Building boom may be burning out

By LYNN FRANCISCO

The boom in multi-family housing in Federal Way may be coming to an end.

Figures released by King County's Planning and Community Development Division show a huge jump in permits issued for apartment buildings in Federal Way during 1987 and 1988. So far in 1989, however, the number of permits has declined dramatically.

According to the county, there were 3,384 apartment units built in Federal Way in 1987-88, a big jump from 1986 when only 278 units were built.

THE NUMBERS appear even more dramatic when translated into percentages.

In 1988 alone, Federal Way became the home to 40.5 percent of all the multi-family units built in unincorporated King County. (East Sammamish had the next highest number, with 14 percent of the units.)

But in the first five months of this year, the county has issued permits for only 261 units in Federal Way.

While that number could jump before the year is over, developers active in the Federal Way area say it is unlikely that the multi-family housing boom will continue.

COUNTY PLANNER Jeraldine Hallberg said that the boom can be traced directly to the Federal Way community plan, which encouraged developers to build multi-family housing in the area.

"The decision was made that growth should go where there are roads and other infrastructure to support it, into the urban areas of the county," she said.

But many developers agree that after two years of building activity, Federal Way is becoming saturated with apartment complexes.

"The boom is over," said Colin Quinn, with Lincoln Properties, a Bellevue developer active in Federal Way.

"Most of the multi-family zoned property (in Federal Way) is used up. Any market can only take a certain amount of product before it reaches saturation," he added.

DON DAVIS, assistant executive director of the Seattle Master Builders Association, said the successful incorporation vote also may have made developers more cautious about building in Federal Way.

"Builders may have interpreted the vote as residents saying they want better control over multi-family / single-family (housing) ratio," he said. But Davis and Quinn deny that builders jumped into the Federal Way market early, out of fear that a new city might enact tougher zoning regulations.

"I don't think that had much to do with it," said Davis. "Builders didn't think the (incorporation) vote would be successful, since it had already fail-

Male role models like the job

By WENDY CULVERWELL

Star Lake Elementary School principal Don Swanson estimated he signed 500 T-shirts on Friday, the last day of school.

When the final bell rang at 11 a.m., June 16, and all of Star Lake's students ran pell-mell to the waiting buses, many of the children stopped long enough for a farewell hug and a pat on the back from their principal. Others broke stride long enough to wave plants, report cards and coats at Star Lake's head honcho.

Those people in a position to evaluate a principal's management style call Swanson's "paternal." Swanson agrees that he's in a position to be a father figure to the children under his wing. It's a position he enjoys.

"It's fun being a father figure to all these little kids," he said. The similarities between being a father and a principal don't stop with hugs on the last day of school, either. As principal, part of Swanson's job is to dole out punishment when necessary. He finds the subject of discipline frustrating and satisfying.

"You get a chance to turn a kid around and that's very satisfying," he said. Once he wraps up end-of-year business, Swanson and his wife will take off for Texas to visit their two adult daughters.

FATHER FIGURES are not difficult to find — just look for them at your nearest school in a teacher or principal, at your church in pastor or youth leader, at your local boys' and girls' club. The only qualifications you need to be a father figure yourself are a little maturity and membership in the male sex.

One additional, but not requisite, qualification found in the male leaders surveyed

Hale hangs it up as community council president

By KURT HERZOG

After earlier surviving an attempt to remove him from office, Federal Way Community Council President John Hale resigned from office Thursday.

Hale told the council he plans to remain a council member, but also will work privately on studying land-use, legal and administrative issues facing the new city of Federal Way.

Hale became the target of criticism soon after he was elected as president in January. Some members said Hale lacked leadership skills and did not conduct meetings in a "positive, impartial manner," according to a statement circulated by several members.

Hale narrowly survived a secret vote in May that would have removed him from the position. He countered that attacks had been leveled at him because of his attempts to open up council leadership posts to newcomers, instead of perpetuating the council's old guard.

Hale admitted privately to being stung by the criticism and said even after surviving the removal attempt, the position lost any sense of pleasure or ac-

Several schools exchange hours

By MELODIE STEIGER

In the interest of fairness, Federal Way School District administrators say they will switch the starting times of 13 of Federal Way's 16 existing elementary schools.

Only Wildwood, Camelot and Lake Grove elementary schools will keep the 9 a.m. starting times they were given two years ago, when all local elementary schools moved from one common starting time to two.

Schools to meet from 9:35 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. starting this fall are Adelaide, Brigadoon, Lake Dolloff, Star Lake, Sunnycrest, Valhalla and Woodmont.

Those schools, along with Camelot, operated from 9 a.m. to 3:10 p.m. for the past two years.

Schools to meet from 9 a.m. to 3:10 p.m. starting this fall are Lakeland, Lake Grove, Mirror Lake, Nautilus, Olympic View, Panther Lake, Silver Lake, Twin Lakes, Wildwood and Camelot.

All but Lake Grove, Wildwood, Camelot and Silver Lake met from 9:35 a.m. to 3:10 p.m. for the past two years. Silver Lake is a new school in the district, which will meet for the first time in fall.

Continuation High School, Federal Way's alternative school, is the only secondary school to be affected by the change. Continuation classes will meet at 7:45 a.m., 15 minutes later than in the past.

Decatur, Federal Way and Thomas Jefferson classes will continue to convene at 7:30 a.m. and end at 2 p.m.

Junior highs will not change, either. Illahee, Kilo and Totem will meet from 8:05 a.m. to 2:35 p.m., and Sacajawea and Lakota will meet from 7:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The switch in school times was promised to staff and patrons of American tells tales about troubled China

By SEAN ROBINSON

Trouble seems to follow Judy Baumgardner and her brothers when they travel in foreign countries, and the timing has an alarming regularity.

In 1963, Baumgardner, now a registered nurse and real estate agent who lives in the West Campus area, had to leave Germany and come home. Her father had died.

In 1979, her brother, Chuck Klupenger, fled Iran at the beginning of the late Ayatollah Khomeini's reign of terror. "Every time somebody's been in a foreign country, we've had a sudden mishap," said Baumgardner.

In 1989 her younger brother, Bill Klupenger, was in Beijing. He was there when on June 4, the Chinese army opened fire on unarmed student demonstrators in Tiananmen Square, killing hundreds, perhaps thousands.

Klupenger was in Federal Way last week to visit his sister on his way home to Eugene, Ore.

Baumgardner saw the television reports being broadcast from Beijing.

"Gosh yes, we were concerned," she said. "It sounded like another Ayatollah uprising."

She called her brother that Sunday around noon. At 6 a.m. Beijing time, he was still in bed. "I said 'well, you better get out,'" Baumgardner said.

"He was into what was happening, being part of the transition, of the history-making process," she said. "I said 'forget that.'"

Klupenger was teaching English at the Beijing Clothing Institute, under the auspices of the United Nations Volunteer program. His job brought him into daily contact with students.

He said he was never in any danger.

"(There was) no personal threat to me at all — ever," said Klupenger. "I was real torn in leaving. A real deep bond had formed with these people."

Klupenger said his exit from Beijing, arranged by the United Nations, was "incredibly smooth," and added that the whirl of events has disrupted his sense of time. "Thinking back, it seems like three or four weeks' time since I left. It's only been three days."

"It does feel good to be back in the country," he said. Culture

Port can get by with a little less

Editor:
I like the current Port Commission chambers. I personally don't like the ultra-modern office that is cold and impersonal. In fact, many people think this building is good for 20 years or more as the offices of the Port. As a public agency, it's not expected to be plushy. It's not prudent to consider a new building until the Port shows a profit from its own operations.

"Refreshing...delightful..." these are some of the things I read about the new executive director (Zeger van Asch van Wijck). I also read that he's not too happy about his "bedroom office." So why not extend the present office to the premises now occupied by the executive secretary? A public agency needn't look like a lawyer's office at the Columbia Towers, should it? Good repairs — some paint, some expansion — goes a long way in keeping a house or building in good order. That's what we taxpayers do!

At the May 23 Port meeting it was my error not to use Roberts Rules of Order and ask for a point of personal privilege when we represented the King County taxpayers. I wish to state now that 100 percent of our petition signatures were collected at shopping centers and various post offices and signed by hard-working taxpayers who quoting Commissioner Block, "had their heads down and their butts in a sling."

No, we did not stand in front of the offices of the various chambers of commerce or the Downtown Seattle Association. If you have an opinion that differs from ours that is your right, but don't tell us we don't represent the taxpayers — our petition speaks for itself.

I'll say it again and again — what's needed is a decrease in the tax levy and phasing out by the year 2000.

Caption was careless about holy objects

Editor:
I take strong exception to the inconsiderate use of the word "trappings" in reference to the chalice, missal and candle pictured behind Sister Norine Joseph as she sat at the little altar in the chapel of St. Francis Community Hospital (May 28, "Final tribute"). The chalice and missal are not reserved for a funeral mass as the caption implied. They are used in every mass celebrated by a Catholic priest.

Had the caption-writer taken the pains to check the word 'trappings' in the dictionary, he/she would have found "articles of equipment dress of an ornamental nature," which might be construed as applying to sacred vessels used in Catholic masses.

But the connotation of the word goes far afield. For instance, the word 'trappings' may also be used as an "ornamental covering for a horse." And, as for synonyms, — livery, furnishings, duds, personal effects, trumpery, frills, paraphernalia and many more....

If a Catholic were to refer to the candles, flowers and missals adorning the altars of other faiths and the ceremonial surplices, cassocks and robes worn by members of the clergy of those faiths as "trappings," I'm sure the news would immediately sound a trumpet blast of righteous indignation in its editorial columns.

It's never too late to say, 'Thanks, Dad'

I haven't paid much attention to Father's Day. I should.

For 10 years my neglect was rooted in self-indulgence and childhood bliss.

The past 17 years my father hasn't been around to neglect. He died of cancer in June 1972.

I remember standing by his hospital bed the last night and realizing, without being told, I would not see him again.

And I remember playing catch before he went to the hospital how he could not bend to pick up the baseball because the pain was so bad.

But these are not the memories that endure.

Ones that do are of tossing the ball back and forth summer evenings after work. Of Sonic games and Husky games. Of quiet nights fishing, home crew cuts and Sunday drives in the mountains.

The tragedy is not that he died so young but that I was not mature enough to thank him for the impact he made on my life.

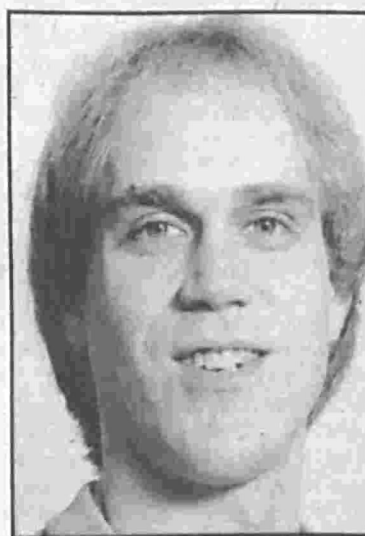

We never had the chance to talk father-son as most do at some point after 18, when Dad suddenly becomes about 10 times smarter than he was when you were a teenager.

And he never realized the fruit of his labor to raise three children.

So on Father's Day 1989 I would like to say, thank you, Dad.

For taking me out to Crystal Lake those evenings on short notice and fishing until the sun went down.

For playing catch when

Adam Worcester

you got home from work even though you would rather have relaxed with a beer.

For signing me up for ski lessons, then making me stick with them when I wanted to quit.

For nailing that basketball hoop over our driveway.

For talking me out of the worst batting slump of my career (at age 9).

For taking an active interest in all my activities, from sports to school to Cub Scouts.

For planning ahead well enough to put three children through college after you were gone.

For offering me the opportunity to know you, even for too-short a time.

For leaving an influence that continues to guide me in a thousand subtle ways.

Happy Father's Day.

Honey, what's been eating you lately?

If all the fat sucked out of Americans by plastic surgeons last year could be piled up in a public place, it might resemble a pizza the size of the Kingdome.

We donated blubber more than 101,000 times to the process called liposuction. Most of the fat was collected from hips and thighs (34 percent) with abdomens (23 per cent) and faces (21 percent) trailing slightly.

These figures, in case you wonder about my source, come from the plastic surgeons themselves. They report a grand total of 681,070 separate operations performed last year, from breasts to buttocks. They included face-lifts (48,480), eyelid surgery (78,490), breast augmentation (71,270) and a whopping 68,880 collagen injections.

But fat-sucking led all other procedures, a statistic that may seem self-evident in fat-conscious America. But hold on to your love handles. A handful of cosmetic surgery procedures (breast reduction, chin-augmentation and hair replacement) make the patient's life measurably better. They improve facial appearance, physique, and even the way we chew our food.

But the fat affected by liposuction is mainly hidden under slacks and dresses. Only in bathing suits or en route to the shower do we put our puffy parts on parade. Yet liposuction increased 81 percent during the period from 1981 to 1988.

Mike Robinson

A previous generation battled inevitability (and gravity) by wearing swimsuits for "mature" figures. Apparently maturity is out.

The surgeons offer no data about the health of those suddenly made lovely again. To be fair, it seems likely that many of them were otherwise healthy women who just hated the way their thighs burst out of a bathing suit.

But somewhere in America, there must be a few women who feel secretly ashamed, aware that their missing fat still hangs around them like the ghost of their former body.

What makes liposuction both wonderful and terrible is that it is a kind of time machine. It allows a mechanical reversal of the aging process. Unlike exercise, it is instantaneous, and nearly painless. Unlike diets, it requires no will power, no change in habits, no consumption of gawdawful food supplements, pills or potions.

You walk in, you disrobe, you tolerate some discomfort while a doctor makes an incision, and a little more while he runs a miniature Hoover around your hips.

The appeal is undeniable. It is the cosmetic equivalent of power steering, the psychic twin of a shortcut to heaven.

And like other shortcuts, it has a hidden tax. Like the monster manufactured by Dr. Frankenstein, liposuction has no soul. It creates a suddenly slimmer person, but being effortless, it also is counterfeit. It implies that personality could be injected, or character applied with a putty knife.

But never mind the massive deceit involved. The ominous implication of liposuction is that it allows our bodies to be carved into uniformity with minimal inconvenience. Americans love that. If we can't be born beautiful, we will get there some other way.

As a weight loss technique, liposuction does not compare with any of the major diets. As a gimmick, it is right up there with micro-wave ovens and cordless phones.

As a trend, it is likely to introduce a wave of advancements that will someday make it seem primitive. If we can turn a flabby tummy into a washboard in ten minutes today, by the year 2000, the technology ought to be computerized and miniaturized enough to be available in portable take-home models.

They will allow us to perch at the dinner table, consuming vast portions of the planet's resources at a sitting, while our personal Trim-Kit quietly sips at our flesh, staying a centimeter ahead of Mother Nature.

Thus, the American Dream, constant consumption and permanent personal beauty, will be achieved. Around the table beside us our loved ones will be slurping and burping, while their intimate parts are silently erasing them, feeding their fat into hygienic pouches that are collected once a week to be recycled, allowing to profit from our own fat.

Eventually, the process may be refined to the point that we have liposuction ports installed at birth, at strategic points around the body. Eventually, we will get used to the idea of a fat-free life, just as we have adjusted to fighting our wars mainly on foreign soil, or exporting our toxic waste, or the depletion of our natural resources: trees, valleys, rivers.

American visits troubled China

shock is still affecting him. He goggled at the number of cars in Federal Way, remembering a city of 8 million bicycles.

ON MONDAY, June 5, the night after the attack on the students, he heard machine gun fire about a block and a half away from the school where he slept as well as taught. The shots continued all night long. Klupenger thought he heard 300 to 400 shots. He and other teachers and students poked their heads out into the night air, perhaps foolishly, but the conflict never got any closer.

"I wore earplugs at night trying to sleep," he said.

Although Baumgardner had the luxury of constant network news coverage to tell her what was happening, her brother was not so fortunate. The government crackdown on the media threw a blanket over the city. Flipping through channels, he could find out nothing. "All I could get was agricultural reports," he said.

"We don't appreciate freedom of the press at all. That's one of their demands," he said, referring to the three things the students have asked from the government. The others are peace, freedom and democracy; and an end to what the students call "Guan-do."

KLUPENGER TRANSLATES that as official corruption. The students have accused Communist Party officials of having Swiss bank accounts full of money obtained from profiteering. "It's not a question of an end to Communism," Klupenger said. "It's the current leaders who are corrupt."

"There's no system to get rid of them. No inherent method for changing the leadership. These guys are emperors. They have absolute power. They're literally above the law."

Klupenger called the Chinese people naive and childlike. He said the greatest shock to them was that troops of their own army would fire on them.

WHAT IMPRESSED him most was "the beauty of these people, and the strength, and the love of their country, and the shock and the horror of what's been done."

"I know that they're going to pull back into their shell again. I guess that's the real tragedy," he said, remembering that he had seen some of their strong emotions for the first time.

"Not that there's anything we can do about it except understand, and to know that people are the same everywhere," he said. "They worry about whether their kids are going to get their homework done, what they're going to have for dinner."

Klupenger said he'd been to Tiananmen Square at least a dozen times in the last month. He was in support of the students — he spoke to them every day at school, and the discussion always turned to the demonstrations.

But he couldn't get too involved, because he feared the government would blame foreign agitators for the movement, thus discrediting it. The government system of propaganda ensures that.

"THEY HAVE propaganda departments," said Klupenger. "Our school has one. It's their responsibility to show teachers and students what the party line is."

But he said people often ignore the official line, choosing to get their information from Voice of America Radio, or the British Broadcasting Corporation, or JUDY BAUMGARDNER (left) and her brother, Bill Klupenger, had some anxious moments recently. Klupenger was in Beijing, China when social unrest exploded into a military crackdown. Baumgardner, a registered nurse from Federal Way, was relieved to see "the same old Bill" get off the plane to greet her June 10 at Sea-Tac Airport.

Media overdoes China

By SEAN ROBINSON

A Federal Way resident who recently returned from China says the media has blown events there out of proportion. "It's really been overexploited on this end by the press and everybody," he said.

The man, an employee of a local manufacturing company, may have an opportunity to return to China under the firm's auspices. His superiors, concerned that the Chinese government might get wind of any statements, and thus reject visas, have asked him not to reveal his real name.

He spent two months in China, in the cities of Shanghai and Beijing, returning home June 7 on company orders. He said the demonstrations led by students were characterized incorrectly by media as efforts to abolish communism in China, and establish a democratic government.

"It wasn't democracy as we think of it," he said. "Not that they were unhappy with the Communist government, (but) that they just wanted to get rid of the corruption."

He said he knew a student who had been involved in the demonstrations in Tiananmen Square and the subsequent attack by the Chinese army. The student escaped unhurt, but "didn't want to talk about it. I think he was probably emotionally stunned."

He said he never felt personally threatened, but acknowledged that he stayed away from "the hot spots" as much as possible.

Apparently, he got too close to a hot spot on one occasion. Out shopping, he stopped to take some pictures. "At that point," he said, "several plainclothes men told me not to get my camera out, that we were foreigners and that we were to leave. We did, promptly. The interpreter didn't know who they were. You don't ask."

He blamed foreign governments, including the United States, for being "so quick to condemn the whole thing when they all have similar problems." He cited the Kent State shooting and race riots in Detroit as examples of American oppression in which civilians were killed.

But he called the actions of the Chinese government "very drastic. They could have waited it out. To go in the way they did, and then, you know, open fire, it was hard to believe."

He also made a chilling observation. "Most of those young men and women that were killed came from single-child families."

have to go. If we don't go we all will die.' You can't go, you might get hurt," she said.

"Him not wanting to disobey his mother, but feeling that he had to for his country. Real strong human emotions," said Bill.

"It's going to be a reign of fear and terror," he said. "There's no doubt about it."

Town hall meetings set

Sen. Peter von Reichbauer and Reps. Jean Marie Brough and Dick Schoon, all of the 30th Legislative District, will sponsor town hall meetings June 28 and 29.

The Wednesday, June 28 meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Federal Way Library, 848 South 320th Street.

On Thursday, June 29, legislators will meet with constituents at 7 p.m. at Edgewood Junior High School, 10909 24th St. E. in Puyallup.

The legislators will report on key issues dealt with during the recent session, answer questions and hear about constituents' problems.

Firefighters from past sought for get-together

It's been in the planning stages for years, but Bob Hash, deputy chief of Fire District 39 (Federal Way), says a get-together for all local firefighters and ex-firefighters will soon be reality.

"We've never done it yet, although we've talked about it for years," Hash said. "But it's time to do it."

The event will be an old-fashioned chicken dinner, July 14 at the Federal Way Elks Club. Former firefighters, paid and volunteer, from the old fire districts 22, 30, 32 and 39 are invited.

All those districts eventually joined into what is now Fire District 39.

The evening will begin at 6 p.m. with a no-host cocktail bar, and continue at 7 with dinner. A slide show and some storytelling from past days of Federal Way firefighting will follow.

Dinner tickets are $8 apiece and should be purchased by July 7, said Hash. For details, call the fire department at 839-6234.

Father figures find that the work is rewarding about their feelings on father figurehood was actual fatherhood. With the exception of Father Joe Kramis of St. Theresa's Catholic Church, all of those surveyed are fathers themselves. Swanson, as previously mentioned, has children. So do Rick Gillmore (Federal Way Boys' and Girls' Club), Duane Hammil (Decatur High School) and Larry Merlino (Continuation High School).

For Joe Kramis, St. Theresa's is his family and his parishioners are, in a spiritual sense, his children.

The term "father," Kramis explained, is affixed to a Catholic priest's name in reference to his role as someone who ushers in new spiritual life. St. Theresa's members don't seem to mind the distinction, however. Father's Day cards pour in each year, and this year's collection includes a two-foot square card signed by many members of his parish.

With fewer and fewer young men entering the priesthood, though, the old image of a "father" as the head of an intimate spiritual family is outdated. Today's priests are ministering to larger and larger congregations and delegating intimate details to lay people.

"I've always wanted to be the type of priest who can be a leader, a reconciler ... and I can no longer be that with 1,000 families," he said.

Like many priests, prohibited by the Catholic church from marrying and having families, Kramis said he went through a period of "mourning" in his 40s when he realized he would never have a family of his own. Now approaching his 60s, he said he finds satisfaction in the generative nature of his profession — ushering people into the family of Jesus.

AS PRINCIPAL of Continuation High School, Federal Way's alternative school, Larry Merlino also could be considered a father figure to the 220 students who go there.

"I think that's what makes our school go — our family-type atmosphere," he said. The fact that Continuation is much smaller than the traditional high school advances that role.

Merlino has no vice principals to handle administrative chores or to act as barriers between him and students. When there is a discipline problem, he is the one to deal with it. Likewise, when a student seeks an adult perspective on a problem, Merlino is often the one to provide it.

"They talk to you as a person (in our environment)," he explained. For alternative schools to work, he stressed, the entire staff must function as mother and father figures to the often-troubled students.

Merlino, like Swanson, has two adult children.

IF ANYONE'S job demands that they provide leadership, encouragement and discipline to young people, it is Rick Gillmore's job as director of the Federal Way Boys' and Girls' Club.

Kids look up to people in his position because of their maturity and problem-solving ability, he said, and that happens now more than ever because so many children are being raised in single-mother homes.

"It's really critical that they have some male input," he said. Patience and good listening skills are the key to success as a father and a father figure, he said.

Gillmore is the father of two — a 13-year-old daughter and a 6-year-old son.

For Duane Hammil, Decatur High School's principal, watching his own two sons proceed through high school (classes of 1988 and 1991) has changed his perspective on being a principal.

While his job isn't to be a substitute parent (Decatur has counselors for that), his door is always open to students and they take advantage of it. His own children, he said, have made him more aware of what's going on in the lives of high-school-age teens.

ed a couple of times."

QUINN SAID builders went to Federal Way because of the zoning and because it was the only place that wasn't fighting multi-family housing.

"Either you went there to build, or there wasn't anyplace to go," he said.

"That is still the case today," he added. "Other areas (of the county) are not taking their fair share of multi-family housing."

A slowdown in apartment construction would be welcomed by DIRE, a Federal Way development watchdog group. Called the "Development Impact Resistance Exercise," the group was formed to "protect the quality of life in Federal Way," in the words of member Jim Cron.

Cron, however, is skeptical that the boom in multi-family housing is coming to an end.

"I haven't seen any slowdown yet, and I've heard that there are 4,000 or 5,000 units being planned right now.

"It may slow down in a few years, but by then I don't know if anyone will want to live here," he said.

CRON IS cautiously optimistic that the new city of Federal Way will do a better job of regulating growth, but he says that the area is already "on the tail end of the growth question."

"And remember," he added,

"Not all of Federal Way is within the new city limits. All of the eastern part is still under county control.

"We have got to get the county to do what it said it would — make sure that services, such as roads and schools, are in place before (development) permits are issued anywhere in the county."

Hour exchange fulfills promise

elementary schools two years ago, when two starting times were first approved by the Federal Way School Board so the district could save money, said Rich Hamlin, assistant superintendent for support.

The promise to switch times after two years was made because many patrons and staff did not like the starting times they were given. In particular, several staff members argued that the 9:35 a.m. starting time keeps students in school later, putting a burden on their attention spans.

Parents argued that the change put a burden on their own schedules, too, particularly when working parents had to change their plans for day care.

Hamlin said the only fair choice was to switch most or all of the school starting times after two years.

"The promise was made in fairness to the schools. We didn't like (doing this) in the first place," he said.

District administrators figure schools save more than $2.4 million in transportation costs by having two starting times instead of one. A single starting time for all schools, they say, would mean the purchase of 30 more buses at $80,000 apiece and the hiring of drivers for those buses, at a cost of about $660,000.

Some of that money eventually would be reimbursed by the state, but administrators say it would first be doled out by the district's general fund.

Plans for next year's starting times are a second draft. Initial plans had Kilo and Totem junior highs starting at 7:30 a.m. and the other junior highs at 8:05 a.m.

But the school board protested at a June 12 meeting that elementary schools were not well-matched with the junior highs they feed students into. The mismatch would disrupt families in which junior high students babysit their younger brothers and sisters before school starts in the morning, board members noted.

The junior high starting times were subsequently changed, but the final plans do not preclude that problem, warned Hamlin.

"It's impossible to match them all up, especially since some schools double feed," he said.

Hamlin said the switched starting times probably will be in effect two years, unless adjustments are necessary. After two years, starting times will switch again.

complishment.

"Working with the council has been frustrating and I just want to concentrate on other things," Hale said in a private interview.

Members later applauded Hale for his service, but some are relieved the council is under new direction.

"I feel bad about the way it ended up," said member Mary Ehls, who had supported Hale's removal. "I don't think it's anything to be happy about."

"But ultimately the council has run better."

Since the removal attempt, Hale has not attended meetings and has been replaced by Ron Belknap, the council's first vice president. Belknap is Hale's likely successor.

Council members will vote on a permanent replacement for Hale at their July 6 council meeting. Thursday the council elected Mark Hutson as the council's second vice president.

Belknap praised Hale for his handling of the community council in the midst of the attempt to remove him from office.

"I think John has done an admirable job under some very difficult circumstances," he said.

Hood ornaments will be returned

King County police will display a collection of confiscated hood ornaments Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, so their owners might reclaim them.

The stolen car hood ornaments were taken between March 1 and May 1 in the Marine Hills area, south of South 312th Street, west to First Avenue South and east to Pacific Highway South.

Only those people who reported losses in that area in the above-mentioned time frame are eligible to reclaim the hood ornaments.

Backhoe ignites fire in Stone Brook yard

Natural gas and power equipment combined to create a tall wall of flame on the lawn of a new home in the Stone Brook housing development Monday evening.

A backhoe operator working on the lawn of an unoccupied home at 47th Avenue Southwest and Southwest 327th Place at about 6 p.m. apparently caused a leak in a natural gas pipe underground, according to officials at Fire District 39 (Federal Way).

The backhoe operator then touched power equipment near the home, causing an electrical arc that touched off the fire, officials said.

The result was a blaze about 20 feet high and 10 feet wide that threatened two nearby homes. The backhoe driver had motored away before the flames began, according to fire department reports.

Although in the end the fire damaged only shrubbery and lawn at the home, it took three fire engines and representatives from power, telephone and gas companies to respond to the call for aid.

Homes nearby were doused before the fire itself was attacked in hopes of keeping those homes from catching fire, too, said Boyd Johnson, public information officer for the fire department. The flames were under control in two hours, he added.

Car strikes pedestrian

A 47-year-old man from Blaine, Minn. is in serious condition at Harborview Medical Center after being hit by a car in Federal Way Tuesday night.

State Patrol reports that Kenneth Valstad was standing in the northbound lane of Highway 161 near the intersection of Highway 18 when he was struck by a car driven by William B. Woolley, 25, of Seattle.

Authorities don't know why Valstad was in the road. The accident is under investigation. No charges have been filed against the driver.

EIS or permit first?

Burner permit may be delayed

By BRAD BROBERG

The Tacoma-Pierce County Health Department may delay deciding whether to give Tacoma's tideflats incinerator a key permit.

Without the permit, the incinerator could not burn garbage.

The department had planned to say yes or no to issuing a solid-waste permit at a press conference June 23. Now it might say maybe.

The department may decide to hold off on the permit until an environmental impact statement (EIS) for the project is finished, said Doug Pierce, manager of the department's waste-management section.

That would suit opponents of the project just fine.

Jim Bargett, a leader of the Norpoint Coalition, urged two local audiences to lobby the health department to delay the decision.

He asked the Federal Way Community Council Thursday to pressure the Seattle-King County Department of Public Health to study the incinerator issue and to release its own findings. Federal Way residents will be directly in the path of any emissions from the plant, Bargett said.

The community council voted unanimously to do just that. It also voted to send a letter expressing its concerns to the Tacoma-Pierce County Health Department.

Bargett said at the June 8 Federal Way Chamber of Commerce committee meeting he is fearful Tacoma would begin running the plant before the EIS is done if it receives the solid waste permit first.

He said the health department's health-risk assessment, upon which the permit decision will be based, looked at the effects of the incinerator in isolation and did not take into account existing pollution problems in the tideflats.

Bargett said the EIS will be a more complete document with more extensive involvement of Northeast Tacoma and South King County residents.

The incinerator is now about 75 percent complete and will be ready to test in October. Besides sorted garbage, the plant is designed to burn wood and coal and produce electricity for about 21,000 homes in Tacoma.

Although opponents aren't crazy about the plant burning wood and coal either, garbage appears to be the project's soft spot.

Besides needing a solid-waste permit from the health department to burn trash, the city must complete an EIS, thanks to a last-minute amendment tacked on to a comprehensive recycling bill passed by the Legislature this spring.

However, like the solid-waste permit, the EIS amendment covers only plants burning garbage, which leaves open whether the city will fire up the plant using other fuels while waiting for the permit and/or EIS.

"Those are all things that would go to the (public utilities) board and (city) council for a decision," said June Zamjahn, public relations manager for Tacoma City Light, which owns and will operate the plant.

Also clouding the picture is Tacoma's intention to begin work on the EIS while simultaneously fighting the requirement in court.

The Tacoma Public Utilities

Board voted to hire the consulting firm of Parsons, Brinckerhoff, Quad and Douglas to prepare the EIS and attorney Albert Malanca to file suit against the state for ordering it. The city council will vote Tuesday on the hirings.

Parsons, Brinckerhoff already has done one study on the incinerator for Tacoma. Less extensive than an EIS, the study concluded that the plant was well-designed and would meet federal emissions standards, but that the city had not done a good job assessing its effect on the environment.

Although Pierce said he does not think the EIS will uncover any new information, the possibility that it could be causing the health department to consider delaying its decision on the solid-waste permit until the EIS is completed.

The EIS itself will not take a stand on the incinerator. It only will assess alternatives and explore the impacts of its operation.

The solid-waste permit is the last operating permit the plant requires.

Adams pleads guilty to tax charges

Norman Ray Adams, a key figure in the former Lucky Lady topless nightclub in Federal Way, pleaded guilty on Thursday to 10 tax charges, including conspiracy to defraud the Internal Revenue Service, tax evasion, and failure to file federal income tax returns.

In the Lucky Lady-related charges, Adams pleaded guilty to evading employee withholding taxes.

The charges, filed last year in U.S. District Court, involve Adams' part in the operation of several topless nightclubs and adult entertainment centers in Seattle and Alaska, as well as the Lucky Lady.

Adams, an Alderwood Manor resident, faces up to 38 years in prison and fines totalling $2 million.

As part of the agreement with the U.S. Attorney's office, 78 other counts named in the indictment were dropped.

Adams, 45, is known to be an associate of Frank Colacurcio Sr., a Seattle man who served two prison terms for racketeering and evading federal income taxes. Colacurcio has also been involved in the operation of topless nightclubs.

Adams is scheduled to be sentenced on Sept. 29. It will be the second time he is sentenced. In 1983, he was given six months in jail after being convicted of dealing in child pornography. That sentence was later reduced to 58 days.

The Lucky Lady nightclub, 31655 Pacific Highway S., was sold in Feb., 1988, according to the King County Assessor. The new owner is listed as Deja Vu of Everett, Inc., a company with a Seattle post office box address.

Last of clam scam group changes plea

The final defendant in the so-called "Clamscam" trial has agreed to plead guilty to several felony counts and to pay the state at least $350,000 in civil penalties for his part in the theft of $1.8 million worth of geoducks from Puget Sound waters.

Brian Hodgson, an Olympia man who has been called the father of the geoduck industry in this state, reached the plea agreement with the King County Prosecutor on Wednesday. The guilty plea could result in a two-year prison sentence for the 59-year-old commercial fisherman.

With Hodgson's plea, the potentially lengthy criminal trial, which involved nine individuals and three corporations, came to an end.

The other defendants, including Carol Kondo of Federal Way, reached plea agreements nearly two weeks ago. Under her agreement, Kondo will plead guilty to trafficking in stolen property and will pay $275,000 in civil penalties to the state. The state accused the nine defendants of illegally harvesting the geoducks over an 18-year period, starting in 1970.

Hydro dream nears reality for Williams

By ADAM WORCESTER

It doesn't look like the culmination of a dream.

The old building on Tacoma's waterfront needs a paint job, a new wall and a new roof. Yet to Bob Williams, it might as well be the Taj Mahal.

Williams has struck an estimated $2.5 million plan with Tacoma officials that will turn the Municipal Dock building into the Unlimited Hydroplane Hall of Fame and Museum. The Tacoma City Council has reserved the former warehouse for a year while it negotiates a lease with Williams' organization.

"It looks like this is finally going to be it," Williams said.

By 1992, he hopes to have his huge collection of hydroplane memorabilia moved out of his Burien residence to its permanent home.

HE WAS beginning to wonder if it was ever going to happen.

When Williams first set out to open a hydro museum in 1982 he knew it would not be easy. Some told him it could not be done.

"You have to gain an awful lot of support and an awful lot of trust. Gaining the trust is the hard part," he said.

The Tacoma effort marks his group's third serious attempt to acquire a museum building. Williams was close to deal for a site last year at Lake Wilderness, near Maple Valley, "but we found out some people weren't being up front with us."

In contrast, he praised Tacoma city officials Ron Nelson, economic development director; Mike Sullivan, historic preservation officer; and Keith Palmquist, community development director.

"I've never worked with a finer group of people," Williams said.

HE CALLED the arrangement "an ideal marriage" between his group and a city looking to preserve an historical building.

The future museum, located at 1025 Dock Street, was originally four miles long. It served as the main terminal for the "Mosquito Fleet" of steam ships near the turn of the century.

Now it is a 45,000 square-foot building that features a 300-foot outside deck overlooking the water and two finger piers for public boating.

"On the water side, we're go-

ing to restore it just as it was at the turn of the century. We'll leave the "Tacoma Dock" lettering on the building and put our sign on top," Williams said.

OTHER RENOVATIONS include demolishing one inside wall and adding a new roof. Williams' group will rely on corporate grants to raise the estimated $2.5 million necessary for the tasks. The group currently is negotiating a 30-year lease with Tacoma officials for a "very nominal" fee, Williams said. He foresees no major difficulties in reaching an agreement. "I just can't emphasize enough how up front and square these guys have been with us," he said.

Future bright for Murphy at San Diego State

By TIM CLINTON

Steve Murphy's baseball career at San Diego State University may have had a rough beginning, but the future still looks bright for the 1988 Decatur graduate.

Murphy was set back in only the Aztecs' second intrasquad game last September, as the slick-fielding second baseman tried to chase down a fly ball in shallow right field.

He and the right fielder had not played together for long, and that led to an unfortunate accident in which Murphy broke both bones in his left arm in half.

"I dove, and it was a combination where I landed wrong and he slid into it," he said.

Two metal plates and 12 screws were put into his arm to mend the injury, and he had to miss out on practices until January.

Steve Murphy

But even with a brace and the plates and screws still in place, Murphy was able to play in 20 games this spring as a freshman.

"Spring training started in January about three days a week," he said. "But I couldn't hit the baseball to start with because of my arm."

Hitting was a problem all spring — he went 0-for-12 for the season — but he did see a lot of action on defense.

"I was a defensive replacement late in the games," he said. "Most of my at-bats were pinch hits, and I had one start. It was frustrating coming back. The game I started three of my hits were hard but they were right at people."

THE OUTLOOK for the normally-potent switch-hitter is good, however.

In July when he gets back from spending two weeks in Alaska and three days in Eastern Washington with San Diego State's summer team, Murphy will part with the plates and screws in his arm.

After undergoing the surgery in San Diego, a long recovery process is expected to have him back in form for next spring.

"I'll hit the weights," said Murphy. "The fall will be my rebuilding time, and I should be in good shape by next spring."

Murphy gets added motivation from the fact he was the team's No. 2 second baseman this year, and this year's starter has graduated.

"Next year should be good," he said. "It's there for me to have if I play like I have been."

THIS YEAR was not without its high points, however, including a television appearance on ESPN when his team visited Fresno State Feb. 19.

"That was fun, but not because of what happened," he said. "I ended up striking out, but it was fun to be there. They (Fresno State) had three draft picks off their team, so I got to see those guys. It was good to see what you need to play like to be picked to play at that level."

Murphy was able to travel with the team some this spring, although he did not join the Aztecs at the Western Athletic Conference.

"As a freshman academically, I couldn't get away," he said.

San Diego State finished second in the WAC by Brigham Young University, but wound up third in the tournament. Hawaii captured first place to claim the only automatic berth into the NCAA playoffs, and BYU got an at-large bid.

The Aztecs did not make it with their 37-25 overall record, even though they played a tough schedule and defeated Hawaii in three of four games during the regular season and beat BYU in two of four regular season games.

"We had one of the toughest schedules in the nation," said Murphy. "But even though we didn't make it, we saw a lot of nice parks and faced quality people."

Murphy's roommate at San Diego State was fellow 1988 Decatur graduate Toby Weymiller, who red-shirted with the Aztec football team this year.

"We had a lot of fun," said Murphy. "I was emotionally drained with the arm and being away from home. But school was alright. I like it a lot down there."

Weymiller catches on with Aztec football team

By TIM CLINTON

Toby Weymiller appears to be one walk-on who has caught on with the San Diego State University football team.

The 1988 Decatur High School graduate red-shirted as a freshman and played on the scout team during practices last fall, then had a chance to impress new head coach Al Luginbill at the Aztecs' recently-completed spring camp.

"The coach said he could see me contributing a lot down the road," said Weymiller, a wide receiver. "Then I could get a scholarship, but not for this fall." The numbers do seem to be in Weymiller's favor.

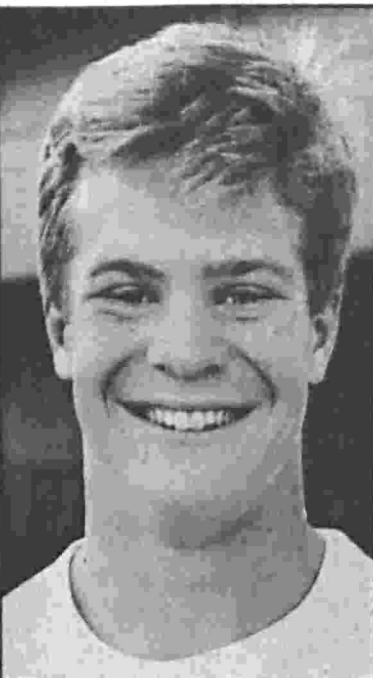

There are seven receivers on the team right now, with three incoming freshmen. The seven current receivers are all in either the senior or junior class.

"I'll be the oldest receiver on the team in two years, unless they get a junior college transfer," said Weymiller. "But the coach does not like to do that — he likes to get them as freshmen."

The first thing Weymiller had to do as a walk-on was to impress the coaching staff, and he did that this spring.

"I started to get a lot of respect. They could see I can play with these guys," he said. "I'm the only walk-on receiver left. There were a couple others, but they wound up quitting."

SPRING camp lasted for five

and a half weeks and was highlighted by the intrasquad Red and Black game, and Weymiller found the whole thing to be a learning experience.

"We had a new coach, and a new offense," said Weymiller. "So I learned a lot. The college game is so much more complicated than high school."

San Diego State's new offense is wide open, however, and is same one employed by Dennis Erickson at Washington State University in recent seasons — the run-and-shoot.

It uses a quarterback and one running back only in the backfield with three wide receivers.

"They are bringing in some coaches from Idaho, which also has the same offense," said Weymiller. "Dennis Erickson was at Idaho before he came to WSU, so we're running his offense."

Strangely enough, the Aztecs will get a chance to use that offense against Erickson, as they visit his Miami Hurricanes this fall.

As for San Diego State head coach Luginbill, he is a strong defensive coach, according to Weymiller, having served as the defensive coordinator for Arizona State University's Pac-10 championship team two years ago.

DURING SPRING camp the team's daily routine featured weight-lifting from 1-2:30 p.m. with films viewed from 2:30-3 p.m., followed by practices from 3-5 p.m.

Weymiller spent most of his practice time with the Aztecs' second team, although he did spend some time with a first unit that includes starting quarterback Dan McGwire, a junior who is the younger brother of Oakland A's baseball star Mark McGwire.

"The second team offense was not that good and every time I went out for a pass the quarterback would get sacked or something," said Weymiller. "Most of the passes I caught scrimmaging were with the first team."

Weymiller played in the Red and Black game, but did not catch a pass.

"I rotated in to play, but unfortunately it was mostly on running plays," he said. "That's just the way it worked out."

Players also had to battle the heat during practices, including unusual 100-degree weather during the first week in full pads.

"We were dying, especially me since I'm from Seattle," said Weymiller.

The weather was on Weymiller's side when not practicing, though, and with attractions like the beach 15 minutes away and Jack Murphy Stadium (home of the San Diego Padres and Chargers) 10 minutes away, it made it hard to spend time studying.

"Especially with the nice weather, you can always do something else," he said. "I had to get used to sitting down and studying. It was tough getting used to college instead of high school academically."

FOR THIS summer, Weymiller has signed on with the Federal Way Track Club to keep in shape and "keep my speed up," and he knows what his goal is for this fall.

With the Aztecs having trips scheduled to UCLA and Hawaii (where Federal Way graduate Travis Sims plays) as well as Miami, Weymiller wants to make the regular traveling team.

"The coach said I'd make the traveling team next year on one of two conditions," he said. "Either on special teams, or if someone gets hurt and I take their place."

Mavericks lose 9-1 Big League decision

The Federal Way Big League team fell to Renton II Thursday night, 9-1, to see its record slip to 1-3.

Federal Way lost to Renton I, 15-2, in its previous outing. A doubleheader against Magnolia on June 11 was postponed because of graduation and the Mavericks' contest with Renton I on Tuesday, June 13, was stopped because of rain.

Federal Way will resume Big League play this afternoon at 1 p.m. against Northshore at Federal Way High School.

"We hit the ball," said Federal Way coach John Roberts. "We hit the ball all night long. It either went in someone's glove or somebody looked in their glove and found a baseball."

Roberts mentioned one inning when Federal Way had just executed a double steal and had runners on second and third with two outs. Dave McCoy hit a ball in front of the plate that the Renton pitcher somehow got a glove on and was able to throw McCoy out.

"He had no more idea that the ball was in his glove than the man on the moon," said Roberts.

Roberts did credit Renton's pitching staff for keeping his batters "off balance" at the plate and also said the opponent played pretty well defensively. Renton also came up with timely hits to pick up the win, Roberts said.

Federal Way had all of its players back from graduation and the overall attitude of the team was good.

"We'll get it going, I don't worry about that now," he said.

Junior Feds blank Kent

The Federal Way Junior American Legion baseball team blanked Kent Security Thursday night at Russell Road, 1-0, for its fourth consecutive win.

The victory raised Federal Way's overall record and record in District 11 play to 7-3 heading into the Lakefair Tournament in Olympia on Friday.

Federal Way scored its one run on three hits and committed one error, while Kent Security had three hits and also one error.

Federal Way pitcher Daryl DeMangelaere posted his first victory of the season on the mound as he went the distance, allowing just three hits and three walks while striking out six batters.

The only offense of the game came in the top of the fourth inning. Danny Graham started the rally with a single, moved to second on a stolen base and then to third when Mike Sugg fouled out to the first baseman. Graham eventually came home to score on a wild pitch.

The game had a rather inauspicious start for Federal Way.

"We thought we were in for a long day," said Federal Way Dave Sugg.

The first batter up for Kent Security hit a double and the next batter walked. But Federal Way got out of the jam with a fly out and double play.

The win over Kent was Federal Way's second of the season. Federal Way had blanked the Kent team earlier, 2-0.

Federal Way was scheduled to play Mount Tahoma Friday and Olympia and North Thurston Saturday in the round robin Lakefair Tournament. Depending on how well the Federal Way team did, playoffs in the tournament are scheduled for today.

Tuesday, Federal Way will host Burien at Sacajawea with game time set for 8:30 p.m.

Feds win tourney opener

By TIM CLINTON
SELAH — The Federal Way American Legion baseball team opened the Mike Hagert Memorial Tournament with a 5-3 win over Olympia Friday.

Jeff Wagner threw six innings to pick up his first win of the year against no defeats, allowing three runs, one of which was unearned, and three hits. Terry Holbrook came on with two runners aboard in the seventh to shut down Olympia and earn his first save.

Federal Way drew first blood with a run in the second, as Milt DeAsis singled home Matt Wimmer, who walked.

Olympia took the lead with one run in the top of the third and another in the fifth, but the Feds went ahead to stay with three in the bottom of the fifth.

Wimmer lashed a bases-loaded single to drive in Alan Hensley and Wagner, and

Federal Way added an insurance run in the sixth, as DeAsis tripled and scored on a wild pitch.

The Feds, who stand at 9-3 overall, played host to Yakima Valley yesterday after press time and enter the final round of the tournament today.

They host Springfield, Ore., with a noon start at Decatur tomorrow.

Celebrity bowlers to roll off

On Friday, June 23, at 7 p.m. at Skyway Park Bowl in Seattle, some of the nation's outstanding professional bowlers will be teamed with area celebrities and local bowling enthusiasts to raise contributions for the Kids Bowling For Kids Village, a parental housing facility at Children's Hospital and Medical Center.

Scheduled to appear in the Celebrity Pro-Am include: professional bowlers Brian Voss of Tacoma, Wa., Pete Weber of St. Louis, Mo., Amleto Monacelli of Barquisimeto, Venezuela, Ron Palombi of Erie, Penn., Parker Bohm III of Freehold, N.J., and Tom Krites.

Also appearing from the Seattle area are celebrities Don (Slick) Watts, former Seattle SuperSonic; T. Wheedle, KOMO-TV; Robin Erickson, KZRX; Wendy Christopher, KMPS AM/FM; Bruce Murdock, KLSY AM/FM; Dick Curtis, KVI 570 AM; and Stacie Hansen, KJR 95 AM.

The $10 participants' entry fee is being donated by Skyway Park Bowl proprietor Dave Pardey to the Kids Bowling for Kids Village at Children's Hospital and Medical Center in Seattle.

Contestants who secure a minimum of $50 in contributions will have their $10 entry fee waived. A full house of 160 bowlers is anticipated.

For details and reservations to bowl in the Celebrity Pro-Am, call Skyway Park Bowl, 11819 Renton Ave. So., Seattle, at 772-1220.

Riding in style

RIVERTON RAIDERS Little League coach Marty Ireland wanted to give his players something they'd remember for the rest of their lives, so he provided his Steel Lake Minor B Division team limousine service to a tournament championship game at Stoneway Park Thursday. Here, 9-year-old Scott Miller steps out of a limousine driven by Dave Rochon of Sunset Limousine in Des Moines.

Benefit shore run scheduled July 9

Joggers and walkers will hit the shores of Lake Washington on Sunday, July 9, for the 13th annual Shore Run to benefit the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center.

The pledge race, either a 6.7-mile run or a 4-mile walk, follows Lake Washington from Seward Park to Madison Park in Seattle.

It is organized by the Hutchinson Center's Broadmoor-Washington Park Guild. Security Pacific Bank of Washington is underwriting the event.

In a new feature, corporate teams will compete in three divisions, based on company size, to raise the most money. The winner in each division will receive a trophy.

Registered participants in either the running or walking events are eligible to win a variety of prizes in a drawing following the race.

Entry forms for the Shore Run and Walk are available at local running stores, the Madison Park branch of Security Pacific Bank and the Hutchinson Center. Individual fee is $11 in advance, $13 after July 1.

For more information contact Lorene Seeley at 325-5485.

Fishing derby to be televised

Northwest Cable Sports will provide air time to the Easter Seal Society of Washington for its half-hour "Brian Millard Fish Derby" show.

The show will air six times this summer, featuring highlights of the June 10 event on Lake Washington.

Hosted by Gerry Andal, a businessman and entertainer, it features interviews with Millard and his Seahawk teammates, as well as Dave Workman, a writer for Fishing and Hunting News.

This was the first annual fishing derby organized by Millard and the Easter Seal Society to benefit disabled children, teens and adults who utilize Easter Seal's services each year in Washington.

Participants in the event were able to fish with Seahawk players and other celebrities, watch professional fishermen demonstrate their expertise and win cash and prizes. Refer to local TV listings for future air dates and times.

Honor takes George to Washington

By MELODIE STEIGER
Anna George says that by the time she got to the essay portion of the Presidential Scholar's application, she'd given all the pat answers she had to give.

"They asked so many questions that pretty soon I was reaching to think of anything to write about. If I didn't have an answer, I decided to write what I wanted to," George said.

It must have worked. The 18-year-old Federal Way High School graduate is was one of two students in Washington, and one of only 140 from across the nation, to be chosen Presidential Scholars.

Her mother, Eileen George, thinks her daughter's creativity clinched the prize. One of her answers related an imaginary conversation with "Far Side" cartoonist Gary Larson.

"The judges must have been pleased that she came up with an interesting answer, after reading all those applications," she speculated.

Maybe so, but Anna George's other accomplishments alone were probably impressive enough to earn her the trip to Washington D.C. she takes this month as a Washington Scholar. She is a crack science and math student, a classical pianist who has performed a solo recital, a member of the honor society and DECA, a high school marketing class. She is a member of the high school speech team, is active in drama and runs cross-country.

Add to that the perfect grade point average she earned at Federal Way High School the past three years.

George was asked to choose the teacher who most influenced her to accompany her to Washington D.C., where she will meet the other winners and President George Bush.

She chose Bill Harris, for three years her track coach and her first math teacher at Federal Way High School. They met when she was a junior high student commuting to the high school for trigonometry lessons.

Harris said he noticed right away the aptitude for math that helped George qualify for entry at the California Institute of Technology, where she will attend classes next year.

"I was impressed by her math ability, but also by the maturity she displayed for a student that young," he said.

"Anna works hard, and she has a desire to succeed," Harris added.

Prosecutor Downing named to superior court

By LYNN FRANCISCO
Deputy King County Prosecutor William Downing hung up the telephone. He couldn't believe what he'd just heard.

Gov. Booth Gardner had just congratulated the 39-year-old prosecutor on his appointment as a judge on the King County Superior Court.

Downing was to become one of the youngest judges on the Superior Court, and the first prosecutor in more than a decade to move directly from that office onto the Superior Court bench.

Moments later, word had spread, and the halls of the King County Prosecutor's office erupted with cheers.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT on Tuesday had been a surprise to Downing, but the legal community was neither surprised nor disappointed. Reaction was universal: he deserved it, they said.

Downing's 12 years as a Deputy Prosecutor brought him notoriety — as the prosecutor who gained convictions for all three men involved in the murders of 13 people in the Wah Mee gambling club in 1983.

But his work also brought the soft-spoken prosecutor wide respect and praise both inside and outside the legal community.

King County Councilman Greg Nickels, who wrote Gardner a letter urging Downing's appointment, called the young man "outstanding, effective, articulate...but most important, compassionate.

"HE HAS ALL the characteristics you'd want in a judge, in a position where he has to make life and death decisions," said Nickels.

Downing's boss, King County Prosecutor Norm Maleng, called Downing a role model for other prosecutors, "someone who set a standard of excellence.

"For a judge...what you are really looking for is someone who cares about others, who cares about the system, who has a sense of justice. That distinguishes an outstanding judge from a good judge," said Maleng in describing Downing.

Downing's own reaction, moments after he had talked to the governor, was to shake his head in disbelief.

"This is unbelievable. It is very humbling," he said.

While he said he is confident he can handle the job, Downing admits that he has qualms about one aspect — handing down a sentence.

"I WOULD BE lying if I didn't admit that many times I've said

(at the end of a trial) that I'm glad I don't have to make that difficult decision."

Downing said he would draw on his experience, taking into consideration "the best interest of the public as well as the victim and the victim's family" when deciding on a sentence.

Downing begins his new job on July 1. He will be the 43rd judge on the King County Superior Court.

The new judge also will have to mount a campaign to hold on to the elected position. Downing said he has not given any thought to that aspect of the job yet.

Come Sightsee In Our New Neighborhood.

Look into the future and what do you see? If a new home at The Gardens at Harbor Ridge Estates is in the picture, you'll see plenty. Including Mt. Rainier to the southeast. To the west and northwest, you'll see the Olympics towering above Puget Sound. And just to the south and west, Commencement Bay provides a sparkling mirror for the bright lights of Tacoma.

SHORTEN YOUR WORKDAY.

Look into the future and you might see a shorter commute, too. This new area has just been opened up by the Northshore Parkway. You're only minutes from downtown Tacoma, five minutes from Federal Way and ten minutes from the I-5 corridor. Major shopping and excellent schools are right nearby, too.

STEP INTO OUR GARDENS.

Even the entrance to The Gardens at Harbor Ridge is remarkable. We're putting in one of the most beautiful gardens in the Puget Sound area, complete with a perennial border, rose beds and flowering trees.

Driving Directions: From I-5, take the SW 348th St. exit (Exit #142) and drive west. Follow the arterial to Hoyt Rd. SW where it becomes Northshore Parkway. Follow signs to The Gardens at Harbor Ridge Estates.

NORTHSHORE GOLF COURSE AND OTHER FUN IDEAS.

The Northshore Golf Course is one of the more challenging and beautiful in the state. You'll also be close to Dash Point State Park and Brown's Point Lighthouse Park where you can stroll on the beach, dig clams, launch your boat or go fishing.

LOTS OF GENEROUS ROOM, TOO.

Your new home at The Gardens at Harbor Ridge Estates will be surrounded by lots averaging 9,500 square feet, far larger than other nearby neighborhoods.

Homes priced from $150,000 by - Douglas Homes - NuDawn Homes - Stewart Greacen Homes - WW Enterprises. Models Open Weekdays 2 P.M. to Dusk. Weekends Noon to Dusk.
