DIANNE BELL admires daffodils from her greenhouse. The other 10,000 flowers planted outside won't bloom until early April because of the snow earlier this year. Bell planted the many flowers on her suburban flower farm.

10,000 daffodils honor mom

By WENDY CULVERWELL

Dianne Bell wishes someone had reminded her 10,000 daffodils to bloom in time for Easter.

Last year's crop of 1,000 flowers bloomed all March, but because of the heavy snowfalls this year, the daffodils will miss the Easter Bunny by about a week.

Bell expects thousands of cheerful yellow blooms to sprout at her Federal Way nursery in early April, and yet she couldn't be more pleased. "I love daffodils," she said with the conviction usually reserved for teen-age groupies talking about favorite rock stars.

Bell, a resident of Milton, operates The Rhododendron Garden in Federal Way, just south of the new Costco store and the Federal Way Unity Church of Christianity. She shies away from calling the suburban farm a commercial venture, preferring instead to think of it as a hobby run amok.

BELL'S OASIS, just a few minutes drive from the most congested streets of Federal Way, is devoted to her main passion — rhododendrons and azaleas. She sells the plants and potted flowers to whomever wanders in through the black wrought iron gates on 16th Avenue South.

The daffodils came into the picture last fall when she decided to do some formal planting on the quarter-acre hillside in front of the greenhouse that serves as her store. Her first impulse, to plant a display rhododendron and azalea garden, was quickly quashed.

With so much work to be done on the several acres of gardens, Bell worried that a formal display garden might not always look perfect, and disheveled displays could discourage would-be buyers.

So she decided to cover the hill with daffodils in honor of her mother — Elizabeth Lee Wotton — who in 1934 reigned as the first queen of the Daffodil Festival.

She originally estimated it would take 100,000 flowers to cover the hillside.

"I have no concept of numbers," she laughed.

Strife grows

Some council members mention impeachment

By KURT HERZOG

A controversial request to remove Federal Way Community Council President John Hale from office will be discussed at the council's May 4 meeting.

In a written request officially presented to the council's executive board Thursday, eight members said Hale should be removed because of Hale's "lack of leadership shown in meetings, the lack of initiative shown...in acting for the good of the council and in organizing and conducting meetings to avoid confrontation."

The written statement goes on to say, "We are two-and-a-half months into this year and the council is no more organized and prepared to work as a unit than when we started."

"We all had great expectations for this council year and with the Centennial celebrations, new cityhood and problems with rapid growth, there are many opportunities for positive community council actions. We must have a president who can unify the council and lead it for the benefit of the community."

Earlier, Jim Cron, author of the statement, said Hale should be impeached. Cron said Thursday that the word "impeached" has connotations of misconduct. Hale is not being charged with any misconduct, Cron stressed. Instead he should be "removed from office," Cron said, because of incompetence.

HALE SAID the attempt to remove him from office is driven by members "posturing for city council elections." The plan for removal is an attempt to grab power, he said.

"Reasonable people would have decided the charges don't warrant disciplinary action,"

Final election vote count seals cityhood's passage

The final tally in this month's Federal Way incorporation vote is in and nothing much has changed since the first count of mail-in ballots March 14.

Federal Way, with 58,000 residents, still is on line to become the state's sixth largest city and the third largest city in King County. That officially will happen sometime after September city council elections and before March 10, 1990.

The final certified election results show those favoring incorporation at 10,973, (69 percent) and those against the move at 4,967 (31 percent).

Of the 23,630 mail-in ballots delivered to Federal Way voters (2,879 were returned to elections officials by the post office as undeliverable), 67.6 percent were completed and returned.

The final numbers in the successful Sea-Tac incorporation bid rest at 2,874 in favor of cityhood (51 percent) and 2,724 (49 percent) against.

In Woodinville, where the margin between passage and failure has been razor thin, the no voters held on to their lead. Incorporation was defeated by a scant 13 votes, as the status quo proponents outnumbered the incorporation backers 3,537 (50.09 percent) to 3,524 (49.91 percent).

An elections official said the county is satisfied with those figures and will not have a recount unless it is requested by one of the groups involved. A simple majority of one vote is all that is necessary to secure a victory, she said.

Three annexations to Tukwila also were passed March 14, although voters declined to accept that city's bond indebtedness.

Foster residents voted 137-91 in favor of joining Tukwila and Riverton residents did the same, 222-123. Thorndyke also will join the city after a 315-238 vote.

Survey shows schools on upswing

By MELODIE STEIGER

Respondents to a recent survey about the Federal Way School District are happy with their kids' education.

So happy, in fact, that Judy Wall, communications director for the school district, did a little background check on the parents who answered the survey.

"I did a spot check to make sure these weren't only parents who have been in the (school) system awhile," Wall told a recent gathering of PTA officers. "But I found out that two-thirds of them were brand-new to our schools."

The responses that sparked suspicion are the best marks the Federal Way School District has received from patrons in eight years of community forums.

The community forum surveys ask parents from all areas of Federal Way to grade several aspects of their children's schools, such as their feelings about teachers, district finances and the Federal Way School Board.

Overall, 92 percent of about 250 respondents agreed or strongly agreed that they are satisfied with the schools their children now attend. Eighty-three percent felt that way last year, and 79 percent responded favorably six years ago, when the question was first asked of parents.

The parents' estimation of teachers rose, too, from an 83 percent favorable rating last year to 90 percent favorable this year.

THE FEDERAL WAY School Board and district finance department likewise received improved grades from the public. Seventy-five percent of the parents agree that school board members are responsive to the public (13 percent more than last year) and 80 percent believe the district is handling its finances well (22 percent more than last year). School district administrators have regularly expressed concern over those responses in past years.

But school district administrators, and particularly the finance department, are tickled by this year's survey results, said Wall.

"They're simply the best we've had in the eight years

Health officials take turn in burner heat

By ANN SEIDNER

The heat of Tacoma's incinerator controversy has shifted to the Tacoma-Pierce County Health Department, which will issue or deny the plant its permit to operate.

The incinerator on the city's tideflats is scheduled to begin burning sorted garbage, wood and coal by early next year. Ever since community attention turned to the plant nearly one year ago, opposition to it has been directed toward Tacoma Public Utilities, which owns the plant, and to the Tacoma City Council, which oversees the utility department.

Now it's the health department's turn. Before the plant is allowed to fire up, it needs a solid waste permit from the health department because it will burn refuse-derived fuel (RDF), a mixture of shredded paper, cardboard, plastic, wood waste and aluminum.

As part of the solid waste permit, the health department required public utilities consultant EnviroSphere to study the health risks of the incinerator, and since last October the consultant and health department have worked to put together a draft "Human Health Risk Assessment."

Last Thursday evening at Meeker Middle School was the first of four public meetings about the study, which estimates that the plant will pose a risk of contracting cancer to one person in 1 million.

That compares, the lengthy study says, to a 1,400 in a million chance of getting cancer from natural background radiation, to an 84,000 in a million risk from smoking cigarettes and a 2,800 in a million risk from eating four tablespoons of peanut butter per day.

DESPITE THOSE apparently benign results, which were leaked to the press several months ago, the approximately 40 peo-

Drop rocks, boys, public is looking

The oldest rule in politics is the one most often broken. Public life is a glass house. Don't throw stones.

For the Federal Way Community Council, stone-throwing has been an occasional sport until lately. In the attempt to unseat council president John Hale, some council members have not only wounded Hale, but stubbed their own toes in the rush to pick up rocks.

The first mistake was the secret, ill-advised effort to get Hale to resign. While their gripes about Hale may be valid, eight members of the board then made a hasty decision when they signed a request to have Hale removed. Hale took the matter public.

That irritated the petitioners even more, but should not have surprised them. Other options were open to them and were ignored. Their complaints about Hale begin with his methodical leadership. He tends to be deliberate, thoughtful, careful to a fault.

To those with a bias for action, that looks sluggish. But evicting Hale when he is guilty of nothing more than a reluctant management style is tacky. On any given issue before the group, the board could urge a vote of the whole council, whether Hale wanted it or not.

For many present members of the council the leadership debate is troublesome. Some of them expect to run for city council posts, and cannot afford the image of pettiness created by the in-fighting.

Some council members also may be anxious about the prospect that a city council will make the community council irrelevant. The fear is valid, but made more likely by goofy or rash decisions by the executive board.

For anyone — in or out of the community council — who plans to run for city council, the glass house rule is paramount. It has several corollaries.

One is that secrecy ruins its keeper. Not only does the law require public bodies to operate in public view, the public frowns on tiptoe tactics. To anyone who can't stand the possibility of having his decisions and his character examined clinically by his own neighbors, running for council is foolhardy.

Finally, for those who hope to keep the community council in one piece, the wise course will be to heal public wounds in a public way. This council must patch things up and restore its common commitment to quality of life in the community.

Hale has only served for a few months now. Next year, someone else can take the chair — and the heat — that goes with the presidency. The council can still contribute if its members can show some class and stop breaking glass.

Don't allow state to limit city codes

In Federal Way, the born-again fever for home rule may be put on hold by a measure that would bar cities from having a building code more strict than the one imposed by the state.

HB 5905, now in the House Housing Committee, has several elements, one of them naming the state's building code as the minimum (and maximum) code builders must meet.

On the surface, the proposal makes a pair of valid points. It argues that citizens have a right to uniform standards when they buy a home, no matter where it is built.

Master Builders also argue that inconsistent codes across jurisdictional boundaries create a labyrinth for developers, and drive up the cost of housing.

Perhaps. But a single maximum code would not recognize the unique factors that may exist in a given city, and would allow builders to sidestep the efforts of given cities to control them. Especially in new cities like this one, the principle of self-determination would be stymied. That's more than half the reason cityhood was sought.

There are other issues, to be sure. Some rural homeowners would like to see the measure stalled permanently, to get the state out of their hair, a motive we'd call questionable. Some standards are needed.

And in King County, the measure would affect fire codes regarding sprinklers in apartment buildings. Builders might like a more relaxed code, but in urban, high-crime areas, say King County officials, a tough standard is essential.

To make your feelings known, contact Rep. Jean Marie Brough or Rep. Dick Schoon in Olympia, or Rep. Busse Nutley, chair of the House Housing Committee, 786-7872.

Open invitation to council hopefuls

Filing for the city council closes Friday, April 7, ten working days away. We welcome candidates for the council, whether they favored cityhood or not.

Brief notices will be published on request before the official filing. After filings are completed, lengthy stories will be run, in which candidates may discuss issues and credentials.

We will also hold editorial endorsement interviews on request. In those interviews, candidates will be asked to show their knowledge of this community, about government procedures, and about what qualifications are needed to make decisions on matters as diverse as zoning, finance, the hiring of city staff and negotiation of labor and service contracts.

Common sense will be our highest priority. All interested residents are welcome.

Street Talk: Have you ever purchased merchandise sold over the telephone?

Shawn Everett
(Car-lot driver)

"Never. I like to see what the item is like, and do my own judgment. I wouldn't buy anything over the phone."

Tari Kurashima
(Cosmetician)

"I bought some pictures one time, but other than that, no. The pictures were cheap, but I usually resent cold-calling, especially since I have an unlisted number."

Bryan Gervais
(Business Owner)

"I almost bought something once, a computer. But usually I wouldn't — there's too much fraud going on now. You hear about it on T.V. news all the time."

Leon Grace
(Maintenance Worker)

"I got caught twice, once for renter's insurance and once for a sports magazine. Instead of being rude, I always say I'll try it out. I don't mind much, if they're not too pushy."

Kate Robison
(Secretary)

"I don't think I have, although I may have at one time...I mind those calls a little, because they tear you away for one thing when you want to do something else. And I'm suspicious of people who call me to sell me something — it's kind of a cultural suspicion."

Anita Bajoraitis
(Legal Secretary)

"I bought tickets once, but my feelings toward (the calls) are very negative. I feel it's an invasion of my privacy. Calls from charitable organizations are the only circumstances under which I'll purchase anything over the phone."

Mike Pedrini

"Never. I just don't trust them, after seeing all the mail-order rip-offs around. Besides, I never have the money to do it, anyway."

Brad Jordan
(Student)

"I never buy anything because I'm always broke. But I used to sell stuff that way. Some people listen, and some hang up. Sometimes, it's depressing."

California ain't what it used to be

When we talk about the way we live, California is our nightmare.

You hear it in the comments of newcomers from Orange County, also from ten-year residents of Washington who recall the choking smog and the breathless pace of development in what used to be orange groves in Westwood or Ventura or half a dozen other towns they left behind.

But a lot of us have never been there. We base our scorn on hearsay, on weather reports, on intercontinental chit-chat. It seems only fair to report another kind of rumor coming from that direction lately.

While it won't make many of us pack up our things and head for the cinnamon hills around Riverside, an encouraging word has been heard there from citizens who hope to turn the tide on growth.

I take the following facts from an article in Fortune magazine (Dec. 5, 1988). Its author, Brian O'Reilly, reports that 69 percent of the voters in Los Angeles backed a plan to cut the density limits on commercial and industrial buildings by half. Elsewhere in smogland, residents rounded up support for 14 of 20 growth-control initiatives in 1987.

J. Ronald Terwilliger, head of a major national developer (Trammell Crow), says anti-growth sentiment is strong in half of the 60 cities where his company operates. Sometimes that has meant forcing builders to pick up the cost of public services— roads, parks — that are the natural by-products of their projects.

Some developers have caved in to pressure from activists and have built firehouses, police stations, even new city halls, to get approval for their projects. One company will pay a reported $225 million for new roads and other improvements.

That has an immediate appeal in a new city looking for a way to underwrite the capital construction that eventually must come. But there is a dark side. When growth policies are too tough, some developers take their business elsewhere, and property values decline in short order.

The consequences can be disastrous, as when the cities are situated between enormous new housing developments and shopping centers. The traffic passing through can turn the city into bird's nest soup. In a modest way, Tukwila is an example. Its daytime population runs from 50-60,000, as employees and shoppers flood the valley.

Another ironic outcome has been the creation of highrise ghost towns. When cities invent incentives to attract office parks, they often do it to increase revenues while avoiding the high cost of schools and roads that accompany residential growth. At night, those communities empty like sieves as secretaries shut down their word processors and head for home.

When a city puts a lid on housing it also punishes young families, killing the continuity of a community. While it may cause property values to rise at first, finally the tactic backfires, as residents trickle away to follow the jobs. The once-proud town becomes a service center for those who can't fend for themselves, the aging, the unemployed, and the immigrants.

Those cautionary notes aside, the lesson California learned too late is that development, when it is the only driver, drives too fast, does not watch where it is going.

When we drive the one-lane, rural roads of our own spectacular state, checking the fishing holes from Thorp to Rosa Dam on the Yakima, riding the ridges of the Colville Reservation, or dropping down through the timbered hills around Packwood or Ross Lake, or scanning the palette of Skagit Valley's tulip fields, we see a memory of what was lovely in our own corner of earth.

Letting it go an acre at a time, maybe we didn't notice what we were surrendering. "Progress is a comfortable disease," wrote the poet, ee cummings. Another poet, Gerard Manley Hopkins, was more direct.

"Oh if we but knew what we do, when we delve and hew, hack and rack the growing green..." he said. We need not be romantic to share his impulse to save something of that for its own sake.

A comprehensive land use plan is a mouthful of planner talk for what grandma has always called a "a few tulips." It ought to bother us when the only places we see them are boxes between bank buildings, strips required by city code between acres of asphalt.

We should always be able to find, within earshot of our doors, some patch of ground that looks the way it always has, the messy ferns collapsing on each other, rude salal intruding in our path, a clutter of moldy boughs, the smell of damp earth rising around us.

It was our first home, after all.

Community Council will decide president's fate

Hale said in a private interview. "People think I've been charged with a crime. (The eight members) don't understand what they're doing. They have no intention of being fair."

The eight members bringing the action are Jim Cron, Lisa Grimes, David Kaplan, Pat Woodey, Nadine Hoffman, Susanne Font, Dale Roper and Mary Ehlis.

According to the council's by-laws, it takes only three members to sponsor a request for removal.

The removal request requires a majority of the council's 34 members.

Although the council's executive board voted to put the request before its general membership at its May 4 meeting, it's likely the issue will come up at the council's April 6 meeting, 7:30 p.m., at the Federal Way School District headquarters.

Hale asked to have a private disciplinary hearing held before

May 4 so the issue can be resolved quickly.

"Impeachment will be hanging over my head for six weeks," he said.

Council by-laws stipulate that the officer subject to removal be officially notified of the action at least 30 days before the council's next general membership meeting.

HOWEVER, THE motion to wait until May may serve another purpose. Council member John Metcalf, who made the motion to wait until May, said people may have cooled down by then.

"By then tempers will have simmered down," Metcalf said. "Maybe it will never come up in May."

The executive board also denied Hale's request for a private disciplinary hearing. Some members said it is too late for the matter to be dealt with privately because Hale already contacted the press about the removal action.

"We wanted to talk about it before it hit the paper," Ehlis said to Hale. "You opened it up to the press. You have to live with that."

Hale later said not one of the eight members tried to contact him about the removal action until he was presented with the written request for his removal last Monday and soon after contacted by the council's First Vice President Bill Shortt, who asked him to resign quietly.

Shortt confirmed at Thursday's meeting that Hale was asked to resign instead of facing the removal action.

One Hale supporter at Thursday's meeting argued for dealing with the issue quickly.

"This situation is going to overshadow everything else we want to do," said Ron Belknap. "This is going to hurt our credibility."

"We, as a council, have really shot ourselves in the foot again."

Hale has been president of the council since January.

Thousands of daffodils pay honor to first festival queen

FORTUNATELY, SHE lopped off a "0" and ordered "only" 10,000 bulbs of assorted daffodil varieties. She started stuffing her hillside beds with bulbs last fall, carefully spacing and planting each one independently. By day three, Bell recalled, she was heaving entire bushel baskets of bulbs into the turned-up soil.

"I bought smart bulbs," she said. "The roots know to go down and the stems know to go up!"

When she finished with the hillside, she still had an entire truckload of unused bulbs. So she dug more beds in a field behind the greenhouse, and planted all but one bushel basket of the remaining bulbs. Those went by the handful into flower pots, which Bell gives away at the slightest provocation.

When Bell's mother, still a Puyallup resident, was Daffodil Queen, about 150,000 of the yellow flowers went onto the platform from which she and her court viewed the first daffodil parade — or 15 times more flowers than it took to cover Bell's hill. The New York Times even ran a photograph of the spectacle.

IN THAT FIRST festival, Bell said, the queen literally was picked off the street by organizers, unlike today's system of choosing a princess from each area high school and elevating one to queen.

Bell suspects her father may have had a hand in the selection though, making sure that his wife, a dark-haired beauty in the style of movie star Clara Bow, came into the organizers' views just as they were discussing that topic.

Wotton has in the past participated in subsequent festivals, but now declines because of her age, which Bell refused to reveal.

"She'd never forgive me if I told that," she said.

When Bell's flowers do begin blooming — she estimates the first week of April — visitors will be able to pick their own.

Schools garner better grades

"we've had community forums," she said.

Richard Harris, superintendent of the school district, attributed the survey results to good employees and good communication with the public, particularly through annual district reports and newsletters mailed to Federal Way residents.

"I felt that I was getting good feedback and positive communication from the community before, but until you see the proof, you're never sure," Harris said. "We're very pleased."

COMMUNITY FORUMS have been held in Federal Way for the past eight years. Information about the school district was offered in the early years, and parents were urged to ask questions of administrators and express opinions about their children's schools.

The community forum survey was drawn up six years ago to help quantify parents' opinions. The results are used to help the school board develop its goals for the coming year.

Parents are asked whether they strongly agree, agree, disagree or strongly disagree with 10 propositions such as the importance of homework and the level of community involvement in schools.

Parents who attend the five forum meetings also are asked to give a letter grade to the school district for various aspects of its schools, from the school system as a whole to the school's ability to prepare students for college.

SCHOOLS RECEIVED better letter grades this year than any year in the past. All respondents gave schools a C or better for overall performance. Seventy-eight percent gave the district an A or B in that category. Last year, 86 percent of parents gave the school district a B or C overall, and 6 percent gave it a D or F.

Parents also were invited to submit written comments and questions not covered by the graded questions, and their general concerns included everything from drugs in school to the need for after-school activity buses.

Copies of the community forum report are posted at school district headquarters, 31405 18th Ave. S., at all schools and at the Federal Way Library, 848 S. 320th St. For information, call 941-0100.

Class offers computer language

ADA, the computer language officially adopted by the University of Washington for its computer science programs, will be taught this spring at Highline Community College.

Computer Programming in ADA, or Computer Science 251, will be offered Monday and Wednesday evenings, 7 to 9:30, March 27 to June 5. Tuition is $130, plus a computer lab fee of $20.

HCC is the only community college that offers this course, according to Angie Parsons, coordinator of the college's computer science program.

For information, call the college at 878-3710, ext. 271.

Burn permit may spur lawsuit

ple who attended Thursday's meeting were not about to take the findings lightly. Tacoma and Federal Way area residents gathered health department staff with questions that have emerged as recurring themes in their year-long fight against their newest industrial neighbor: What chemicals will we be breathing? Will it smell? Where will the incinerator get the one million gallons of water per day it needs to operate? How will the plant's emissions affect the whole toxic mess that brews daily on the tidesflats?

"We cannot include all of the tidesflats" in the study, said Kim Coble, toxicologist for the health department. Extremely limited data about tidesflats pollution and the limited scope of the health risk study prevent the department from studying the entire tidesflats area, she added. "If you're here to represent the city and county and you're looking at this thing with blinders, then I think you're wasting our time and we're wasting yours," countered Jim Bargelt of the Norpoint Coalition, an organization formed by Northeast Tacoma community clubs to fight the incinerator.

DON BUNGER, a resident of the Lakota area of Federal Way, complained that he already smells an odor from an oil refinery on the tidesflats.

"There's 50,000 people who live in Federal Way," Bunger said. "Are you concerned about the people in Federal Way who already have an ambient odor from that refinery?"

"Yes," Coble responded. "We have taken into consideration the people in this area."

Jack Ruoss, a resident of the Twin Lakes area in Federal Way, voiced the question that is perhaps the strongest argument for incinerator opponents who have raised about $4,000 with which to sue public utilities if the plant starts up without a thorough environmental impact statement (EIS). In 1984, the plant was given a determination of non-significance instead, which states that its environmental effects are not expected to be significant.

Is there an incinerator model the health department used to determine the health risks posed by the plant? Ruoss asked.

Worldwide, Coble responded, there is no other plant exactly like the one under construction on the tidesflats. So she compared the emissions data of three incinerators in the U.S. and Sweden that share similar technology or similar fuels with Tacoma's plant.

"We mixed and matched and got as close as we could," Coble said.

But if no one knows exactly what is going to come out of the incinerator's stack, then how could its environmental effects be determined not significant, incinerator opponents have argued. A full-blown EIS, with ample opportunity for public comment, would pin down the details of the plant's environmental effects and would answer the questions still looming above residents who will breathe the plant's emissions, Norpoint Coalition members say.

"THE CITIZENS are asking for nothing more than the state environmental protection act provides for," said Richard Du Bey at a recent press conference. Du Bey, a former Environmental Protection Agency attorney, currently represents the Norpoint Coalition.

"Our hope is that we can convince the (Tacoma-) Pierce County Health Department that, in order to do a health risk assessment, additional information must be forthcoming," DuBey said.

"They can't do a health risk assessment without an EIS," he said.

If the health department issues the solid waste permit, the Norpoint Coalition will sue the city, Du Bey said.

Doug Pierce, health department manager of the waste management division, told the audience Thursday, that depending on the department's decision to issue or deny the permit, there may be more litigation in the future.

"IF THIS community doesn't like our decision, it can sue us in court," Pierce said. "And if City Light doesn't like our decision, it can sue us in court."

"The city really put you to the brunt of the public wrath," Bargelt told Pierce, Coble and Lou Dooley, the health department's director of environmental health. All spoke Thursday night and assured audience members that their questions would be answered and that the health department, if it grants the permit, would close the incinerator if it does not comply with conditions of the permit.

In Olympia, King County Council member Paul Barden testified recently before a Senate committee in favor of amending a major recycling bill to require Tacoma to complete an EIS for the incinerator before it begins operating.

The legislation, House Bill 1671, already has passed the House.

The health department will host three more public meetings about the health risk study. Wednesday, April 12, the public may comment and ask questions at 7 p.m. in the cafeteria at Northeast Tacoma Elementary School, 5412 29th St. N.E.

Another public comment session will be from noon to 8 p.m. Thursday, April 13, in the YMCA boardroom at 1144 Market St. downtown Tacoma.

Then, at 7 p.m. Monday, May 8, health department staff will answer questions raised at earlier meetings and will present their decision to issue or deny the solid waste permit. That meeting will be in the health department's auditorium at 3629 S. D St. in Tacoma.

Talks cover poets, anger

Anger, house repairs and poetry are all included in the spring quarter lineup of Brown Bag discussions at Highline Community College.

The series of informal noon-time discussions begins April 4 with "Making the System Work for You," a talk about low-income assistance programs and college.

"Handling Those Endless Demands," a talk about learning to say "no," will be April 11. Poet Madeline DeFrees will present "The Footstone Where Our Sisters Lie," a discussion of poetry and women poets, on April 18.

"Understanding Each Other's Rage" will dissect the difference between the anger of men and women on April 25. "Fix It Yourself" will explain basic household repairs on May 2.

"Women and Social Security" will outline the system as it relates to divorce, age and widowhood on May 9. "Managing Your Work System" covers personality differences and work relationships on May 16.

All Brown Bag discussions are free. All but "The Footstones Where Our Sisters Lie" will be in the college's Gold Room, Building 4. The poetry sessions will be in the college's Artist/Lecture Center, Building 7.

For more information, call the college's Women's Programs department at 878-3710, ext. 340.

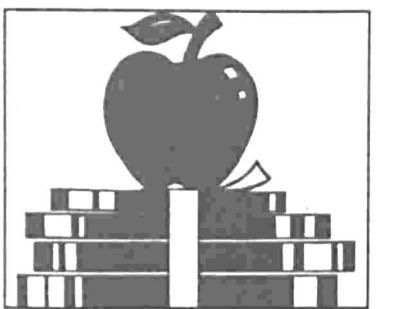

School receives Lions donation

Sacajawea Junior High is the recent recipient of a $1,000 donation from the Federal Way Lions Club.

The donation, which will be matched by the Federal Way School District, will start a Lions-Quest Skills for Adolescence program at the junior high. The program, designed to help students turn down drugs, will be piloted at Sacajawea this year.

Quest is designed to teach students about healthy relationships, to set goals, and raise their self esteem. The program has been presented to more than 800,000 students in more than a dozen countries.

A portion of the donation paid for teacher Cheryl Maze's attendance at a four-day training program required before beginning the program at Sacajawea. The rest will buy classroom materials, including workbooks, for the Quest program.

The Lions Club donation was made possible by former administrator Don Fowler and Sacajawea counselor Ev Gish. Key organizations involved in the Quest program include the National PTA and the American Association of School Administrators.

High school band garners awards

Federal Way High School band students "cleaned house" at the recent solo and ensemble competition for South Puget Sound League musicians, said Gavin Lewis, band director for the high school.

Thirty-six students from the 43-member band earned 23 superior and 13 excellent ratings from contest judges, and three students earned the chance to go to state competition in five categories.

The contest ratings include fair, good, excellent and superior, with superior being the best. Last year's band received 18 excellent ratings and 17 superiors, said Lewis.

Students who earned spots at state competition are SeYones Lee, who plays the flute, Stan Bollinger, who plays the euphonium and tuba, and Shaun Epp, who plays the alto and tenor saxophones. All three earned first place awards for their performances on those instruments.

Alternates to state competition are David Boyd on alto saxophone and Jeff Perry on euphonium. Both rated second or third best on their instruments, and will attend state if the first-place winners drop out.

Students of 10 area schools entered the contest, held March 10 and 11 at Puyallup High School.

Three enter city council race early

Joel Marks

Joel Marks

Joel Marks ran for city council during the 1985 and 1981 Federal Way incorporation campaigns.

Marks won his council position race in 1985, but incorporation didn't pass.

This time incorporation has been approved by voters and Marks has announced he again hopes to win a council seat.

"I want to help Federal Way," Marks said. "The first city council of Federal Way will establish the principles of government for years to come."

"My goal is to provide an effective city government."

Marks, 39, has lived in Federal Way for 10 years and currently resides in West Campus.

Marks has a bachelor's degree in business education and a master's degree in business administration from City University in Seattle.

He has been member of the chamber of commerce government affairs committee for seven years, was co-chair of the petition drive for the 1985 Federal Way Home Rule Committee, a member of the 1984-86 Federal Way Community Plan Update Committee, is a member of the King County Solid Waste Advisory Committee, and has been a member of the Federal Way Philharmonic Board for four years and president of the board for two years.

Phil Watkins

Phil Watkins

Phil Watkins has seen government work first-hand as a senior research analyst for the state Senate and as a public affairs consultant.

Now he would like to be in the middle of government and plans to do that by running for the Federal Way City Council.

"There are three important issues the city council must examine," Watkins said.

"We have to control growth," Watkins said. "I favor a moratorium on apartment construction."

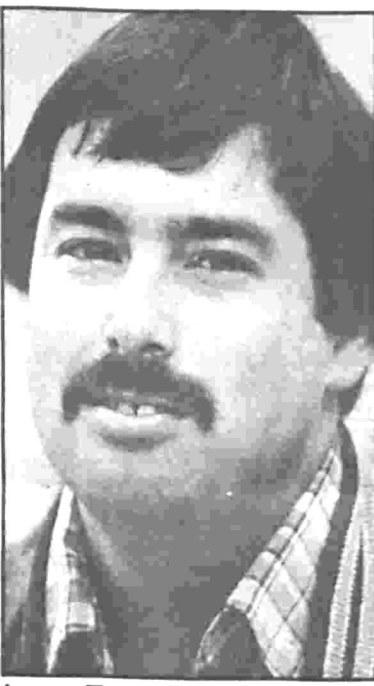

"As we create this new government we have to control costs so we can all continue to afford to live in Federal Way."

The third issue is controlling crime here, he said.

Watkins, 39, has lived in Federal Way for four years and currently resides in West Campus.

Watkins graduated from Knox College in Galesburg, Ill. with a bachelor's degree in history. He has worked as press secretary for the Slade Gorton campaign in 1986, communications director for the Republican Caucus in the House, membership director of the Association of Washington Business and was a special

Lynn Templeton

Lynn Templeton

Lynn Templeton is probably best known for his involvement as director of the Federal Way Boys' and Girls' Club for 12 years.

Voters willing, Templeton may become better known as a Federal Way city councilman.

Templeton has announced that he will run for the new city council that will govern Federal Way once it officially incorporates.

"I'm running because I've always been interested in the community," Templeton said. "I'm dedicated to improving the quality of life here...I feel a calling in service to others."

Templeton, 37, is now director of development for the Boys' and Girls' Clubs of King County. His job involves fund-raising and partially overseeing operations at all nine King County Boys' and Girls' Clubs.

Templeton has lived in Federal Way for 14 years. He now lives near Federal Way High School.

He is a 1973 graduate of the University of Washington with a bachelor's degree in history.

All girls, mothers and leaders who were involved in the Camelot Girl Scout Troop #1039, which met from 1972 to 1981, are invited to a reunion.

The reunion will involve meeting to see the movie "Troop Beverly Hills" at about 7 p.m., April 11, at SeaTac South Theater. After the movie, everyone will go out for dessert to get reacquainted.

To RSVP, call troop leader Barbara Dorn at 839-2595.

Friendly burglar fools the neighbor

The neighbor of a Woodmont woman thought a burglar might have been a friend of the woman or repairman as he watched the man haul two loads of property out of her house and put it into his car.

King County police report the neighbor said he saw a man walk up to the woman's front door at about 5:15 p.m. and knock. He then walked around to the back of the house and about 10 minutes later, left through the front door carrying something he put into his car. The man returned to the house and about 15 minutes later left with another load.

The neighbor said he suspected nothing wrong because the woman often had visitors, and thought the man might have been a repairman. He also reported the man was friendly, smiling and waving to him after each trip out of the house.

The burglar took two rifles and four handguns from the house. He is described as a black male in his early 20s, standing 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighing 130 pounds, with short hair. He drove a 1970s model red Datsun B-210.

Do Something BIG

With Your Small Change

CHANGE·FOR·THE·HUNGRY

Sometimes, it's the little things that count the most. For the thousands starving for a little food, a small contribution can go a long way.

That's why Safeway has joined forces with the good people at The Salvation Army in the fight against hunger, with CHANGE FOR THE HUNGRY.

CHANGE FOR THE HUNGRY began in July and since then, donations have continued to accumulate. For that, we say thanks. But, our job is not over as long as people go hungry.

Here's How You Can Participate:

Tell your Safeway cashier how much of your change to set aside. You'll get a receipt for tax purposes and the Salvation Army will get money for the hungry.

And the hungry families get what they need most: food. Fresh fruits and vegetables, milk, eggs and other wholesome foods.

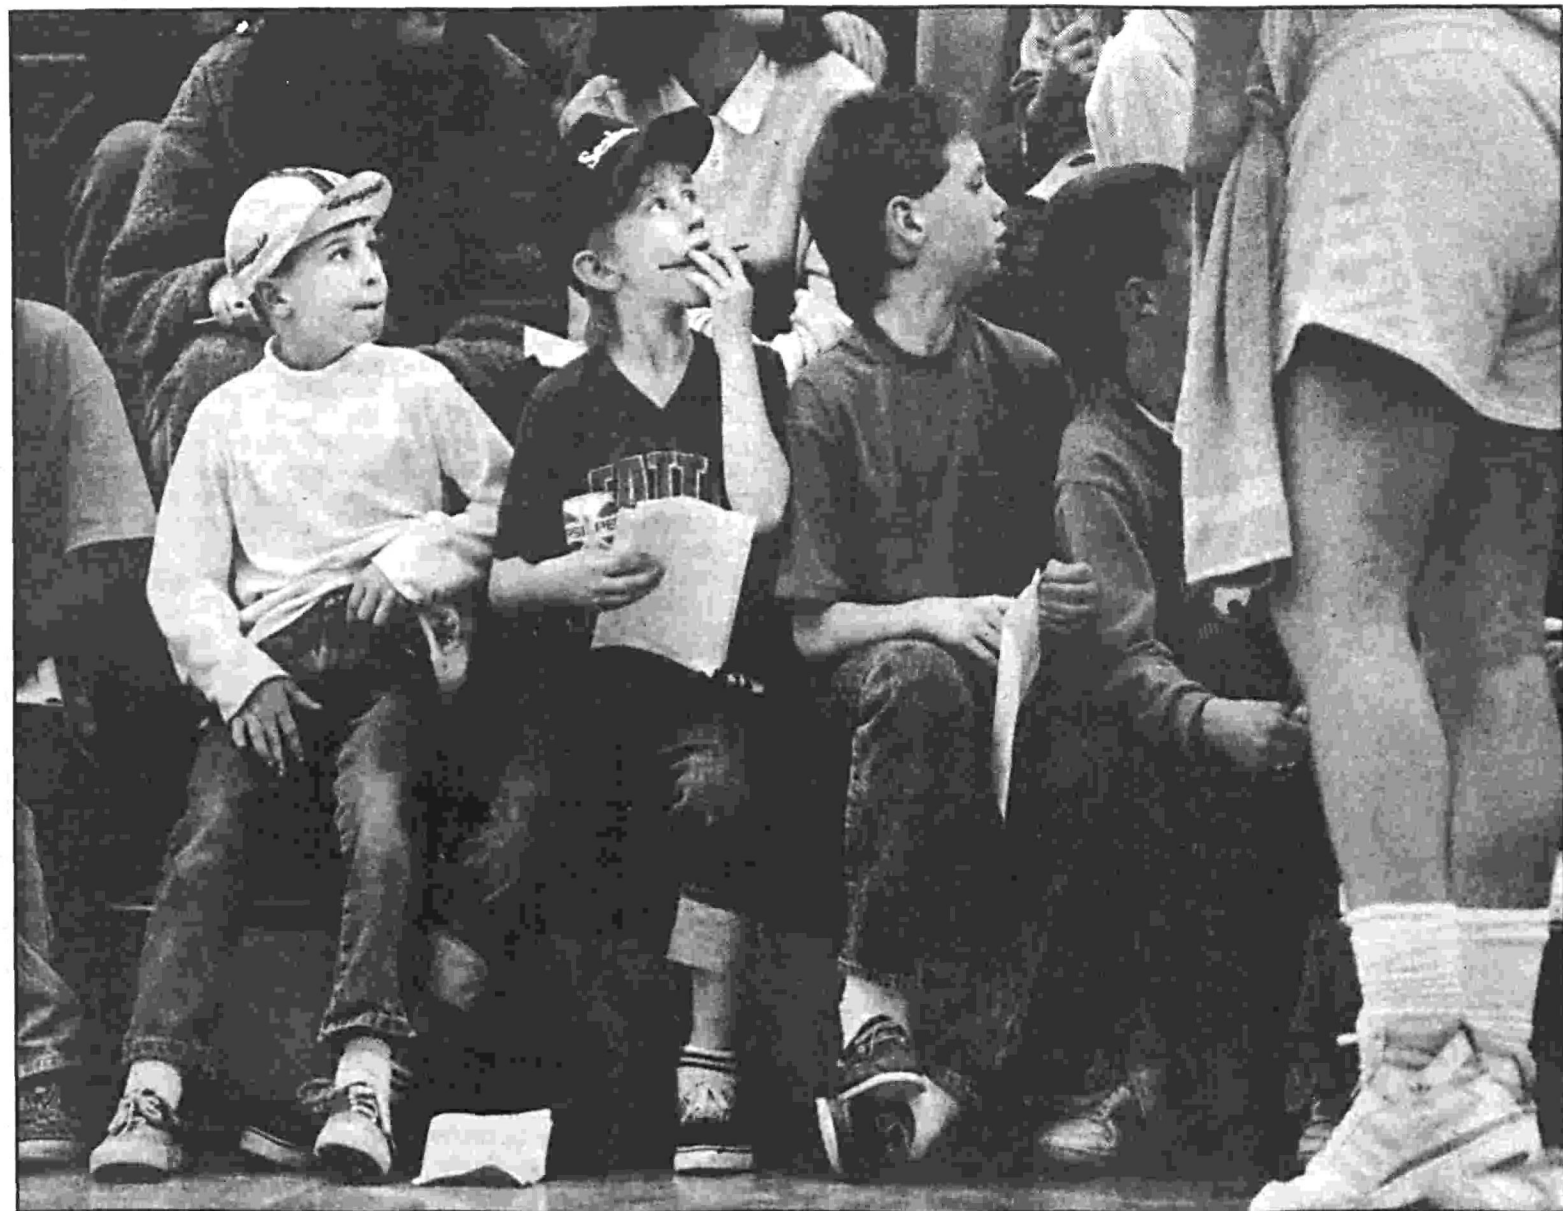

See how much your spare change can really buy.

Donate to CHANGE FOR THE HUNGRY.

Donate the change from any purchase at a Safeway store and your money goes directly to feeding the hungry. It's quick and easy. And the best way to make your spare change really count.

Seahawks hit the court for local charity a break in Wednesday's action at Kilo Junior High School in Federal Way.

The Seattle Seahawks used their football abilities to take the AFC West championship this past fall, but they have other talents, too.

They proved it by dealing the Sea Docs a 101-89 defeat on the Kilo Junior High School basketball court Wednesday, raising funds for a local scholarship program at the same time.

The Seahawks' basketball talents were obvious, as they slam-dunked and powered their way to victory over a combined team of Federal Way Group Health professionals and high school principals.

The Sea Docs needed help to even make it that close, receiving 40 extra points at halftime and also getting spotted four points at the start when five technical fouls were called on the 'Hawks for "dunking before the game."

"You just think of them as football players, but they play a mean game of basketball, too," said Group Health's Rochelle Linscott, who chairs the steering committee for the event, which has now taken place three straight years.

Sea Docs head coach Greg Flynn, who is better known as Decatur's football and softball coach, was equally impressed.

"You can see why they're so athletes," he said. "They're so talented. A lot of people don't realize how really gifted they are. And they're big. They're so wide you don't realize how tall they are until you get next to them."

THE SEAHAWKS also showed an ability to draw a good crowd to Kilo's gym, which bodes well for the Marion Grambau

Scholarship Fund.

One learning disabled student from each local high school—Thomas Jefferson, Decatur and Federal Way — will receive a scholarship from the fund, usually amounting to $500.

The scholarship has existed for two years, but is now named after long-time local educator Marion Grambau, who retired from the Federal Way School District in 1984 and now runs a private learning center. She was Continuation High School's first principal and the driving force behind its coming into existence, and also was Thomas Jefferson's principal for two years until 1978, when she went to Kilo to be a counselor for the rest of her district career.

But the driving force behind the Seahawks' annual visit to Federal Way is Linscott.

"I am a real fan," said Linscott, whose office at Group Health is adorned with 'Hawk souvenirs. "I read an article in a Seahawk publication about them doing this kind of thing. I went to Dean Meade (also of Group Health), and we tried to figure out what group could benefit from having them come here."

The answer was the Washington Association for Children with Learning Disabilities, and, ultimately, the local scholarship. Recipients are chosen by local special education teachers along with representatives of the state organizations.

As for the Seahawks, they go on tour every March and April throughout the Northwest to benefit charitable causes.

Raiders play AA champions to a scoreless tie

By ADAM WORCESTER

Goalkeeper Brian Wallace helped Thomas Jefferson withstand a second-half Mount Rainier attack and earn a 0-0 tie Thursday in a non-league boys' soccer match at Highline Stadium.

The Rams applied constant pressure on the visiting Raiders the second 40-minute stanza but couldn't hit the back of the net.

About 10 minutes into the half, Wallace dove left to corral a short header by Ben Erickson. A few minutes later, he dove the same way to make a lightning-quick stop on a point-blank header by Dave Hawkins, off Trevor Malmanger's cross.

"He had a hell of a game," Jefferson coach Jim Judson said of his sophomore goalie, who had eight saves. "He was the best of the 22 players on the field."

Ram coach Dave Peterson was disappointed after the contest. "When you have that many chances, you hope you can net one sometime," he said.

JIM WEIMER scored a goal for Mount Rainier with 20 minutes remaining off a header from Hawkins, but it was called back because Weimer was off-side.

Jefferson missed a good chance two minutes into the second half when Daryn Dittmore's five-yard header off Jason Bowers' corner kick went right into the hands of Ram goalie Ron Lalime.

Dittmore also boomed a wide-open shot from the 18-yard line just over the crossbar at the end of the first half.

The squads traded momentum the first 40 minutes.

Mount Rainier had the best of play initially, then Jefferson dictated the tempo the next 20 minutes.

But the Raiders "never came out of halftime," Judson said, and the Rams built steady pressure.

"WE WERE never really in the swing of things the second half," said Judson. "We gave Mount Rainier way too much time to build their attack, and we were on our heels playing defense."

For the game, the Rams outshot the Raiders, 15-12, including a 10-5 advantage in the second half.

The result kept Mount

Rainier's unbeaten streak intact, at a state-leading 40. The Rams are now 4-0-1 on the season, including a 3-1 victory over Lakes on Tuesday. Jefferson is 1-0-2.

Judson said his defending AAA state champs must concentrate on getting more efficiency out of their practices. "We're not able to get on the field and execute."

But he also praised the play of the state AA champion Rams, who beat Jefferson last season, 3-2.

"They're one of the best AA teams you're going to see. With the talent they have, they could have a very good shot at winning another (state championship)," Judson said.

Mount Rainier continues that pursuit Tuesday with a 7 p.m. match at AAA powerhouse North Thurston. The two teams tied last year, 0-0, and Jefferson and Thurston tied earlier this year, 1-1.

The Raiders return to action Tuesday with their South Puget Sound League opener against Puyallup. Game time at Sparks Stadium is 7 p.m.

Phillips penalty kick leads Federal Way past Saints

By TIM CLINTON

The Federal Way boys' soccer team rode a first-half penalty kick to a 1-0 non-league victory over Interlake Thursday.

That put the Eagles' record at 2-1-1 heading into Tuesday's 7 p.m. South Puget Sound League opener at Curtis.

"We played a lot better," said Federal Way head coach Mike Minahan. "We've just got some work to do. Hopefully we'll look even better Tuesday."

Thursday the Eagles scored the game's only goal with 14:35 to play in the first half.

Federal Way drew a foul up close to the net, sending the Eagles' Ricky Phillips up for a penalty kick.

Phillips successfully found the right corner his first time up, but a re-kick was called for by the official. Phillips calmly did it again for the score, and this time it counted.

Even though Federal Way only scored in the first half, the second half was much more impressive.

THE EAGLES outshot the Saints, 8-3, in that half, with two other shots going in but getting called back.

"We just looked better the second half," said Minahan. "We put a lot more pressure on them. We just needed to finish off better."

Tim Senigal, a standout junior forward who was playing his first game of the season for Federal Way, did most of the shooting the second half.

He came extremely close six times in the second half, including the two goals that were nullified.

One of those goals came right at the bitter end of the game, while the other came earlier when he took a pass beyond the last defender and bumped it on in, but was called for being off-sides.

Aside from Senigal, another player who stood out was senior goalie Kelly Noland, who recorded the shutout.

"Kelly Noland played well," said Minahan. "I think it's the best game he's played."

Interlake also had its share of shots in the physical contest, but the ball never got past Noland into the back of the net.

"We just need a few more games to get cohesive, I think," added Minahan of his team.

AFTER Tuesday's opener at Curtis, the Eagles will come home to play Lakes at Federal Way Memorial Friday starting at 5:30 p.m. That will be followed by an action between Thomas Jefferson and Bethel.

Curtis edges Eagles

The Federal Way boys' track team was edged by Curtis in its South Puget Sound League opener Thursday, 68-66.

Winning two events apiece were Ed Miller and Lake Dawson of the Eagles.

Miller won the 100-meter dash with an 11.3 time, and posted a 14.5 time in the 110-meter high hurdles to edge out teammate

Dawson, who also crossed the line in 14.5.

Dawson took the 300-meter intermediate hurdles with a 40.7 clocking, and also won the long jump at 21-0½.

Federal Way went to Lakes Friday (after press time), with its first home meet scheduled for this Friday against the Rogers Rams.

Seahawks hoop it up to raise scholarship funds

"We play about 30 games each year, and about four a week," said Jim Whitesel, a Federal Way resident who serves as the team's trainer during the football season but turns into a head coach and player when it comes to basketball. "The players trade off out of the ones that live here in town. We're giving something back to the community for their support."

SEVEN SEAHAWKS came to Kilo, aside from Whitesel.

Their favorite weapon on the court was long outlet passes to either Terry Taylor or Patrick Hunter, often resulting in slam dunks. They stand only 5-10 and 5-11, respectively, but the football corner-backs used their speed to get down the court and leapt up to drive the ball home.

Seattle had a pair of good outside threats in wide receiver Paul Skansi and safety Paul Moyer, and plenty of size underneath.

Tackle Ron Mattes (6-6, 302 pounds) and guard Bryan Millard (6-5, 284) were dominating figures along with tackle Dave DesRochers (6-7, 290), a 12th-round draft pick from last year.

After the Sea Docs went ahead early on four free throws by Group Health's Brad Lind, Mattes and Millard struck from underneath and then Taylor fielded back-to-back passes, the second of which led to a reverse dunk.

The Seahawks remained out front by a 49-29 score at halftime, but came out of the locker room down by 20 at 69-49 as 40 points were added to the Sea Docs' score.

No matter, as Seattle went to its Hunter and Taylor show to make up ground late in the third quarter to close the gap to 81-73.

The Seahawks caught up at 81-81 on a steal and score by Skansi.

TJ principal Ann Gentle tied it at 85-85 with the help of a lift from Millard as well as a put-back by the same, then came through again on a short shot to make it 87-87 with 3:17 to play.

But Taylor put his team ahead for good after that, even though a collision with Millard resulted in both players going to the floor temporarily.

Even though the Sea Docs took a beating, they still seemed to enjoy the action.

"I think we'd probably do better against them in a pool game, or maybe a spelling bee," said Larry Pogue, another Group Health doctor. "But it's a lot of fun, and it ended too soon."

Aside from Gentle, other principals on the Sea Docs were Decatur's Duane Hammil, Federal Way's Ron Montgomery and Kilo's Ken Olsson. Besides Pogue, Meade and Lind, the "Docs" from Group Health were Jack Putnam, Rick Eskenazi, Kim Hoover, Ted Dorn, Ron Graff, Alan Marshall, Emanuel Mkrtechian and Joe Yankee.

TJ blows away Lancers to break into win column

The Thomas Jefferson girls' slowpitch team broke into the win column with unmitigated fury Thursday, pounding Lakes, 14-3, at Steel Lake Park.

The win put the Raiders' South Puget Sound League record at an even 1-1 following a 3-2 season-opening loss to Decatur Monday.

"It was much better," said TJ head coach Monica Watchie. "We started hitting and had less errors. The kids calmed down, and better pitching by (Patty) Cuevas helped."

"But great base running was the key to the game. We tried to keep out of force out situations and we did it real well."

The Raiders outhit the Lancers, 14-8, with five players getting two hits each.

Nancy Oswald hit 2-for-4 with a double, three RBI and two runs, and senior Raelynn Hering and sophomore Carrie Byrum both hit 2-for-4 with three runs and two RBI.

Karen Mingus had a 2-for-4 effort with two RBI, and Cuevas went 2-for-3 with two runs and one RBI.

Softball

TJ STARTED off with three runs in the bottom of the second.

Oswald doubled to score Byrum and Monique James, before scoring herself on a base hit by Cuevas.

Lakes struck twice in the top of the third, but the Raiders rallied for three more in the bottom of the inning.

Hering and Mingus hit back-to-back singles to start it off, and Vanessa Muccilli singled home Hering. Byrum hit Mingus home, and then Oswald drove in Byrum.

TJ had yet another three-run rally in the fourth.

Cuevas singled ahead of a double by Jolene Hering, and Raelynn Hering scored both with a single. Mingus brought in Hering with a base hit.

After the Lancers scored one in the top of the fifth, the Raiders put together a four-run rally in the bottom half of the frame.

Oswald hit into an outfield error and Karen Runions scored her with a single. Cuevas hit into an error as Runions crossed the plate.

A base hit by Raelynn Hering brought in Cuevas, and Mingus singled home Hering.

TJ picked up one more in the sixth, as Byrum made it in when Oswald hit into an error at shortstop.

THE RAIDERS' next action is Monday when they host Rogers for a 3:30 p.m. game at Steel Lake Park, and Thursday they take on crosstown rival Federal Way at the same time.

Tryouts planned

Two of Highline Soccer Association's top Premier I girls' teams, the U-14 BiCentennial Stars and the U-16 Aviation West, have scheduled their tryouts for the 1989-90 soccer season.

This is a regional year for the B.C. Stars and a national year for Aviation West. The tryouts are open to all girls born in 1976 or 1977 for the B.C. Stars and in 1974 or 1975 for Aviation West.

The B.C. Stars will try out at Highline Stadium from 1-2:30 p.m. April 15 and 16 and at Grandview Park from 6-7:30 p.m. April 19 and 20.

Aviation West tryouts are at Pacific Field from 6:30-8 p.m. April 10 and 12 and at Highline Stadium from 2:30-4 p.m. April 15 and 16.

Eagles rally for pair of victories

The Federal Way girls' slowpitch team opened its South Puget Sound League season with a pair of come-from-behind wins.

The Eagles scored three runs in the bottom of the seventh to down Clover Park, 6-5, in Wednesday's opener at Steel Lake Park, then scored four times in the sixth to win at Sumner Thursday, 9-6.

"Both games we came alive in the later innings to pull it out," said Federal Way head coach Doug Baldwin. "We've been exciting to watch. It just shows the character of the team. We never gave up and came from behind."

Wednesday's win was especially down to the wire, as the Eagles found themselves down, 5-3, going into the bottom of the seventh and final inning.

But Erin Pellant ignited the Eagles with a single, and one out later Tara Boe drew a walk and Megan Despain singled to load the bases for Shannon Sehlin.

Sehlin responded with a line drive single to score Pellant and Boe to tie it, and Jenny Mahlstedt lashed a single to score Despain from second with the winning run.

Federal Way had 13 hits in that game, as Sehlin, Mahlstedt, Eileen Aki and Pellant ripped two each.

THE EAGLES followed that up with a 14-hit performance Thursday.

Softball

"We've been hitting the ball well," pointed out Baldwin. "It's just been a question of putting them together."

Federal Way found itself down, 5-3, after five innings of play, in spite of a solo home run by Sehlin to lead off the fourth.

"It was a good hit," said Baldwin of Sehlin's blast to right-center field. "They almost got her at the plate, but she beat the throw with her hustle."

The Eagles scored four times in the sixth to move ahead to stay, however, with Aki, Ginger Hines, Jennifer Wise and Heidi Saheli contributing singles and Pellant lofting an RBI sacrifice fly.

That put the score at 7-5, and Federal Way added two in the seventh ahead of a one-run Sumner spurt in the bottom of the inning to bring the score to its final 9-6 margin.

Hines and Nancy Jetton had three hits apiece in that game, while Mahlstedt and Wise both had two.

"We're spreading our hits around, and that's good," said Baldwin.

THE EAGLES are scheduled for a 3:30 p.m. trip to Curtis tomorrow, before coming home to Steel Lake Park to play Puyallup at the same time Wednesday.

JFK boots Evergreen

By BILLY STONE

The Kennedy Lancers boys' soccer team bounced back on the winning track Friday night at Highline Stadium with a 3-2 victory over the Evergreen Wolverines.

Evergreen is still looking for the winning track following ties with Highline and Lindbergh to open the North Puget Sound League season.

Kennedy, now 2-1 in the NPSL following a 2-1 loss to Hazen earlier in the week, controlled the tempo of the game but was never able to put the Wolverines away for good.

The Lancers jumped ahead 1-0 on Tony Desimone's first-half goal 12:54 into the match. Desimone's second goal, at 55:05, boosted the Lancer lead to 2-0.

Less than 10 seconds later, Evergreen cut the Lancer lead to 2-1 when a Wolverine pass bounced off a Lancer defender into the Kennedy goal.

In the final minute of the game, Dan Custis scored the eventual game-winner on a breakaway through the middle of the Wolverine defense.

Evergreen's Derek Personett made the final score 3-2 on a beautiful diving header goal.

Of his game winner, Custis said, "I broke through the middle and had a one-on-one. Their defender gave me a little shove, he got to the ball before I did and kicked it back to his goalie."

"I just beat him to the ball and put it right in the net."

Custis says the victory was important to the defending NPSL champion Lancers. "We just came off a loss and needed this one," he said. "We prepared well and did what we had to do to win."

Evergreen coach Dave Hayashi said playing Kennedy this early in the season is a good test for the Wolverines.

"They're a quality team, and it gives us an opportunity to see where we're at and where we measure up."

Evergreen has another tough task Tuesday night when it travels to Renton Stadium for an 8 p.m. game with the Hazen Highlanders. Hazen was 1-0 in NPSL action entering a Friday evening contest against Kentridge (after press time).

Kennedy, 3-2-1 overall, will host the Kentridge Chargers, 1-0 in the NPSL, Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Highline Stadium.
