots. The Washington-bred hurler then took his coaching skills to the Milwaukee Brewer organization for four campaigns before owner Charles O. Finley asked him to join the 1973 World Champion Oakland A's coaching

"Charlie called me and said, 'I want you as my pitching coach,' so I went," he explained. "It all worked out pretty well."

"Pretty well" is what one might call an understatement as Stock inherited a pitching staff that included such notables as, Jim "Catfish" Hunter, John

"Blue Moon" Odom, Ken Holtzman, Rollie Fingers and Vida Blue.

"They were a great, close-knit bunch of guys," Stock recalled. "They pulled for each other unbelievably. There was no jealousy among those guys. They always pulled for each other."

The Mariner pitching coach is a staunch believer in unity among his hurlers. Without it, he says, dissension sets in quickly.

"I try to keep the jealousy situation down among the players. The group of pitchers don't do anything by themselves," he explained. "We do everything as a group. We run together, throw together— we all do the same thing.

"What you have is 10 guys who are competing against each other for playing time, so they have to be pulling for each other," he continued. "I think at Seattle right now we have 10 guys who do that."

Although Stock's group of young Seattle pitchers have not won a great deal since the club's inception in 1977, the Mariner mentor is not overly concerned. What does concern Stock is that he must keep his pitchers on a an even keel during the club's "difficult years."

"The manager's job is to chew the players out and the coaches' job is to build the players confidence back up," he said. "We're the eyes of the players, they can't see themselves pitching, so they have to have confidence in your eyes. My job is to get them straightened out as best I can so they can pitch when they are needed. A coach is a supporter for the players."

But Stock has also learned another side of the professional coaching game, and he has formulated a motto to describe it:

"You're hired to be fired," he quipped. "No coaching job is secure, but you can't worry about that. When new managers come in they very often bring their own coaches, but at Oakland I stayed on through four managers."

In 1977, Stock applied for the Seattle Mariner expansion job and was accepted, leaving the bay area.

"The opportunity arose to come here to Seattle with the Mariners, so I applied, was accepted and told Charlie I was leaving," he remembered. "Both our kids were in junior and senior high and I hadn't seen even one of their baseball games. It was just a good opportunity to come home."

Oakland owner Finley, however, was not quite as excited about Stock's move to the Northwest, so he flew up to Seattle to talk to the Mariner pitching coach.

"Charlie didn't want me to take the job with Seattle and leave the Athletics, so he flew into Seattle," Stock explained. "While he was standing in my living room, looking out at a sunset over the water, he turned to me and said: 'I guess I really don't blame you Wes.'"

So, the Mariners had a pitching coach and Stock was back home in the Northwest, close to his family.

"My family and I are very happy here in Seattle, and we hope the opportunity stays here for us. "We're starting to get a pretty good ballclub together," he said referring to the M's. "I think we've got good, young pitchers and that's what ballclubs are

Vandals hit country club, school; damage at $10,000

tives are seeking three local teenagers in connection with the most recent outbreak of vandalism in the Twin Lakes Country Club vicinity, it was reported Monday.

Damage in the incident, in which the golf course and the lawn of Olympic View Elementary School were severly damaged by three youths in an automobile with Oregon license plates, is expected to exceed $10,000, Detective Doug MacDonald

The youths reportedly drove the golf course at several locations and accelerated rapidly, gouging deep tiremarks into the rainsoftened turf.

MacDonald said they did the same thing at the elementary school, striking both facilities at about 5 a.m. Thursday.

Damage in the incident, he said, was first estimated at a much lower sum, but police subsequently learned that the sod necessary to repair the damage to the golf course costs about $10 per square foot.

An employee of the vandals had also been extensively vanbooby-trapped Southwest 320th Street in the vicinity of Decatur High School. He said that large concrete blocks and rocks had been placed in the roadway and covered

They say they believe the suspects are part of the same band of teenagers that has extensively vandalized Twin Lakes Plaza, a business and professional center where rowdy and often drunken teens sometimes congregate after dark.

Thursday night or early Friday morning, detectives reported.

They said that thieves entered the premises from an adjacent building and took 91 separate items, adding that the estimated loss may be even higher than was originally reported.

Meanwhile, Detective Marvin Jackson reported that he arrested two Des Moines teenagers in connection with a recent double burglary at a Star

South discount sales Lake Road duplex, at recovering all the property that was taken in the crime.

The burglaries occurred sometime Friday night or Saturday morning, Jackson said. Detectives are seeking three more suspects in the case.

Municipal bonds

While anticipating the shock of your 1979 taxes, consider investing some of your serious money" in local municipal bonds.

You may have voted on whether your community should float a bond issue to finance a new school, highway, bridge or other civic improvement. These are municipal bonds and the interest from them is free of federal in-

Recently, municipal bonds have been offered for sale by King County, the Port of Everett, the City of Seattle, Chelan County, the Port of Bellingham and many other familiar governmental bodies.

Investing in municipal bonds means loaning your money to these political organs who agree to return your money to you at a specified time, called the maturity date. In the meantime, the body that issues the bond promises to pay you regular interest at a specified rate. Normally the interest is paid semi-annually.

Generally, if your income is at least $25,000 or more you will find that the yield from the municipal bonds exceeds the after-tax return on other taxable investments.

You can buy individual municipal bonds from a broker, normally in amounts of $5,000 or more with varying maturity dates.

You can also buy into a municipal investment trust fund, a portfolio of quality municipal bonds that provides a monthly income. These are usually available in $1,000 units.

Probably the strongest appeal of municipal bonds lies in the relative safety of the investment. As a security, a municipal bond is considered second only to federal government

You should be aware, however, that the selling price of bonds is directly related to current interest rates. If you sell your bonds before maturity, they might bring more or less than what you paid for them. If interest rates have declined, you might obtain a profit. Conversely, a loss might occur in the sale is timed when interest rates have increased.

When buying bonds, consider using funds you don't need right away and buy bonds in the top four investment ratings. Such ratings are denoted by the two major investment services, Moody's and Standard and Poors.

For more information about municipal bonds and how their ownership can benefit you, write to John Weaver, c/o the Federal Way News, 1634 S. 312th St., Federal Way, Wa., 98003.

'Tis the season for holiday entertaining. And what a merry time of year it is! There are many directions party plans can take, but no matter if the festivities are large or small, formal or casual, good friends plus good food always add up to a good time for all.

When the occasion calls for a traditional dinner, make it an elegant affair with a regal Pork Crown Roast. Be it a special gathering of special people or a family feast, all heads will turn toward the magnificent roast as it comes to the table beautifully browned and brimming with a golden stuffing.

The crown is fashioned by the meat retailer by tying together two center pork loins, which have been Frenched by cutting away the meat to expose the tips of the rib bones. If desired, a halo of frills can be placed on the rib ends to accentuate the crown effect. Pork's fine flavor is deliciously complimented by Stuffing a la Waldorf. Inspired by famous Waldorf salad, it features apples chopped and combined with celery and pecans in a light, fluffy dressing. The bits of apple contribute a natural flavor boost while herb seasoned stuffing mix makes preparation easy.

Gaining popularity on the holiday party scene are informal get-togethers that revolve around the hors d'oeuvre table. While the guests enjoy the relaxed mood and tasty tidbits, the hostess appreciates the ease with which she can entertain a crowd. The key to keeping guests coming back for more is an assortment of attractively displayed appetizers contrasting in appearance, texture and flavor.

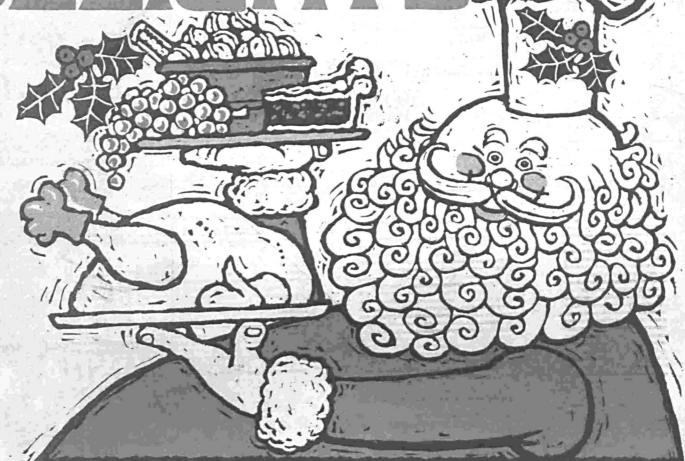

Wednesday, December 19, 1979

Impressive will be Mini Ham Quiches and Smoked Sausage Roll-ups, a duet coveniently made with light, crispy prepared frozen puff pastry. The tiny pies are flavorful with ground ham and Swiss cheese while the roll-ups feature smoked sausage links bundled in a golden pastry wrap.

For those midnight parties, Sauerbraten Apple Sausage Balls, made by combining ground pork sausage and chunks Of Golden Delicious apple and served shimmering in a sweet-sour glaze that's spiced with ginger, will make a big hit with the crowd.

Sure to spark conversation are Fancy Franks on Rye. Party rye bread makes a base for nippy cheese spread and miniature frankfurters cut to form fans.

Let guests help themsleves to still another attractive appetizer, Pork Apple Kabob skewered pork strips decorated in holiday colors. In pleasing contrast to the hot hors d'oeuvres, serve cool and creamy Three-Cheese Spread served in a large red apple and accompanied with thin, crisp crackers, Snack Sticks and apple wedges.

There are a number of ways to vary this dessert. Instead of crushed pineapple, you may prefer to substitute a 17-ounce can of fruit cocktail, pitted dark sweet cherries or diced apricot halves. Combine the fruit of your choice with your favorite flavor of instant pudding, blend in the prepared topping and Take Three takes on a whole new look.

Pudding Clouds Here again, three ingredients are all you need for a light, fluffy dessert that's an ideal choice for a heavy holiday meal. Combine 2 cups COLD milk, 1 package - the four- ed melon. > Holday Dessert Shells

Three is the magic number. One envelope of whipped topping mix is prepared according to package directions, adding one tablespoon sugar and 1/4 teaspoon almond extract just before whipping. Then, spoon in mounds onto wax paper covered baking sheet or tray. Make a depression in each mound with a spoon to form a nest or shell. Freeze until firm, at least 1 1/2 hours. Then fill with fruit, prepared pie filling or ice cream and serve. This recipe makes about 4 or 5 shells and the ways in which it may be varied are endless.

For example, canned cherry pie filling flavored with a dash of grated lemon rind, ground cloves or cinnamon makes a colorful yet light holiday dessert. If you favor fresh fruit, try a mixture of sliced bananas, seeded grapes and dicof fruit per shell is all you need for a refreshing light

Money snarl hits new mental health chief

by Carolyn Logan

When Jerry Perez stepped into the director's shoes at the Highline-West Seattle Mental Health Center, he didn't know he'd be hit by a stressful situation right off the bat.

The center is ensnarled in a funding tangle. Perez, recently named interim executive director, finds that the 1980 Legislature beefed up money for mental health - but that the funds passed through the county falls below expectations.

How much below isn't known precisely. And therein lies the seeds of stress. The end of the year is fast approaching and Perez and his department heads need to have a 1980 budget.

"There's been some confusion about how the money is to be spent. Interpreting Legislative intent is causing us all kinds of havoc," Perez explained.

He believes the intent is to beef up existing programs. Only the message he gets is that the money is to be spent for new pro-

Perez said he'd like to have some definite answers from the county. He objected to the county's cancellation of two meetings with himself and other staffers.

THE COUNTY, which acts as a pass-through for federal funding, may feel the backlash. Only the message he gets is that the money is to be spent for new programs.

Perez said he'd like to have ty's cancellation of two meetings with himself and other staffers.

THE COUNTY, which acts as a pass-through for federal funding, may feel the backlash.

"Do we need the county?" asked Eleanor Rhees, center director of administrative services. "If we eliminate one layer of administration, we may increase the money we get back to the grass roots.'

"Here's an analogy. When we connected directly with the federal government on drug abuse treatment, we received about $10,000 more. The thing you have to consider is (how much reaches) the clients."

"If they could clarify the intent," Perez added, "it sure would help us."

He expects almost $50,000 more from the state, above approximately $150,000 distributed by the county. Hopefully, that is, he said. This year, the center received about $150,000, plus some $41,000 for new programs. One of the difficulities the uncertainty imposes, he finds, is whether and how to fill two vacant counselor positions.

The center runs on a $1-million budget. One third, approximately, is directly from federal sources. Only 10 percent stems from user fees, charged on a sliding scale.

PEREZ takes over the helm of a large organization. Fifty-seven staffers, including a few parttime, handle about 700 clients per

He will serve until the board selects a permanent director. The last permanent director, Don Seidemann, recently resigned after four years of duty.

Seidemann, now Valley General Hospital program coordinator for psychiatric services, said he left for three reasons: Career enhancement, money and "burn-out."

"I was burned out by bureaucracy," he said. "Having to deal with two bureaucracies is strangling, is suffocating." The county points the finger at the state, and the state points the finger at the county, he found. He said he favors dealing only with the state. "But I'm not on a soapbox," Seidemann added.

Meanwhile, Perez runs the center. Hanging over the center's head is another potential crisis: The center is in the sixth year of an eight-year federal grant for the bulk of the operation.

Stressful? You bet, Perez said. A Burien resident, he coaches the Burien Bearcat Athletic Assoc. and the Burien Blazer Athletic Assoc. and officiates for the Pacific Northwest Wrestling Assoc. for relaxation.

And he feels confident he'll see the current problems through, based upon his experience as interim director for the Eastside Community Mental Health Center and his six years at the Highline center. His experience includes directing day treatment in the air, there's nothing like a steaming kettle of homemade soup to satisfy hungry appetites. The delicious aroma of a hearty slowsimmering soup and freshly baked bread is something we all associate with traditional family suppers on a nippy autumn evening. But today's working wife and mother can't afford to spend hours in the kitchen before announcing, "Soup's on."

Soup's on the quick, easy way

Now, thanks to the wide variety of frozen vegetables and bread doughs available today, these family favorites can be prepared in record time. Since frozen vegetables are ready for immediate use, there's no peeling, slicing, cleaning or dicing to be done by the busy homemaker. And there's no waste either. Frozen bread dough needs only to be thawed and shaped.

Serve this flavorful Harvest Chowder topped with grated Parmesan cheese, Cheddar cheese cubes or croutons. And sprinkle a little basil, caraway or sesame seeds on the crispy bread twists to add your own individual
