FIREFIGHTER TRAINEES Steven Hopf and Teresa Marshall take a short brak after a successful drill, which included loading a fire truck and spraying water from a hose about 100 feet in the air. Marshall, one of 10 recruits

now in training at Fire District 39's training station near Lakota Junior High, is on her way to becoming the first paid woman firefighter in Federal Way.

Recruit on course to history

By MELODIE STEIGER

As Teresa Marshall talked, her daughter, Amy, drew. A blue, smiling bubble was capped by curly brown hair and became her mother's face.

"The men have all been really good to me, cheering me on," Teresa Marshall said. "We run up and down flights of stairs in all that gear, 50 pounds of it, and they tell me, 'Run, run!' I ran by one guy who said, 'You're supposed to be enjoying this.' I just said, 'Right.' "

Amy Marshall, 9, picked up a yellow crayon and scribbled a yellow orb above the smiling blue bubble — a firefighter's helmet. She took a brown crayon and etched "228" on the helmet.

"I've been told that I'm doing this for all the women in the world, now," Teresa continued. "I said, 'What? I have a hard enough time doing this for myself, and you want me to do this for all the women in the world?' "

A fat brown hose snaked across Amy's drawing, through one of her mom's arms and out the other. Blue water began to squirt from the hose.

"I guess I had no real comprehension that a woman could be a firefighter," Teresa said. "My dad was a firefighter, and he said there was no way he'd sleep in a station with a woman there. And this is the guy who told me I could do anything, be anything I wanted." Amy added a house to her drawing, with spiky pink flames shooting from its windows. Her crayon mother towered over the little house, smiling and squirting

WITH SOME TIME and more training, Marshall could indeed be quenching fires in Federal Way as the first paid, full-time woman firefighter in the ranks of Fire District 39 (Federal Way).

Along the way, she's had more challenges than mere male brawn could overcome. The Brigadoon-area resident had nightmares about smoke and flame as a child, and woke her own mother in the middle of the night for reassurance.

Group hopes to help city get fast start

By KURT HERZOG

The group that launched the successful Federal Way incorporation campaign might have accomplished its original goal, but it's not through yet. Federal Way First! members met Saturday to begin organizing a private advisory group that will keep an eye on the yearlong transition from King County to local government.'

The 25 Federal Way First!

members who attended Saturday's meeting, from which the media was excluded, decided that the "transition team" should consist of 12-13 Federal Way residents who will repre-sent several different segments of the community.

It was also decided the group should not include anyone who intends to run for the new city council.

Federal Way's primary city council election will be May 16. Filing for the seven council positions will be April 3-7 at the King County Records and Elections Division.

THE PRIMARY will leave two candidates for each position. The final city council election will be held Sept. 19.

Jeanne Burbridge

The Federal Way First! transition team's goal is to discuss issues facing the new city and make proposals to the new city council once it takes office.

That will include discussing and presenting suggestions on such issues as the county's annexation policy, police service

Holiday Inn to open in time for Games

By KURT HERZOG

A local development group plans to build a new Holiday Inn hotel in Federal Way in time for the July 1990 Goodwill Games.

Westmark Investments, a company owned by Nizar and Sadru Sayani, who also own Qualico Homes in Federal Way, will build a 165-room Holiday Inn next to the Federal Way Center the Sayanis built on South 320th Street just west of Interstate 5.

The Sayanis could not be reached for comment, but Holiday Inn officials said they have sold a franchise to a group of investors who will build the Holiday Inn. Westmark is the Most of Holiday Inn's hotels are operated as franchises, Roozen said.

Golf course abandons appeal of property tax

By VALERIE DROGUS The Twin Lakes Golf and

Country Club has decided not to appeal the loss of a property-tax break the county took away last

The club, part of a planned community with more than 1,000 residential lots developed in 1966, gained tax-exempt status for its 18-hole golf course in 1976 when memberships were down.

At the time, assessments showed the golf course had no taxable value because it could not be developed in other ways and was operating in the red, although the clubhouse and surrounding grounds were taxed.

But a revaluation last year showed memberships up so much that a waiting list had formed. According to County Assessor Ruthe Ridder, that waiting list showed the golf course had gained economic value and should be taxed. Ridder set the total 1988 assessed value for the golf course, clubhouse and surrounding grounds at $2.1 million, with a property-tax bill of $24,000.

Last September the golf club filed an appeal of that assessment with the King County Board of Equalization. Ray Renz, president of the Twin Lakes Board of Trustees, said at the time taxing the golf course amounted to double taxation. He argued that Twin Lakes homeowners already are paying higher property taxes because they live next to a golf course.

Though Renz vowed to fight the tax increase last fall, the club recently decided to drop the appeal when the Board of Equalization turned down a request to postpone the hearing date until after its scheduled March 15 hearing.

The club needed more time to prepare than the three weeks from the day it received notice until the hearing date, said Twin Lakes lawyer Michael Jonson.

Jonson did not rule out further change, however.

Impeachment plan targets leader council

By KURT HERZOG

Some Federal Way Community Council members want to impeach their president.

They say they are unhappy with the loose way John Hale conducts meetings and with the lack of direction he has given the Dale Roper and Jim Cron are co-sponsors of an effort to impeach Hale. They need a third member to also help sponsor the effort, according to the council's by-laws, before impeachment proceedings can be brought to the full council for a vote.

Hale is aware of the private impeachment discussions among a few of the council's 34 members. In a written response to the impeachment discussions and in a private interview Monday, Hale said the impeachment threat is the result of his attempt to open up the council to more new members and new leader-

Hale said in the past, the "old guard" had taken charge of most council business and had locked out new members. His recent committee appointments replaced three sitting members with newly elected members.

Last Thursday's council meeting eruped in heated arguments from Roper and Jim Cron when Hale proposed appointing newly elected member

Ray Tomlinson to replace Cron as transportation committee

Tomlinson was not ratified by the council's general membership. Monday, Hale said he would reappoint Cron as transportation committee head at the council's April meeting.

However, that may not be enough to soothe some of the veteran members of the council, which has no legal authority but serves as an unofficial advisory group on local issues. Roper insists Hale isn't providing the direction the council needs and isn't keeping a tight enough rein on council discussions.

"Sometimes you just have to tell people to be quiet," Roper said. "He wants to be the nice guy to everybody."

Cron said the impeachment issue will be discussed at a council meeting at 7:30 p.m., March 30, at the Federal Way School District headquarters.

Roper conceded that the sitting council, consisting of several new members, may be a tougher crowd to control than past councils.

"I've been told I have to speak more," said Hale. "I've been told I talk too much.

"I believe everyone's opinion is important. Unless it gets crudely out of order I'd like to handle it politely."

county for a refund, or file an action in Superior Court.

The ruling by Ridder, which more than doubles the amount of property taxes the club had been paying, will not directly affect residents of the community.

However, those people who belong to the golf club, which costs an initial fee of $3,000, could see their annual dues increase to pay the higher tax.

The Twin Lakes taxexemption had been the last such private golf course tax break in the state.

County can protect community safety

I am excited about the success of a recent visit to Los Angeles that I took to learn more about the emerging street gang problem, and to review benefits associated with providing contractual police services.

I am pleased to have been assigned as the first Police Major to command the Federal Way precinct. I have a strong commitment to the community. I worked here as a detective, sergeant, and lieutenant for several years. I also owned a home in Twin

My objective is to elevate the status of the Federal Way precinct to the level of other precincts. This means I am trying to acquire additional officers, staff and equipment. In February, we received seven additional officers. These new assignments have allowed me to expand our Community Crime Prevention Program, and add a fulltime DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) officer for the school district.

At least two additional officers are expected to be added in March and April. I anticipate one additional detective, who will be assigned to auto theft investigation, by May 1.

I am committed to enlarging our current facility, which houses the precinct. The planning is underway to at least double the size and to provide suitable meeting place for community members.

I support the expansion of the car per officer program (CPO) as soon as possible. Our experience has shown that the program is more cost-effective than a pool car program. Officers who take cars home respond to calls quicker, increase their visibility in the community, and increase service life of vehicles while reducing maintenance cost. Virtually all of the officers assigned here live in Federal Way.

I am confident that the department will be able to offer the best police service possible at reduced cost. This is because of several economies that exist for a large police organization, but not for small ones. For instance, we can purchase 200 radios rather than 30; it is in the manufacturer's interest to lower prices to volume customers.

Since incorporation has been successful, I am certain that a mutually beneficial arrangement can be negotiated to provide the type of police service requested by elected and time given to me and other department members by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department and others. A tremendous amount of information was obtained from county agencies about contractual law enforcement.

Due to the extraordinary costs of staffing, training and supporting a modern police department, obtaining police service by contract is perhaps the only way cities under 150,000 population (in Southern California) can obtain the level of service they desire without having to underwrite all costs, including the high cost of a police civil service system and liability insurance.

I was educated by the Los Angeles agencies in the strategies employed to combat aggressive street gangs. While Federal Way is not plagued by gang activity, we know what we need to do to deal effectively with the problem. I am sensitive to the social and economic forces that feed the growth of home residents, an attack on gangs. I am also aware of the dirt-poor developers just trydevastating consequences of unchecked gang activity. We cannot afford to ignore organized criminal conspiracy. I am meeting with school officials as well as other public officials to develop pro-active approaches to the gang phenomena. I am cautiously optimistic.

Finally, I am setting aside specific periods when I will be available for phone calls or visits at the precinct. I will try to be at the precinct consistently on Tuesdays and Thursdays, between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. I hope residents will contact me to discuss issues of mutual concern.

For King County, cityhood is a food fight

In SeaTac and Federal Way, the victory parties were brief, but messy. We're still cleaning up around here.

Among the left-overs were some unanswered questions. One came from grumpy opponents in both communities. They wondered if this whole things was a conspiracy, a Yuppie plot against mobile ing to make an honest buck in the great American tradition: as fast as possible.

The answer is no. Most of the folks we've met in favor of cityhood would fit right in at a PTA parents' night, a yard sale or a meeting of the NUSP Club (Never Understood Sergeant Pep-

I have personally seen several of them at K-Mart. At the victory party, a few of the raised glasses held white wine, but they were outnumbered by bottles of Bud.

A downtown (Seattle) columnist wondered in one of her snippets whether a 90minute party was the best Federal Way could manage. That question is unkind. For 30 years, we've had nothing to celebrate but the birthdays of our own children. After 90 minutes of pizza and Kool-Aid, Jane Fonda would need a nap.

In private amazement, most cityhood leaders said the vote count was astounding. Years of defeat had left them poised for disappointment. When one of them made confident noises before the votes were tallied, the others would look at him like a guy who jinxed a pitcher working on a no-hitter.

Even now, some of them are rubbing their eyes. They're afraid they'll wake up in beautiful downtown Spanaway, with stoplights every 12 yards, with massage parlors the size of department stores and L.A. street gangs running the refresent stands at football games.

Another scenario is more likely: ten years down the road, they will look back fondly on 1989 as the Year of Innocence. In SeaTac, the Port of Seattle still squats on the shoulder of the new city like Jabba the Hut, waiting to ooze among us. The Port Commission will be partly replaced by 1999, but before that will probably offer to buy McMicken Heights to make room for a new parking garage.

In Federal Way the decade will be amusing, like watching a Latin American junta try to take over a McDonald's franchise. If that seems cynical, consider that we have watched Normandy Park— a city with far fewer problems - spend entire months trying to settle an argument about day care in the city. We have seen SeaTac and Des Moines waltz around the table during discussions about their common boundaries. More to come on that.

We know that King County looks forward to the next decade the way a school custodian looks forward to a food fight. Not only will the county lose millions in revenue to the new cities. It will also lose political weight.

For every partisan politician on the current council, this is gloomy weather. To say that some of them have. political ambitions is like saying Tammy Fae Bakker likes to wear a little makeup.

So county government will look different by the end of the decade. It ought to consist of a surface water management utility, six detectives and a riot squad that doubles as building inspectors.

For the seven cities that will control South King County, the question is simple. Can they work together in planning their common future, or will they wind up like Larry, Moe and Curly, smacking each other while the audience watches. helplessly, nobody laughing

Bus riders get home safely, sanely

In response to the letter from Ralph Stumbo ("When is a freeway not a free way?" -March 15), I beg to differ. He says that "another lane would solve the problem, but restricting its use to high occupancy vehicles is not the way."

Another lane for general use would not solve the problem at least not for long. Those who can remember when we had no traffic problem will find those days are gone in the central Puget Sound region. Just as Stumbo has noticed the increase in traffic, that traffic is projected to increase. Isn't it time to consider how better to utilize the transportation investments that we make? Congestion should cause us to think of ways to move people instead of vehicles.

Stumbo says ride-sharing does not work, but he should go to the area Park 'n Ride and count the cars. Every car parked there is one less car on the freeway. If Stumbo is not willing to rideshare, he should be grateful to those who do. Removal of their car from the freeway allows him more mobility. That is why 42 percent of the people are in seven percent of the vehicles on the approach to the Evergreen Point bridge. That is why 26 percent of the people are in five per cent of the vehicles in the I-5 HOV lane. Many riders find it more comfortable to sit and read, work, study or just relax than to drive in congested traffic. I'm one of them. I have an hour of relaxation and conversation at the end of my work-day. I trust the driving to a professional in a sturdy vehicle more than I trust my own reactions when I am tired and preoccupied.

The time advantage of the HOV lanes makes up for the time lost in switching vehicles. Shouldn't public transit systems be able to carry more people during rush hour by allowing them to move freely through congestion?

When they can be assured of uninterrupted movement, buses can make additional trips, thus being more productive. Each of those buses in the HOV lane takes up less space than four cars, while carrying 45-60 passengers. That is about 10 times the number of people who could ride in four cars!

Stumbo should note that there is a new truck climbing lane planned in the Federal Way vicinity as well as a new HOV lane. While that may not be considered "preferential treat-ment," it will alleviate some problems.

I agree, "freedom of choice and self-direction are embodied in the word America." What will be an individual's freedom to choose when every lane is congested? Doesn't self-direction imply we are able to see a problem and take action without being told? Building HOV lanes solves a current problem and prepares for the increasing congestion of the future.

Recruit's gender kindles questions

Teresa's mother showed her around their Spokane home those nights, trying to prove that fire had struck. Teresa seldom was convinced.

The fear continued until she became a volunteer firefighter in Federal Way in September 1987 and walked into a fire, purposely set by the department for new recruits to put out. On that first burn, she nervously sprayed water everywhere.

"But being a firefighter gave me control of that fear, and I guess that's what I wanted, besides the money and the security of the job," Marshall said. "I know now that fire is an unthinking enemy. It's still unpredictable, but I have a pretty good idea what it'll do."
FEDERAL WAY'S first paid

female recruit is 32, and a slender 5 feet 5 inches tall. She joins her husband, Bill, on motorcycle rides and tunes up her own engine. She does full pushups, not from the knees. She laughs a lot, and talks in anecdotes about training blisters and bunker gear and her role in the spotlight.

"They put these huge numbers on our helmets mine's 228 - so we all know who we are from behind," Marshall said. "I told the captain that I didn't like that much, that I'd like to be anonymous.

"He said, 'Believe me, even without the numbers, everyone knows who you are."

MARSHALL IS NOT officially full-time firefighter until her class of 10 new recruits graduates April 21. But already she's been cross-examined by everyone, even her daughter, about her motives for joining the physically demanding, maledominated firefighting field.

"Why should we hire a woman?" asked a panel of fire chiefs during the application

"Seventy percent of your calls are for medical aid. Perhaps as a female, victims could respond better to me," Marshall answered.

"Aren't you just doing this for the publicity?" challenged a department-hired psychologist. "I'd worry more about the day-to-day job than about the once-in-a-lifetime story in the newspaper," she answered.

"Do you have to go to the fire?" Amy asked. "If our house was on fire, wouldn't you want somebody to put it out?" she said.

"Why don't you go to the Tacoma Fire Department?" another firefighter asked. "There are more of your kind there."

Some questions Marshall hasn't found an answer for.

Those departments receive some applause for forwardthinking. They also receive criticism for perhaps lowering the quality of firefighters, though so far little data is available to support that argu-

Federal Way has no city hir-ing practices yet, and its fire department, a separate entity, receives no federal funds for operation, so it is not required to hire women or minorities. Two women have been accepted for training classes, the first step to becoming firefighters, but they later decided against joining.
With Marshall's move to full-time employment, only three women remain in the volunteer ranks. The department presently has few minorities, said Chief Bud Thorson.

"Others have applied, but the competition here is keen," he said. "More than 700 applied for the last jobs we had four years

Marshall was one of about 200 applicants who made it through the initial weeding-out process this time, and she survived written, physical, oral and psychological exams until she was one of 10 left. Thorson said she was one of the 10 because she deserved to be there, not because she is a get her accepted at the university. She didn't figure on finding her true niche in the Federal Way fire department, or on being in line for the $27,000-a-year job last October when 10 spots

ALTHOUGH HER fellow recruits are encouraging, she said it's apparent they didn't anticipate training alongside a woman. They ask if she could pull them out of danger, she said, and she answers that they better be nice, or she might not want to. A firefighter once picked up a heavy piece of equipment for her, rather than wait for her to heft it.

Marshall admits she can't do it all, the lifting and running, as fast as she'd like. She has a special workout program, required as part of her training. Thorson said her lack of upperbody strength is the only potential snag to her graduation.

"But when I'm in a fire, I feel I'll have adrenalin going for me. And after you've worked with people so long, and so closely, they're family. I couldn't leave them in a fire. It'd be like leav-ing Amy in there," Marshall MARSHALL AND HER fellow recruits will soon be scattered among the six staffed fire stations in Federal Way. Class ranking will figure into their assignments, and Marshall reckons she's somewhere in the middle of the class.

Until then, the class will continue to carry air tanks and bunker gear up and down a fivestory tower at the local training station, load and unload hoses, and crawl through dark buildings in search of supposed fire victims.

They shed their bunker jackets at the end of 10-hour training days that begin at 7 a.m., and their sweat rises, in the form of steam. The men were once embarrassed about that.

"But I say, 'Isn't it nice that we all smell bad together?" " Marshall said.

The transition team, which will have no legal authority, will likely include representatives from the chamber of commerce and the Federal Way Community Council.

The community council also has plans of its own to take part in the transition process. It will discuss issues affecting the new city at its monthly public meetings the first Thursday of each month, 7:30 p.m. at the Federal Way School District headquarters.

ALTHOUGH THE community council may seem like the logical body to discuss transition issues, the council represents more than just the area within the city boundaries, said Debbie Ertel, Federal Way First! member.

Much of the team's work will include dealings with the county about providing services to Federal Way.

"There are definitely some decisions that the new city council will be making rather quickly," Burbidge said.

The new city council will have about six months after the Sept. 19 final election to build a city from scratch. The new council will have until March 10, 1990, to pass a resolution officially incorporating Federal Way.

include: · Bringing the school's electrical systems, fire safety systems and handicapped access up to code.

· Adapting the building to modern educational programs. · Improving the school's appearance. · Making the school more energy efficient.

Ron Montgomery, Federal Way principal, told the school board a schedule for rotating classes throughout the school already has been developed to accommodate construction.

Federal Way High School can trace its roots back to 1929, when five rural elementary schools consolidated to form the Federal Way School District and built an elementary school on the present high school campus.

A junior high-senior high building was added in 1938 and its first class graduated in 1939. By 1953 the entire campus was devoted to high school students as separate elementary and junior high schools were con-

New cities squeeze Des Moines

By ROB SMITH

Rules of the game have changed, says Des Moines City Councilman Richard Kennedy.

Now, Des Moines city officials have to face the fact that the creation of two new South End governments could mean big changes for the Waterland City.

Des Moines has the city of Sea-Tac to the north. It has the city of Federal Way to the south. And only a little land in between.

A precious 20 blocks separates south Des Moines from north Federal Way. A hurler with a strong right arm could skip a stone across the top of Des Moines' City Hall from Sea-Tac's southern boundary just eight blocks away.

Kennedy, who has spearheaded the city's annexation efforts, claims incorporation of the two areas that border Des Moines couldn't help but influence public policy, especially on the city's Woodmont Annexation Study Group.

BUT IT'S still business as usual, says Bob Olander, assistant city manager. The city's Woodmont Study group is busy gathering information on the effects of annexation to Des Moines.

"None of the areas incorporated by Federal Way and Sea-Tac are in any of our annexation boundaries," Olander said. "For the most part, all the area is outside the boundaries. That was done by design, and we'll just proceed as usual."

Woodmont's boundaries, now the 20 odd blocks between South 252nd and South 272nd Streets, have been part of the Des Moines planning area for years.

Woodmont's fate probably will influence the future of nearby Redondo as well. If Woodmont eventually is annexed by Des Moines, Redondo, which was left out of Federal Way's incorporation, could follow.

"We still have the option of remaining with the county," said Gene Achziger, a Redondo resident on the Woodmont Committee. "We're exploring who will give us better service: the county or Des Moines."

Cindy Seng Kartes, a member of the Woodmont Annexation

Lightning

Lightning carved a huge scar in a fir tree and caused a fire that gutted a Saltwater Park-area home on Saturday afternoon, according to officials of Fire District 39 (Federal Way).

Based on evidence at the scene, investigators concluded that the lightning bolt struck the tree a little after 1:30 p.m. It then arced over to the house, about 8 feet away. The fire also tripped a circuit breaker in a power pole nearby. The resident of the small rental home at 25651 Marine View

Drive S. was visiting a neighbor's house, but heard the breaker pop and was immediately concerned about her pet, which was still in the house. She walked home, opened the door and found that the house was full of smoke. She then revisited the neighbor, who called the fire department, and by the time she returned her rental

Fire damage to the 30-year-old home was estimated at $35,000, according to Boyd Johnson, public education officer for the fire department. He did not know if the pet survived the fire. The woman was not identified.

The fire was fought with five engines, some from Federal

Way and some from Des Moines.

Through the battle, firefighters worked in sunshine, rain and officer for the fire department, said she had little advice to give that might help local residents avoid such an occurrence.

Study Group, called Woodmont "a pocket, a little bitty island" now that Federal Way incorporation has passed. She said the election will not change the scope of the committee's work.

"We're not pro-annex to Des Moines. We're going to hear speakers from King County,
Federal Way, Des Moines and Kent. We'll still explore all of our options," she said.

Kennedy and Achziger agree that what Woodmont decides to do will determine the fate of Redondo, a small, 500-person community just west of Woodmont.

KENNEDY SAID Kent may even try to woo Woodmont and Redondo because the area is flanked by Federal Way and Des Moines.

"Something anybody who annexes Redondo will have to look at is their seawall reconstruction," he said. "You're looking at $5 million to $7 million. If Woodmont goes to Federal Way, Redondo will obviously end up there. If it goes to Kent, well, maybe Kent will finally get its saltwater port, but that's utter speculation."

Kennedy said the fact that Federal Way incorporated could limit the committee's options. Because the county is considering slashing more than $10 million from its 1990 budget due to the incorporations, county services will obviously suffer, he said.

"Remaining unincorporated is just not viable," he said.

Woman cut during Saturday night fight

A woman trying to aid another woman who she said was being beaten up received a knife wound for her efforts.

A 20-year-old Federal Way woman told King County police she was at a party at about 10:30 p.m. Saturday in the Twin Lakes area when people there told her of a fight at St. Theresa's Catholic Church. She drove up there with her boyfriend and cousin to watch the fight, she

When they arrived, they found 15-20 predominantly high schoolage youths gathered around two different fights. One fight involved two males and the other was between a man and a woman. The woman who arrived to watch said the man was beating the woman up and no one would come to her aid - so she did.

She said she told the man to stop and when she persisted and got closer, he grabbed her by the wrist and slashed her arm with a knife. She said she left the scene immediately, leaving her boyfriend and cousin behind, and went to St. Francis Community Hospital where she was treated for a 1-inch laceration.

Police say they suspect the fighters were local because the church's rural location would make it hard to find for outsiders. Those involved came forward with very little information, they added.

The cutting suspect is described as black, 18-20 years old, standing 5 feet 9 inches tall with a medium build. He has a flattop haircut shaved above the

Man robbed after cashing paycheck

A Belfair man told police he came to in his car near Issaquah Saturday morning after being hit on the head and robbed near a Federal Way bank Friday morning.

The 25-year-old man told King County police he had just cashed his paycheck shortly after 9 a.m. at the drive-up window of U.S. Bank at Pacific Highway South and South 312th Street when he was approached by two men in another car. The man said as he was putting his money into his wallet one of the two men approached his car and hollered at him.

As he rolled down the window to see what the man from the car wanted, that man pushed the Belfair man against the steering wheel of his car and hit him on the head with a hard object, the victim told police.

The Belfair man said he came to in the driver's seat of his car at about 7 a.m. Saturday somewhere near Issaquah on a dirt road off Highway 18. He said his wallet and money from his paycheck was missing.

He described the man who hit him as white, 35 years old and standing 5 feet 8 inches tall with a medium build and light blond hair. The driver of the car was a white male with a large build and dark hair. The men were driving an older green International wagon.

times to leave.

Hopkins originally pleaded innocent and asked for a jury trial, but instead stipulated to the facts Feb. 27. That means he believed the facts of the case were sufficient to have proven him guilty, but he retains the right to appeal his sentence.

Judge Woody Leverette handed Hopkins a deferred sentence, ordering him to stay out of trouble with no citations or violations of the law for the next six months. If he does, the charge will be dismissed.

Kregness pleaded guilty

earlier this year to the same charge and received a one-year deferred sentence with the conditions that he remain on active probation, commit no violations of the law, complete an anger management course, enter an alcohol and drug treatment program and attend Alcoholics Anonymous, Narcotics Anonymous or Adult Children of Alcoholics meetings twice a week for the next year.

Hopkins and Kregness were charged as a result of an altera cruiser, Donald Spaccarotella Jr. Records state Badics had tried to pull Spaccarotella over for driving without his headlights, and a scuffle ensued when the 18-year-old would not give Badics his driver's license, and then resisted arrest.

Spaccarotella has pleaded innocent and asked for a jury trial, which has tentatively been set for April 17. He claims he was needlessly pulled over and that his arrest was unwarranted. He and his family say they will sue is exonerated in court.

Music festival showcases electronic advances

Living

By WENDY CULVERWELL

Jack Halon is out to shatter the image of the big electronic clunker in grandma's sitting room - the organ.

That instrument looked like a piano but wasn't one exactly, though it resembled the aristocratic instrument enough to be a first cousin. Unlike the piano, however, grandma's electronic sitting room gizmo could hold a note longer than even the largest-lunged opera star.

Just plunk a finger down on a key and out came the electronic whine - strong, even, undying.

Just move a finger to the left or right and the pitch went up or down. Pull one of the levers marked "flute" or "trumpet" or "clarinet" and the thing belched out a sound only approximately like that of the instrument.

That was an organ.

But not anymore it isn't, says Halon, who organizes the local branch of a worldwide festival for electronic keyboard musi-

TODAY'S ORGANS go by the name "electronic keyboard" and just as they shed their old name, they shed the image of grandma's sitting room beast.

The modern electronic keyboard can deliver nearly the exact sound of just about any musical instrument - from flute to violin to string bass to, yes, even the organ itself.

Yamaha's Electone Keyboard barely resembles its now-distant relative, the piano. It looks more suited to the bridge of the starship Enterprise than to grandma's house.

In capable hands, the keyboard can electronically reproduce an entire orchestra or a solo percussionist with a sound far better than the old electronic cialism. But, he said, the attention should really be focused on the performers themselves, not the vehicle of competition.

"These kids have to be recognized for what they doit's so much hard work," he said.

The competitors began practicing for the festival last fall. Those who don't have an Electone were able to use the instrument at Tom Hobbs' stores such as the one in SeaTac Mall.

Of the 20 entrants, eight moved on to quarterfinals. Actually, unless the winners make it to national finals, they won't have to personally perform again in the festival. The Electone works much like a jazzed-up player piano. It makes a digitalized recording of the performance, which can then be reproduced on another Electone.

THE DISC recordings go on for further judging.

The 12 national finalists perform live, as do the international finalists. At that level, Yamaha picks up all of the performers' expenses.

Halon's two sons, David and Chris, each went to finals twice, and Chris has had two students there as well, so Federal Way has not gone unrepresented in the national finals.

Chris, whose interest in music was piqued when his grand-mother gave him a play piano when he was 2, said he likes the range of the newer electronic keyboards. Ironically, he does not include the organ in his repertoire of sounds.

"I'm not much for the organ sound," he admitted.

The local winners who qualified for national quarterfinals were, by category: Youth I - Dori Priest, Joel Sison and Erica Sotak; Youth II - Traci Fair, Don Hyun and David Moxon; and Senior — Bernice Lettenmaier and Marie Smith.

Investment in slug control brings green dividends

The bulbs are up, the weeds are up and so now it's time for you to get up and out into the garden.

If there's only one gardening chore you accomplish all week, let it be slug patrol. The cold cruel weather killed a lot of bugs, but it left plenty of slugs and the hearty survivors are famished and ready to feast on the first green things that sprout in your yard.

Commercial slug baits are very effective, but if you would rather go on slug patrol with a sharp stick and a bucket of salt water you can shish-kabob your way to a lowered slug census in a single afternoon.

It's still not too late to add bare root roses to your flower bed and many a homeowner found frozen rose plants that need replacing before June. You'd better hurry up if adding fruit trees and berry bushes were in your plans this year. The dormant season has ended and trees and shrubs will be risky to transplant as the season wears on and new growth proceeds at full power.

Q. I want to add some fruit trees to my back yard. What type do well besides apples? Do you recommend apricots?

R.M., Woodinville A. Apricots are the pits to grow here because a late frost can ruin blossoms and a winter that is too mild can interfere with fruit formation. The most common complaint aside from lack of fruit is brown rot and canker diseases, both encouraged by rainy weather.

I know that somebody reading this right now is probably feasting on an apricot preserves made from all the excess fruit that forms faithfully each year, but for most Western Washington gardeners, apricot trees are nothing but trouble.

What you should be filling your home orchard with are cherry trees, plum trees and pear trees. Grow the dwarf or semi-dwarf size to save on room. There is one peach tree that resists peach leaf curl like no other. It's named the Frost

Q. If I cut my tulips to use indoors but leave the foliage alone, will I get a second set of blooms? When will the new flowers appear?

W.R., Sumner

A. Slow down just a minute so I can board your train of thought.

If you cut the stem and flower from a tulip, the leaves will die back and possibly feed enough energy to the underground bulb so that next spring the tulip will sprout and bloom again.

You will not be blessed with a second set of tulip buds this year. Just to keep you guessing, Mother Nature gives an encore performance for other flowers such as pansies, foxgloves and

If you shear back these flowering plants or pluck off all the dead blossoms, more flowers will indeed appear to thank you. Flowering bulbs like daffodils, crocus and hyacinths are much too stingy with their fancy flowers to bother with more than one bloom a year - no matter what you do to them.

Q. Should I dig up my blackened rose bushes and throw them away? Some of the varieties I grow are not as hardy as others and I fear the winter freeze has done them in. How long should I wait to make sure they are

R.B., Vancouver

A. Wait a little longer. When the weather outside turns warm enough to go barefoot (over 70 degrees F.) your roses will have to either prove themselves and sprout forth new life, or accept the cold realities of death.

Check carefully if a latestarting rose bush sends out funny-looking branches with smooth and shiny bark. These could be suckers that have sprouted from the root stock of your rose plant.

Root out and replace any rose plants that still look lifeless in May. It will be too late to replace them with bare root roses sold in February, but you can still buy potted rose plants from nurseries and garden centers all summer. One advantage of buying potted roses is that you can see the plant in bloom before you

Mount Rainier coach Dave Peterson says. It should be every bit as good as its billing.

Jefferson (1-0-1) played the 1988 contest minus five starters who were suspended for brawling in an earlier game.

"A lot of our opponents thought that if we played them at full strength, we could have given them a better game," Judson says. "I expect to see my kids play with a lot of emotion."

Gutsy goalkeeping and a strong second half lifted the Federal Way boys' soccer team into a 2-2 deadlock with the Kennedy Lancers in preseason high school soccer action at Federal Way Memorial Stadium Friday night.

With 5:32 remaining in regulation time, Ricci Greenwood centered a pass to Ricky Phillips, who scored on a beautiful header for Federal Way. Neither team could score again before time ran out.

"We came out slowly and made some mistakes," said Federal Way head coach Mike Minahan. "We handled the seBoys' Soccer

"I'm pleased with the effort because we didn't give up. That was a great goal by Phillips. We'll get better and better." "The game went pretty much as expected," was Lancer head coach Doug Stamnes' view. "Two tired teams played tonight. It was a good game."

Federal Way's nonleague record stands at 1-1-1. Kennedy

Kennedy fired right back 47 seconds later on Thomas Due's goal off an Anthony Durante corner kick.

For the remainder of the half, the Lancers stormed the Federal Way side of the field. Due put Kennedy in front 2-1 at the 20:31 mark. Kennedy controlled the tempo, while the Eagles had no consistent offense.

Staving off numerous threats, Federal Way trailed only 2-1 at the break.

When the second half opened, the Eagles took the initiative and never let it go.

Other than an occasional long

Highline club gets regional interest

By ADAM WORCESTER

Highline High School's upstairs gym is crowded this Thursday evening.

A series of nets has sectioned the floor space into eight badminton courts. Each one is filled to its four-person capacity.

There are old men with pot bellies. Children decked out in new warm-ups. Middle-aged women wearing headbands and knee pads. Young studs losing the post-high school battle of the bulge.

By day, they work as doctors, laborers, students and homemakers. But Tuesday and Thursday evenings, they gather to share a common passion: the Highline Badminton Club.

For 30 years, they have been coming to play. Some, such as Nick Johnson, drive from Woodinville. Others, such as Dick Dowle, commute from Bellevue. Many simply walk from their Burien homes.

WE'RE THE BIGGEST club north of San Francisco and west of Chicago," says president

It's also one of the best-kept secrets in the Highline area.

The club has endured through seven different locations and three generations of players since Austin Miller founded it in the recreation room of Lake Burien Presbyterian Church.

Miller invited Pierce to play one day and beat him soundly.

"I got mad," Pierce recalls, "and said, 'I'm going to learn this dumb game.'

Due to low ceilings, the club soon moved to Sylvester Middle School, then Tyee High School. It bounced around the district a few more times before settling into Highline High, where it has remained the past 15 years.

CONSISTENCY AND service have kept the club alive, says Pierce.

"We are able to offer a consistent program. That has been a problem in a lot of other areas," Pierce says. "People have to know that every Tuesday and Thursday, this will be open."

Al Allott used to play at Bellevue's Interlake High School. "One day they just told us, 'Tuesday's your last night.'

After 15 years," he says.
So Allott, president of the Washington State Badminton Association, packed up his birdies and headed south. Countless others followed his lead.

Burien's John Arnett has been a member since moving here from Albuquerque, N.M., two years ago.

"I've played a lot of other racket sports, and this is the best," he says. "Badminton is one of the most aerobic sports I know of, bar none."

THE CLUB has produced some national-caliber talent. Geoff Stensland, a 1977 Glacier High School graduate, is a former top 10 singles and doubles player. Lindsey Gulin, 11, is current junior nationals doubles champion and runnerup in singles. At the recent Washington Winter Centennial Games, Highline competitors won 13 of 26 badminton medals.

But Pierce caters to players of all ability levels.

'We have people here who don't know a birdie from a horsie," he says. "We take care of new people. We don't let them stand there and think, 'Where do I get a game here..' "

For $10 a semester (school year), Pierce's club provides gym space and nets and has goose-feather shuttlecocks available for sale. Players may fork over the whole fee up front or dish out $2 per night until BADMINTON is a rapidly growing sport, Pierce says. It has class A (full-sport) status for the 1992 Olympic Games after being a demonstration sport last summer in Korea.

"On Tuesdays 10 years ago, there might have been 10 or 12 players who showed up," Pierce says. "A week ago last Tuesday, there were 53 people here."

For more information about the Highline Badminton Club, call Pierce at 242-3885.

Skyhawks top Destroyers for American Cup crown

By GERARDO BOLONG

Persistent pounding at the goalmouth enabled the Totem Skyhawks to pull away from a tight contest and register a 4-1 victory over the Federal Way Destroyers Saturday, earning the U-11 American Cup boys' state soccer championship for non-premier teams.

The win at Renton Stadium was the third consecutive state championship for the Skyhawks. In addition, the Skyhawks continued their winning ways against their District Three Gold rivals, the Destroyers. The Skyhawks won the division with an 11-1-2 record, while the Destroyers finished third at 9-5.

Three previous encounters produced tough wins for the Skyhawks. Both teams battled to the finals unbeaten in tournament action, which extended several weeks due to inclement weather and unplayable field conditions. The Skyhawks were also unscored upon in tournament games.

"To win at state takes a lot of things," said Skyhawks' head coach Gordy Shaflik. "It takes player dedication, parent commitment and lots of luck.

"Winning the state title gets better each time. Our plan on offense was to keep pushing the ball upfield and have our players in front of the goal for followups. In the second half, we played our defense more loosely Boys' Soccer to cut down breakaways." "THEY JUST outplayed us," stated Destroyer coach Buck Kittelson. "They handled the ball well and deserve to be state champions. "Spreading the field resulted in breakaways, and they strongly pushed the ball upfield."

After opening aggressiveness by the Destroyers, the Skyhawks began to set up their offense.

Lewis Dawson led a breakaway that was capped by Wes Rock's short goal with 4:36 elapsed in the half.

See-saw action by both teams continued until the Destroyers' Tony Rolewicz fed Matthew Finney for the score and a 1-1 deadlock with 21:31 remaining in the first half. The Destroyers mounted an offensive, but the Skyhawks' Scott McNeil broke loose from the left side and barely slithered a goal into the front edge of the net at the 2:36 mark. Totem clung to the 2-1 lead at intermis-

Second half action began with an early short on goal by the Destroyers. Federal Way's Skyhawks gained momentum and poured enormous pressure into the Destroyers' end of the field. The Destroyers' offensive opportunities in the second half were sparse.

Rock, Dawson and McNeil were everywhere, as the Skyhawks' offensive assault was maintained.

At 8:17 remaining in the game, McNeil notched a goal while torrential rain began. McNeil achieved the hat-trick with one more goal to make the final score Skyhawks 4, Destroyers 1.

"It feels real good," exclaimed Rock, the game's MVP. "The team worked hard. Gordy put us through everything and helped

Other members of the Skyhawks are Charles Brezina, Joey Davis, Mike Koo, Josh Mc-Carty, Brian Millspaugh, Soren Nielsen, Peter Pardo, Josh Parker, Nicholaus Castro, Randall Smith, Matt Wallace and Jason Zachow.

Destroyer players besides those already mentioned are Brian Cox, Travis Crane, Justin Davis, Ryan Kittelson, Abram McClure, Phillip Meason, Colin Mills, Tony Miller, Dennis Price, Ricky Rangel, Randy Rolewicz and Billy Webb.

Decatur's Krilich to play football for CWU Wildcats

By CHUCK MINGORI

Jason Krilich weighed the pros and cons and finally selected Central Washington University as his choice to play college football next year.

Krilich, a 6-foot-4, 240-pound senior offensive lineman at Decatur High School, recently made up his mind that he wanted to be a Wildcat.

"I like the campus at Central," he said. "While I was there I liked the coaches and the team.

Krilich, who said he "considered all sorts of letters" from schools, had narrowed his decision down to UPS, Whitworth and Central before making up his mind.

Krilich will not receive a scholarship to play, but he can apply for finanical aid and receive a talent award, which is a grant that will help pay for books and tuition.

"We can definitely give you help if you qualify for financial aid," is what Krilich was told by coaches, explaining that schools such as Central cannot offer fullride scholarships like a Pac-10 school. "It's not terribly expensive, it's not like UPS or anything."

Coaches at Central were interested in having Krilich become part of their program. he said, and the two-time All-News lineman said he is anxious to test his skills there.

Anglers hit Green to benefit hatchery

When is fishing not really fishing? When it is the hard work done by members of local steelhead clubs to capture wild brood stock. Since 1982 this program has sought to catch wild steelhead by hook and line and then spawn them in a hatchery to encourage late-run native fish.

Members of the Green River Steelhead Trout Club and the South King County Chapter of Northwest Steelheaders met at the Soos Creek parking lot at 6:30 a.m. Saturday. The Green River club fished the upper river from Whitney Bridge downstream by boat. Northwest steelheaders fished the upper river from the bank beginning at the Auburn Golf Course and moving upstream.

Both teams met about 1 p.m. back at the Soos Creek parking lot. A total of five females and three males were captured. These iisn were trucked by special tanker to the Muckleshoot tribal hatchery where they will be held until they can be spawned. The goal is 20 females and enough males to produce 50-60,000 fry to be planted above the Howard Hansen Dam on the Green River.

According to Susan Guerrero of the Green River Club, it's too early to tell how successful the program has been in restoring the run. Each year the program has hurdled obstacles and this past fall the raceways where the fish are held were sandblasted and epoxied. In the past the fish have been easily spooked in containment and injuries have resulted. This year, improved facilities and a method to keep them sedated and relaxed will spare the fish injury.

Participating anglers are schooled to use stout tackle and wrestle the fish in quickly to preserve their strength. Boat anglers keep the fish in an interesting capture tube that is suspended from the boat and keeps the steelhead quiet until it can be transferred to the tank truck.

The state Department of Wildlife has been working with the city of Tacoma to resolve a problem of getting mature fish past the dam and up into the upper reaches of the river. Until a permanent program can be established to accomplish access to the upper river, this wild fish capture program will be con-

As one steelheader quipped, "It's a tough job, but hey, someone has to do it."

NOT RECEIVING a scholarship is not a big concern to Krilich, but playing football beyond high school is.

"I don't want to worry about the scholarship," he said. "I just want to go out and play football.'

Krilich was already familiar with the Ellensburg school. He attended a basketball camp at Central as a youngster and he has friends who attend college there. Krilich said the location of the school also had something to do with his final decision.

"I can always come across the mountains and come home," he

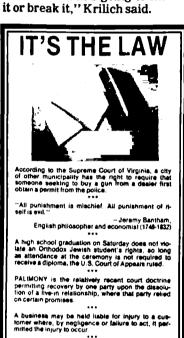

Central has an excellent football program, as the Wildcats took first place in their league last fall.

As it stands now, Krilich plans to redshirt his first year at Central, although he added he may try to be on special teams his first year and redshirt later.

The Decatur senior said he is considering a major in business, although that may change later

He plans to be ready for football, though, as he knows he must work out on weights and run during the summer.

"Midfield is the area you want to control. The matchups there will be very important in determining which way the the game will go," he explains.

That's fine with Peterson.

Raiders still think they're the better team. "They want to come in here and show everyone that AAA is better than AA," he says.

But he declares last week's 3-2 Ram victory over Cascade, Jefferson's opponent in the 1988 championship game, "showed we can play with any team in the state, double-A or triple-A."

Thus far, Mount Rainier has defeated AAA teams Evergreen and Federal Way, each 1-0, in addition to the Cascade triumph. Jefferson has defeated Interlake, 4-1, and tied North Thurston, 1-1.

An interesting side note to the matchup is the fact that most Ram and Raider players know each other from club youthsoccer squads. They have competed with and against each other for a number of years.

The Totem Skyhawks emerged victorious over the Federal Way Destroyers, 4-1, in the U-11 boys' American Cup game for non-premier teams (see story).

A string of four championship tournaments at Renton Stadium began the weekend of Feb. 25-26 with the girls' American Cup.

The Federal Way Star Burst was the only local entry in that tournament, defeating the University Place Stompers, 1-0, for the U-12 title.

Both the girls' and boys' Championship Cup finals for premier teams were played the weekend of March 10-11.

For the girls, the Star Shooters defeated the F.E. Lions of Vancouver, 2-1, for the U-12 crown, and the Federal Way Storm downed Footloose F.C. of Lake Washington, 7-0, at U-14.

The Federal Way Silver Bullets were 2-1 winners over the Renton Cobras in boys' U-12 action, and the Federal Way Flyers took the U-13 crown by an identical score over the Blast of Vancouver.

Federal Way Nitro defeated the Highline News, which also boasts a number of players from the Federal Way area, 3-2, in a shootout for the U-19 title.

The Star Shooters, Silver Bullets, Storm and Nitro are all going on to regional action in Pleasanton, Calif. June 17-

Salty's race will benefit Eye Bank

Kathryn Kingen has a special affection for the Lions Eye Bank: it provided corneas for two transplants she has undergone to save her eyesight. She feels indebted to its service and looks for ways to assist its Hence, Salty's "Sea to See" 10 kilometer race which will rebenefit the bank has come nabout, starting at 9 p.m. April 1.

The 10K run was conceived by tri-athlete J.J. Schill, a bartender at Salty's on Alki. He was looking for sponsors and Kingen, one of the owners of Salty's on Alki, brought Schill and the Lions Eye Bank together for what they hope will become an annual event to benefit the bank.

The flat, fast course will give all entrants a chance at personal records against the scenic backdrop of the Seattle skyline, Elliott Bay, Mount Rainier and the Olympics. The race begins and finishes at Salty's on Alki in West Seattle.

Lions Eye Bank is funded entirely by individual contributions and Lions Club fundraisers. Since its inception in 1969, the bank has supplied over 7,000 corneas for transplants throughout Washington, Northern Idaho and Alaska as well as other parts of the country and the world.

JFK nine eyeing high NPSL finish

In spite of weather problems, Kennedy baseball coach Joe Faccone already has a good idea where his Lancer team is at: the top of the North Puget Sound

The Lancers might not be favored to repeat their finish, but "They'll probably pick us in the top four," Faccone says, along with Kentridge, Kentwood and possibly Hazen.

Senior southpaw Kelly Jacobson leads the pitching staff, with help from first basemen Sean Englin and Eric Jacobs. SECOND baseman Jason Picinich and shortstop Pat O'Connor fill the remaining infield positions, and Sterling Johnson rounds out the outfield in left.

Derek Behenke, Jason Hart, Brad Jutte and Tim Campbell provide backup infield and catching help, Jim Picinich relieves in the outfield and Dan Trautmann fills a utility role.

While the 1988 Lancers tore through the NPSL with a .423 team batting average, the 1989 team will be built more around pitching and defense, Faccone savs.

Rain washed away Kennedy's annual preseason tournament in Yakima last weekend, leaving the Lancer mentor in the dark about his squad's hitting pro-

Law gets tough on repeat crime

Almost as fast as police can arrest prostitutes and drug dealers, they filter back out onto the streets to continue working.

Often they are under probation, with a judge's orders to stay out of the area where they were picked up. Even if the arresting officer sees them back out, the officer must return to court for a warrant to arrest them for probation violation.

By the time the officer gets back, the prostitute or drug dealer is gone.

The King County Council pass-ed an ordinance Monday to break the cycle of continued crime on probation. Aimed principally at keeping prostitutes off the Sea-Tac "strip," the ordinance allows police to arrest anyone they observe violating

'Carousel' bits staged Saturday

Local residents can get a sneak preview of "Carousel," the spring production of Puget Sound Musical Theatre company, this Saturday at SeaTac Mall in Federal Way.

Performers from the 70member cast will present some upbeat tunes from "Carousel," including "June is Bustin' Out All Over" and "You'll Never Walk Alone." The performance will begin at noon in the mall's Bon foyer and will continue until 2 p.m.

Puget Sound Musical Theatre will present "Carousel" in its entirety March 31 to April 2, April 7-9 and April 14-16 at the Decatur High School Performing Arts Center, 2800 S.W. 320th

The sneak preview at the mall is free. Tickets to the show are now being sold at The Place for Gifts and Things, 32901 First Ave. S. in Federal Way. For information, call 838-3237.

new ordinance will allow the police to arrest a probationer without a warrant.

The ordinance is based on a Seattle law created in 1969, said Lois North, a King County councilmember and chair of the law, safety and justice committee.

IT HAS BEEN tested and upheld in the courts, she added.

King County Executive Tim Hill asked the council to consider such an ordinance - dubbed S.O.A.P., for Stay Out of Areas of Prostitution - in January. Last year, 252 arrests were made along the strip.

While the original proposal was intended to control prostitution, the ordinance could also be used to break up recurring gang activity or drug dealing, said Hill spokesman Joe Quintana.

It might also be used to nab drunk drivers who return to bars, said King County Councilmember Paul Barden.

It'll be another useful tool for police, said Lt. Thomas Regan of Precinct 4.

The law attempts to control crime by removing the people who commit it from the scene. But Councilmember Audrey Gruger said cracking down on the Sea-Tac strip will just send more prostitutes and drug dealers into North Seattle along Aurora Avenue.

"Whenever crime decreases (on the Sea-Tac strip) it increases in the north end," she said, but joined the unanimous vote to pass the bill.

Panel forms for open-space bond

King County Council took a first step Monday in preparing to ask voters to finance a major purchase of parks, trails and green belts next fall.

The council appointed a 17member open space bond committee to choose likely parcels amounting to between $75 and $115 million for an open space bond issue in the next general election.

The countywide committee will identify parcels to buy in unincorporated areas and review suggestions for parcels made by committees representing the City of Seattle and the suburban cities.

Areas awaiting incorporation, such as Federal Way and Sea-Tac, will be represented by the countywide committee.

An $89.5 million open space bond issue submitted to voters last November failed, possibly because it requested money for the Seattle Aquarium along with funds to buy parks, trails and greenbelts.

In addition, the campaign got off to a rocky start because' some South King County activists were angered over the lack of land purchases designated in South King County. Although parcels for purchase in Federal Way were later added, early dissatisfaction with the bond may have taken its toll.

One of the committee's jobs this time will be to assess whether all major regions within the county are reasonably represented among the proposed projects.

The committee will send its findings to the King County Council by mid-June.

Richard Burris, a Federal Way First! leader, will represent Federal Way on the com-

No EIS required for 95 townhouses

King County officials have determined that the construction of a 95-unit townhouse development at 2100 S. 336th St. does not require preparation of an environmental impact statement (EIS).

The Forest Lane development is being proposed by Polygon Apartment Partners of Kirkland. The project will include townhouses, parking, landscaping and recreational facilities.

To mitigate development, the developers are being required to pay about $3,500 for improvements to the intersection of State Route 18 and 16th Avenue South. They must also pay $6,600 for part of the cost of a new traffic signal at Pacific

Community cleanup on tap for April 22

The Federal Way Community Council discussed dates for two important projects Thursday.

The council decided to hold a town meeting on gangs at 7:30 p.m., June 5, at Thomas Jefferson High School.

Activists are also organizing a spring cleanup day scheduled for April 22.

Spring Clean '89 will kick off at 9 a.m., Saturday, April 22, at the Federal Way Water and Sewer District headquarters at 31627 First Ave. S.

Project organizer Mary Ehlis, who also organized the effort last year, is asking people to think of a particular area they would like to help clean up.

They can then fill out a form specifying the area and present it to the Federal Way Community Council, which is sponsoring

"If there's an area that's a real headache, let us know," Ehlis told the community council Thursday. "Now's the time to clean it up." Organizers will help by providing plastic trash bags and crews.

The cleanup is part of a countywide effort that will take place during the week of April 15-23. Last year, 425 tons of trash of litter was removed from public parks, roadsides, streams, playgrounds and hiking trails by more than 35,000 volunteers.

For more information on the project, call Mary Ehlis at 874-

King County prosecutors say a Federal Way couple arrested last week for running a marijuana grow operation at 34409 28th Ave. S.W. are just one link in a long chain of operators.

Ten defendants from all parts of King County were charged Monday on six counts of violating drug control laws after search warrants served on seven residences uncovered marijuana valued at $1.9 million.

Mercer Island residents Steven Carl Berg and Mavis Mallon headed the marijuana production ring, according to Senior Deputy Prosecutor Ric Martinez.

Gregory and Kerry Noll, growers for Berg, were arrested at their Federal Way operation March 15, charges state. The police seized 84 marijuana plants and five guns from their Berg and Noll have not yet been charged, however.

A police informant who previously worked for Berg and was arrested last year for running a grow operation helped uncover the ring, charges state.
