Teen charged in Portland gang shooting

By LYNN KEEBAUGH

A Federal Way teen-ager thought by local police to be a gang "wannabe" is accused of trying to show his colors in a drive-by shooting in Portland.

The youth, a former Decatur High School student who will turn 16 later this month, is charged with four counts of attempted murder. Portland police reports state he emptied six rounds from a .22 caliber revolver into the front porch of a northeast Portland home June 21. No one was hit by any of the shots, police said.

Portland police report the youth was driving around that night in a car with three other young men, all affiliated with the Crips gang, when they spotted four members of the rival Bloods gang on the porch. The Federal Way youth, who has been living off and on in Portland, told his companions to take him home, where he retrieved the handgun used in the attack, said Det. Bruce Sherman of the Portland Police Department.

THE CAR returned to the house, which is in a neighborhood troubled by gang activity, Sherman said, and fired all six rounds at the four men standing on the front porch. Two of those men fired back, but missed the fleeing car, he said.

The driver of the car, a 22year-old man also from Federal Way, was not arrested. He did tell police, however, that the youth bragged just before he started shooting, "Watch this. I'm going to shoot those slobs," Sherman said, reading from a police report. A slob is a derogatory term for rival gang members.

Sherman said the Federal Way youth also admitted to arresting officers that he did the Budget bonanza puzzles schools

One dead in car-ambulance collision

An 82-year-old Everett man was killed and a passenger injured Wednesday afternoon when the car he was driving was hit broadside by an ambulance.

Hersal D. Ray was turning eastbound onto Southwest 320th Street from the north side of Seventh Avenue Southwest at 2:44 p.m., and was hit broadside by the ambulance, which was headed west on Southwest 320th Street. The impact knocked Ray's 1982 Cutlass 160 feet westward on 320th. The car finally came to a stop after jumping a curb and hitting a fence.

Ray was pronounced dead at the scene, and his passenger, 66year-old Odene Reis of Auburn, was listed in satisfactory condition yesterday morning at Harborview Medical Center. The ambulance driver and crew member were treated for contusions, neck and back injuries and released from St. Francis Community Hospital Wedne-

Debate centers on multi-family housing

By KURT HERZOG

The multi-family housing issue highlights the differences between the two Federal Way City Council candidates in the Position 2 race.

Candidates Mark Freitas and Joel Marks faced off Thursday in the second of the seven debates sponsored by the chamber of commerce.

In response to questions from a panel of chamber members. Marks said the major issue in the city council campaign is the onslaught of multi-family hous-

"We have an overdevelopment of multi-family," said Marks, a pharmaceutical salesman. "We need to curtail that type of housing."

BUT WHILE Marks said the new city should cut short apartment development, Freitas said there needs to be a balance of multi-family and single-family housing and commercial development. "We need a balanced community," said Freitas, a com-mercial real estate broker. "Growth is something you can't stop. We need to balance it."

Multi-family housing is out of control in Federal Way, Freitas said, but a moratorium is not the way to solve the problem.

"I don't think putting a lid on growth is a favorable situation for the residents of Federal Way," Freitas said.

Several other questions were growth-related, including what the candidates would do about Federal Way's insufferably crowded roads.

"We need to participate in regional planning," Freitas said. "We're not just a thoroughfare for Northeast Tacoma apartments."

Freitas also said the existing King County road plan isn't a bad plan, but it hasn't been implemented. Also, he would make sure Federal Way gets its fair share of road money from the

Pond provides oasis for Texas transplant

The Federal Way News quest for "Weird Stuff" found a peaceful harbor in Charles Bond's pond.

Spanned by a wooden bridge, rippled by a water wheel and populated by four wary goldfish, the pond is a suburban oasis.

Bond agrees. "The whole at-mosphere of this house is peaceful," he said.

It's not easy to do 'Right Thing'

Film shows the dilemma, but it offers no solution

By SEAN ROBINSON

In this summer of sequels and blockbusters designed to take your money without taxing your brain, Spike Lee's "Do the Right Thing" is a welcome respite.

Perhaps it's because Lee (you may recognize him as Mars Blackman from Michael Jordan's shoe commercials) is a gifted director. He's aware of the power of symbols. He knows how to tell a story with pictures. More important, he's willing to take risks.

Best of all, he doesn't pander to his audience. So many of today's films make that mistake, giving the people what they want until they're gorged and jaded. But "Do the Right Thing" challenges its audience.

IT'S ONE of those rare movies that makes you think. But it's not a polemic or a preachy social commentary. Lee's eye is objective, and he uses timehonored techniques like irony, repetition and debate to make his points.

He offers no easy answers. "Do the Right Thing" is about racism. Lee uses humor and absurdity to treat the subject, but he does not shy away from the senseless hatred that accompanies it.

'Do the Right Thing" takes place on the hottest day of the year in the Brooklyn neighborhood of Bedford-Stuyvesant. The population is predominantly black. The center of the action is Sal's Famous Pizzeria, run by Sal (Danny Aiello) and his two sons, Vito and Pino (Richard Edson and John Torturro). Spike Lee plays Mookie, who delivers Sal's Sal, an Italian, has portraits of famous people on the wall. They are all Italians: Sinatra, De Niro, Pacino, Stallone, Travolta. A character named Buggin Out (Giancarlo Esposito) objects. Why aren't there portraits of black heroes on the wall? The clientele is all black, after all.

SAL RETORTS by saying when Buggin Out owns a pizzeria, he can put up whatever pictures he likes. Buggin, dissatisfied, tries to convince all his friends to boycott Sal's. They will have none of it. Mookie tries to dissuade Buggin Out from the boycott, unsuccessfully.

The only person who sympathizes with Buggin Out is Radio Raheem, a giant manchild who carries an equally huge portable stereo. Rap music by Public Enemy blares out at ear-splitting volume. Raheem wears brass knuckles on either hand, one saying "Love" and the other "Hate."

When Raheem brings his stereo into Sal's and refuses to turn it down, a riot ensues, and tragedy is the result. The film's transition from a rather sleepy day to a volcano of passion is shocking and powerful.

Through continual references to the heat, the use of ironic lines and asides to the audience, Lee presents a dilemma: How do we do the right thing? The character of Mookie has no answer. He is simply getting through each day until he can no longer bear inaction in the face of intolerance.

WHAT LEE does most convincingly in "Do the Right Thing" is present a no-win situation. He does not choose to end with an unrealistic message that brotherhood and holding hands will be the panacea for the problems of racism. It is a sardonic, satirical and truthful look at how such attitudes can boil over. Neither side is right. There are no good guys or bad guys. Lee only offers self-examination as a possible solution.

THE FLAWS in "Do the Right Thing are few. It's a touch too long, and has several false endings. But this is due to the difficulty of Lee's subject matter, not his lack of skill. "Do the Right Thing" is the best movie of the summer. Keep looking for Spike Lee, because at 32, he's only going to get better.

Devotees of the Dark Knight will have minor quibbles with Tim Burton's vision of the Caped Crusader, but not many. Though he's too gadget-oriented and not much of an athlete, this Batman is the grim creature of the night envisioned by his creator, Bob Kane. The effects are tremendous, and rescue a mediocre plot, highlighted by a forced and unnecessary love story. Michael Keaton brings an in teresting quirkiness to Batman's character. There may be too much of Jack Nicholson's Joker, but so what? He's brilliant. Rated PG-13. Playing at SeaTac North and South.

Unitarians bid pastor farewell

By WENDY CULVERWELL

With seven years of ministry in South King County the Rev. Gary Kowalski is by no means the area's most senior pastor.

And since he's leaving next month for a new post in Burlington, Vt., he's not going to become an old-timer here.

Despite his relatively brief tenure at the First Unitarian Universalist Church of Seattle, however, Kowalski has come to be one of the better-known ministers serving in the area.

In columns he wrote for this paper, Kowalski tackled religious intolerance by quizzing readers on basic religious facts; he jokingly tossed his hat into last year's presidential campaign; and he attacked the Rev. Jerry Falwell's assertion that America was founded as a Christian nation, using a Jeffersonian offensive.

Perhaps the most traditional role he tackled was just that - a role. He played a minister in a Gene Hackman film shot in Seattle several years ago.

His columns, and stories written about him over the years, usually drew letters to the editor from quarters that disagreed with his Unitarian theology or liberal political stands.

He accepted a call to take the reigns of the First Unitarian Universalist Society of Burlington in late June. The church has a congregation of about 430, he said.

He got a chance to meet them last month when he visited Burlington, part of the call process. Unitarian churches select their own ministers rather than have them appointed, so Kowalski feels comfortable with the deci-

The flip side is that his congregation here also considers him well-suited.

Judy Stroufe, a member and former director of religious education, had nothing but praise for the departing pastor.

"WE THINK he's a great person and a wonderful leader everything you could want in a minister," she said. And that's only a portion of what she had to say.

When Kowalski leaves, the local church still will be on its summer schedule of "lay-lead" services, which will continue until September. When it's time for a minister to take over, the Unitarian Universalist Association will provide an interim pastor for one year. That will or should - give the congregation time to form a search committee, to define what it wants in its new minister, and to conduct a nationwide search.

One thing is for sure:

"I'm sure the (new) person will be different from me,' Kowalski predicted.

He said one thing he will take with him to Vermont is a heightened awareness of environmental issues.

"There's an ecological awareness in the Northwest that has influenced me a great deal," said the eastern-educated native of Oklahoma.

LOGGING ISSUES and the Alaska oil spill (among other topics in the news) have impressed him with the need to stay concerned about the environment, be it in Western Washington or the more pastoral "Green Mountain" state, Vermont's moniker.

The mountains of Vermont hardly rival those here, and there isn't a sound to be found, but Vermont, comprised largely of farming communities, is politically progressive, and the mayor of Burlington (population 35,000) is a socialist. That political climate, combined with the Unitarian church's roots in New England, makes the denomination's presence there strong.

The meeting house of the church he will be joining was built in 1816 and is a historical landmark. It is considered one of Burlington's more distinct structures, Kowalski said.

It may not be the largest church in town, he said, but it does have history.

A going-away party for Dori and Gary Kowalski will be at 6 tomorrow night, at the First Unitarian Church, 25701 14th Place S., Kent, near Saltwater State Park.

WHEN YOU VISIT GOD'S WILDERNESS, KEEP IT CLEAN

Whenever you pay a visit to the the home of friends or relatives, you naturally remember your manners and do your best to keep the place as neat and clean as possible. By the same token, if your plans take you to a wilderness or camping area, this is also a good place to remember your manners. It's really a form of "love thy neighbor," because you do this out of consideration for others who may share the place with you. Another reason is that you are God's guest there. In any wilderness area you can see all the beauty which He has provided for your enjoyment. Think of it as an outdoor extension of your House of Worship, and respect it as you would any place where you are an invited guest. In this case, the 'guest room'' is all God's one assault at a local school. HE ALSO was apprehended June 2 at Pattison's West skate rink because he was carrying a .22 caliber handgun. The police officer confiscated the gun, but the youth broke free and escaped.

King County police were notified of the youth's arrest Monday by Federal Way School District officials, who had been contacted by Multnomah County Juvenile Court to verify information, said Lt. Max Osburn, Precinct 5 (Federal Way).

"He's a success story. Local wannabe makes good. He finally got what he wanted - prison,' Osburn said part of the "Free To Be" show.

The youth was arrested the day after the shooting by Portland police. He has not entered a plea yet, and is free. He was released to his mother, who lives in Portland, said Dan Kelley, Multonmah County deputy prosecutor.

The next court date for the youth is July 20, when the prosecutor's office and the youth's attorney will decide if they are ready to proceed with a trial, Kelley said.

The youth will be tried as a juvenile, but the prosecutor's office did consider trying him as an adult, Kelley said. He did not know what circumstances prevented him from being processed as an adult.

THE YOUTH had been a parttime special education student at Decatur High School, said Principal Duane Hammil. He had been brought up to Decatur from Lakota Junior High about November, and attended classes until April.

Hammil said school records showed the youth, who was enrolled as a sophomore, lived in Federal Way with his father and stepmother.

Osburn said the youth had been traveling between Federal Way and Portland for some time. Police had interviewed him on an unrelated incident on June 20, the day prior to the shooting, he said.

budget control was a strong selling point when he was hired here in 1987.

Then again, perhaps it's only a mirage - the district's finance department stresses that end-ofthe-year numbers are mere guesses about the final bill for the 1988-89 school year.

But it sure looks real so far. Harris says the reason for the huge leftover may be simple the 1988-89 budget, drawn up about this time last year, was an estimate of what district departments would spend. And they just didn't spend that much.

And it isn't all bad, he says. The district has in the past been forced to cut spending midway through the school year to stay in the black through August.

"I'd rather end up on this side than budget things so tightly that we find out mid-year that we can't make the budget," Harris said.

But that doesn't sit well with Bill Hansen, president of Federal Way's teachers' union.

"Teachers and students have sucked up the difference." Hansen said. "It's a crime that money should have been spent in the classroom." Expenditure totals for the 1988-89 budget won't be complete until August and so cannot be thoroughly analyzed until then. But the district's finance department figures Federal Way schools and their various supporting services will have spent $59.7 million by the end of the fiscal year on Aug. 31. A year ago, back when the district had only a guess about how much money it would get and use, the Federal Way School Board OK'd the spending of $61.7 million in 1988-89, including $750,000 to be left over for 1989-

The fiscal planning department now projects the district will have had $62.1 million to spend in the past year. The difference between $62.1 million in revenue and $59.7 million in spending: $2.4 million.

Harris said future budgets will be fine-tuned to avoid similar miscalculations.

But still, it's nice to have $2.4 million for use in the coming year.

"The money isn't just being left on the table," he said. For related story, see page A-7

Altogether, their performances will add up to "Free To Be," a summertime stage revue presented July 28 and 29 by Puget Sound Musical Theatre and the Federal Way School District.

More than 50 area students, ages 8 to 13, paid $125 to join what is the equivalent of summer stock in Federal Way, They help erect scenery and learn about acting, dancing and teamwork in the five weeks that lead up to their class "final," the play. Their past theater experience is varied — many young cast members of "Free To Be" have never been on stage before, said production director Lanie McMullin.

"But I've given these kids more difficult staging than I've ever given adults, and they never question it," McMullin said. "They hang upside down, climb on blocks, roll around the stage...If I told adult actors to do any of that, they'd think I was crazy."

On the other hand, stagework is love and life to coordinators of the program, including McMullin, choreographer Mayme Paul Thompson, music director Dick Dilley and artistic director Mary Jean McDonald.

Besides their own individual experiences, the foursome worked together on Puget Sound Musical Theatre's most recent production, "Carousel."

The theater company and school district have teamed up for summer stock once before, ending classes with a full-scale production of "Peter Pan." The springtime run of "Carousel" was incentive to give summer stock another whirl, said McMullin.

"We had 70 kids try out for 10 parts in 'Carousel,'" she said. "It was easy to see that there's an interest."

"Free To Be" is a modified version of "Free To Be...You And Me," an esteem-promoting book and play by actress Marlo Thompson. This version will have bits of children's writers Judith Viorst and Shel Silverstein tossed in, to ensure all 50plus kids a moment on stage.

McMullin promises all the shuffling, singing and stagework will culminate in an upbeat show.

"We won't be ready until the very last day, but we will be ready," she said.

"Free To Be" will be staged July 28 at 7 p.m. and July 29 at 2 and 7 p.m. at Totem Junior High, 26630 40th Ave. S. Tickets are $2 adults, $1 seniors and children at the door.

Proposed budget would boost after-school bus runs

By MELODIE STEIGER

It doesn't include as much as he'd like, but Superintendent Richard Harris says a proposed $68.9 million operating budget for the coming school year would fulfill some wishes.

It would add money for transportation home from afterschool activities for junior high students, for instance. It would help beef up the counseling staff at local elementary schools, and would make drug and alcohol abuse assessments for students available at all five local junior

"It doesn't do everything we'd like it to do, but there's never enough in the budget for that," Harris said. "We feel that with the funds available, however, we've done a fairly good job."

Counselors and after-school transportation address the Federal Way School District's desire to help curb problems for at-risk students, Harris added, the former by providing extra guidance at school and the latter by making healthy activities available to all.

Hand-in-hand with transportation, he said, would come support for those after-school activites, although no dollar amount has yet been set.

"We will explore that - all kinds of things can be done," Harris added.

THE SCHOOL district now employs two full-time counselors for its 16 elementary schools. Extra money for staffing in 1989-90 would provide an undetermined number of additional counselors.

Also new to the budget would be $50,000 for transportation of gifted students to GATE (Gifted and Talented Education) classes. To date, parents of gifted students have had to provide their children's transportation to the few schools that provide such classes.

Professional drug and alcohol assessment for students was deemed a success when it was tried at Illahee Junior High in the 1988-89 school year. An extra $20,000 would make assessments available at all five junior highs next year.

The proposed budget also would provide some new features already approved by the Federal Way School Board, such as new textbooks in several programs and a fine arts coordinator for all schools. The texthooks recently were purchased for $675,000, and Seattle resident Linda Gohlke was hired for the fine arts job at $38,277 per year. BUT AT THIS point, few elements of the budget are as certain as those two items. The state money that makes up the bulk of the district's revenue will rise with the expected influx of 400 new students here next year, but no one knows just how many new students will come and likewise no one knows how much more money that will mean until school starts in fall.

Also, the school district has not yet received the federal grants it hopes to eventually receive to carry on some pro-

And even if the $68.9 million in anticipated revenues were already in hand, the school board has until the end of the fiscal year, Aug. 31, to hash out the particulars of how to spend it. Board members could still refigure the funding for some line items included in the fourpage proposal.

Some board members stated Monday night that increasing teachers, in kindergarten through third grade is their top priority for the coming year.

'What the community really wants is lower class size...If they don't see it, they won't be content," said board member Gail Pierson.

Class size for kindgergarten and first grades is now restricted to 30 or less, and the district average for those grades is about 24 or 25 students per class, said Dolores Gibbons, assistant superintendent for elementary education. Thirty students per class is the buildingwide average for second through sixth grades, which allows some classes to be much higher than 30 and some much

A single teacher in junior high or high school can have classes of up to 34 students before getting a teacher's aide to help out.

Harris stated that additional teachers for younger students are included in the proposed budget. But the district does not yet know how many teachers it can afford, and, "We haven't figured out where we're going to put them yet," Harris added.

THE $69.5 MILLION the district figures it will have available is made up of state and federal funds, plus $2.4 million left over from last year's $61.7 million spending plan.

Spending $68.9 million next year would leave $600,000 in reserve, available for the 1990-91 school year. That's far short of the 3 percent reserve, or $2.1 million, Harris would like to have remaining.

The proposed budget also includes $250,000 in contingency funds, available in case of unforeseen expenses. That is likewise far short of the 2 percent, or $1.4 million, of the budget Harris would like to have available in the coming year.

"You have to start looking at your priorities now, though," Harris said. "You have to ask which is more important, building up (contingencies and reserves) or addressing program needs."

Fifty years of hard work and we're right back where we started.

What you see here are some trees in western Washington that we've been raising for the past fifty years.

Fifty years ago, forest management was a pretty radical idea.

But we knew then, as we know now, that trees are a renewable resource.

The result: Today we have a plentiful supply of second-growth timber that is made into pulp, paper, building materials and other wood products you use every day.

This newspaper, for example.

Our job in the meantime will continue to be growing trees.

Last year, we planted over 13 million seedlings on Weyerhaeuser land here in Washington State. And sold an additional 20 million seedlings to both public and private organizations.

Look at it this way. In fifty years, we'll be right back where we started. Again.

The "Footsore" series is a group of four books that seem to list every conceivable day hike in Puget Sound. Footsore 1, 2, 3 and 4 offer up a remarkable selection of outings, both for the avid hiker and the Sunday walker.

The "Footsore" books, as well as another series entitled "Trips and Trails," are published by the Mountaineers, a for-profit book publisher that spends its proceeds on the non-profit Mountaineers Club. All Mountaineers titles must conform to the club's motto: ... "to explore, study, preserve and enjoy the natural beauty of the outdoors ... "

Started years ago

Manning and his trail buddy photographer Ira Spring are major figures in Northwest hiking and protecting the environment. It was Manning who was the editor of the Mountaineers Club's first book, a climbers' handbook that later became known as "the Bible" for mountaineering.

The club, which was founded in 1906, went into the publishing business in 1961. In the late 70s. Manning began writing his Footsore series as a way of reducing congestion on some of the most popular trails in the Puget Sound area. He reasoned that hikers would move on to try other trails if only they knew about them.

The first book covered the Seattle-Tacoma area. Soon, a second book reviewed trails north of Seattle and then Footsore 3 featured trails in Northwest Washington. Finally, the fourth book looked at the trails from Bremerton to Olympia. All of the books are frequently updated. In fact, 3 and 4 are currently out of stock so they can be

Trips and trails

E.M. Sterling has written two each reviewing family camps, short hikes and view roads around the Cascade Mountains. So, while Footsore books are mainly for hikers, Trips and Trails books use the same approach for campers, vacationers, and Sunday drivers as well as hikers.

Trips and Trails 1 covers the North Cascades, 2 outlines Mt. Rainier and the South Cascades. Both books are in their third printing and include updates on various campsites, trails, access roads and vistas.

Sterling is a Seattle freelance author who lives on a houseboat. He has written a camping column for the Seattle Times and, like Manning, is well-known for his environmentalist views.

The Mountaineeers

Publicist Tish Thornton explained that the Mountaineers books cover a broad range of outdoor activities including hiking, biking, cross-country skiing, snowshoeing, paddling and mountain climbing.

"But I should point out that all of our books are on non-motorized subjects," said Ms. Thornton. "The subject has to be environmentally safe."

With the club's 11,000 members, there is a ready market for many of the titles offered by the publishing company. About 16 new books are offered each year - eight in the spring, eight in the fall - most coming from unsolicited manuscripts. The books are distributed both regionally and nationally.

New this year is a book on 500 waterfalls throughout the Northwest. Also coming out is "Fragile Majesty," a book on what's happening to the national forests, and "Crystal Horizon," about a solo climb of Mount Everest. And Mountaineers books aren't necessarily restricted to the Northwest, as evidenced by the new title "Bicycle Touring in New Zealand."

Federal Way team takes third at regionals

By CHUCK MINGORI

The Washington state champion Silver Bullet boys' soccer team went to the 1989 Far West Regionals looking to gain some respect, and came home with a third-place trophy to boot.

The Silver Bullet won its first game by a forfeit and then added three straight victories to reach the semifinals.

In preliminary games, the Silver Bullet knocked off Hawaii, 3-2, Nevada, 4-3, and Idaho, 3-0. The forfeit came at the hands of Wyoming. The Silver Bullet's only loss was by a 3-0 margin to Colorado.

"You have to earn respect and Regionals, concentrating on soc-

I think going down there (to Pleasanton, Calif.) we earned respect for Washington state,' said Silver Bullet coach Jerry Capodanno.

The Washington state boys' U-12 champions tuned up for Far West Regionals by playing an exhibition game against a national team from Thailand.

The Silver Bullet also took first place in the Viking Cup at Poulsbo before heading to California for the June 16-20 regional tourney.

The Silver Bullet worked extremely hard in the weeks leading up to the Far West cer and participating in fundraising events.

"I made sure they all did something for the fund-raisers," said Capodanno, explaining he wanted all the team members to feel like they were part of it.

Parents also pitched in on the fund-raising. They held a 15family garage sale and worked at the concession stands in the Kingdome during Mariner games and the Final Four. The players also took part in a candy sale and a Dribble-A-Thon to

The first goal was set up on passing from Jeffrey Louwsma to Jeremy Capodanno back to Mullner, then Louwsma passed to Jerry Capodanno, who crossed it to Adkins for the second goal. Mullner tallied his second goal of the game on a kick from LeProwse.

As winners of its division, the Silver Bullet went into the semifinals before suffering its only loss of the tournament against Colorado. The team was presented with a third-place trophy and each team member

"It's a hard game to lose, but we can't worry about it," said Howard. "We're just going to come back and try to take two on Sunday."

Federal Way will travel to Newport High School for a doubleheader against Bellevue that gets underway at 1 p.m.

Pattison's West team Texas-bound

By CHUCK MINGORI

When Cori Chapman first began roller skating, she looked up to some of the older skaters at the rink as role models.

Now, nine years later, Chapman is a role model to the younger skaters at Pattison's West Skating Center, and what a role model she has been.

"You have to set a good example," said Chapman, who has done just that. "I think of all of them as being my sisters, honestly. If they weren't around me, I don't know what I'd do. They mean that much to me, they really do."

Chapman is the oldest of six Pattison's West freestyle skaters who have qualified to nationals in Forth Worth, Tex.

Freestyle skaters do the exact same kind of maneuvers that ice skaters do, only on roller skates. They perform routines to music, complete with difficult jumps and spins, in front of judges.

Chapman, 18, competes in the World Class division. She has been to seven previous national competitions, although she missed last year's journey to Lincoln, Neb., because she had mononucleosis.

Chapman, a 1989 graduate of Auburn High School who won the talent portion of the Miss Auburn Scholarship Pageant with a stand-up comedy routine, placed first at regionals and was holding down third through eliminations in the 1987 nationals before placing sixth.

If she finishes first, second or third at nationals this year, Chapman will qualify to the World Championships in Italy. But Chapman is just now returning from an ankle injury she suffered during a fall that kept her out of competition for more than two months. It's only been the last couple of weeks that she has been able to skate hard.

'My goal is I want to be the World Champion, and I'd like to do that by next year or the year after," she said.

Chapman said she hopes to make the World team this year, but after knee surgery and then the torn ligaments in her ankle, she realizes that probably is out of her reach.

"This year I'm hoping to make seventh, that will be realistic for this year," Chapman said.

Chapman compliments the younger girls she skates with at Pattison's West Skating Center for putting out the extra work.

"Every one of the girls that skates here wants to do it," she said. "When you want something bad enough, you just do it. It becomes natural.

"I have never worked with a group of girls who have worked so hard, especially when they're at the age they are. When they're here, they put 100 percent into it."

Chapman and the other five girls qualified to the nationals in Fort Worth, Tex., on Aug. 4-12 after placing at the Northwest Regional Championships in Portland, Ore., June 24-26.

SARA PETITE, 14 of Lake Tapps, captured first place at regionals in the freshman girls' sngles event. Petite has been skating for four years and has gone to regionals every year. This is her second trip to nationals.

Petite got started skating after watching Chapman, who plans to attend Green River Community College and then enter television broadcasting at Washington State University.

"I started because I was watching Cori and I wanted to be like her," she said. "I didn't know her, I just had seen her skate."

Petite said that her jumps have improved the most this

"This year I'm more consistent," she said. "My jumps aren't as shaky.' BECKY SWOVELAND, 12, captured third place in elementary girls freestyle competition at regionals. Swoveland will attend Lakota Junior High School next year and is making her second trip to nationals. Swoveland placed 27th at nationals in 1987 at Lincoln, Neb.

Her goal this year is "to try to make it in the top 10," she said.

Swoveland also will be going to the Olympic Training Center along with Chapman and Petite in November. Skaters had to be at least 12 years of age and place in the top three at regionals in order to go.

Swoveland has been to four regional competitions with her first coming in 1985.

Swoveland became interested in skating through a fellow team member. Swoveland's mother, Diane, was helping Sue Lapthorne, a friend from church, make a regional dress for her daughter April when she found out about roller skating. Also, her doctor had told her that she should try either ice skating or roller skating, because she is pigeon-toed.

APRIL LAPTHORNE, 10, claimed second at regionals in the juvenile girls singles event. She will be making her third trip to nationals, having finished in a tie for 19th in her first one and then ninth in her second.

"I'm hoping to make finals in nationals," said Lapthorne, who explained that she missed making finals by only two places a year ago. "This year I'm trying to get into the final events.'

Lapthorne, who has been skating for seven years and also plays soccer for the Totem Travelers, looks up to Chapman.

"When I get about Cori's age, I'd like to make it on the World team."

RACHEL SWOVELAND, 9, took first at regionals this year in her last season of primary juvenile. Rachel has gone to six regionals and is making her third trip to nationals. Rachel captured 23rd in one national event for freestyle competition and also advanced there as a speed skater.

Her goal this year?

"Just to make it in finals," she Rachel has quite a streak going this year. She's placed first in all six meets the team has participated in. Rachel will be a fourth-grader at Lake Grove. KRISTIE TWEDT, 11, will be a sixth-grader at Brigadoon. She placed first in the juvenile girls divisions at regionals and will be making her fourth trip to nationals. Kristie, who has been skating for five years, said her goal at nationals this year is to 'get close to finals."

And what does she like most about skating?

"Going to the meets and the competition," she said.

Pattison's West freestyle skating team, which is coached by Janet Pattison, will be performing an exhibition from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m. at Pattison's West on Sunday, July 23. The public is invited to attend at no charge.

Super Summer volleyball team shines at Alki Beach tourney

By LISA PLUNKETT

The Super Summer volleyball team went undefeated at Saturday's Nordstrom/Quiksilver tournament at Alki Beach and won the Open Division Championship.

Team AVQ, the challengers, lost to Super Summer by the scores of 11-6 and 11-8 in the best-of-three series. Super Summer, whose players come from around Seattle, showed its experience with volleyball by executing its blocks perfectly, and then laying back, letting AVQ beat itself.

The beach game fit Super Summer's style.

"Blocking is a big factor in the beach game," said George Hoder, who plays for Super Summer. "It's harder to hit and

AVQ, another Seattle-area team, was just happy to be in the finals. "I'm really happy we made it to the finals," said Brian Baggett. "We had hard teams to play against, but we hustled and had team adrenaline carry us through the entire tournament."

The tournament consisted of 33 novice teams, 21 coed teams, and 10 teams from the Open Division, the highest caliber play. The players who participated in the tournament were amateurs out for recreation. Players came from as far away as Tacoma and Spokane. Nordstrom's Brass Rail department sponsored the event for the third year in a row. The $1,300 raised from the tournament is going to help with drug abuse education in local high schools.

The only all-women's team in the competition made it to the quarter finals in the singleelimination novice class competition.

"We did great," said Julie Blakney, a player on the team. "People even came over to root for us against the men," she

Aside from a litter problem at the end of the tournament, event organizers, participants and bystanders agreed the tournament was a success.

"It was great," said Wayne Fergusson, a police officer overseeing the event. "Only one can of beer (confiscated) and no disturbances during the entire

Centennial Walk set for July 29

Walkers of all ages may want to make their calendars for the Centennial Walk, slated for Saturday, July 29, at Mount Rainier National Park and featuring honorary event director, Lou Whitaker, worldrenowned mountain climber.

The walk, based on the European concept of volkssporting, begins at 7 a.m. in Longmire at the National Park Inn. Walkers can choose the 10-kilometer walk or the 20-kilometer walk.

The finish time for either walk is no later than 5 p.m. Walkers are advised to bring their own

A larceny victim made up for one judgment error by using some quick thinking to help apprehend the thieves a short time

A Des Moines woman told King County police she had gone into a shop in Hillside Plaza at 4:30 p.m. Monday, leaving her purse in the car and her door unlocked.

When she came out 15 minutes later, she discovered someone had stolen her purse and an outfit she had purchased at the Bon. The woman, a Bon employee at a different location, went to the SeaTac Mall Bon to report the loss in case the thieves tried to return the outfit for a refund.

While she was in the store, a clerk notified the woman that two people, a man and a woman, had the outfit at her counter and were trying to get a

They were arrested for possession of stolen property and the woman recovered her outfit and her purse.

Store door bashed in early break-in

A West Campus music store was broken into Monday morning, probably in broad daylight.

King County police report an officer drove by West Campus Music Center at about 7:30 a.m. and noticed nothing out of the ordinary. But at 8 a.m. a woman arriving at work in a neighboring suite discovered the store's glass door broken.

No one heard or saw anything suspicious, police said, and the amount of the loss was unknown at the time of the report.

Pen pals meet amid patriotic hoopla

Jean Thomas wanted to find out how somebody in a different part of the world lived.

"But I never thought I'd be coming here," says the 71-year-old Thomas, a Londoner who set foot on American soil for the first time last week. "But I always wanted a pen pal, so I just wrote."

Esther Knell, from Des Moines wrote back. Several times. After three years of letter writing and fuzzy overseas telephone conversations, the pen pals met face to face for the first time last week.

They were brought together through Penpals, an international organization founded in 1932. For $8, anybody can find a long-distance friend with similar interests.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Knell and Thomas say the money's well worth it.

"I have four or five pen pals in Australia and one in New Zealand," Thomas says. "I have one in Grants Pass, Ore. Very often, you write what you won't say. You get to know a person very well."

FOR THE MONTH of July, Knell and Thomas will get to know each other a little better.

For Thomas, coming to America is like a hands-on history lesson. For those who come in contact with her, Thomas is a link to a world most people only read about.

She can see Westminster Abbey, Big Ben and Parliament from the balcony of her eighthfloor, northwest London apart-

She lives on Edgecliff Road, a street she says the Romans built in 54 A.D.

"It's the old Roman Wattling Street," she says. "When they came to Britain, they built a road from the coast to Scotland. It's a very historical place."

Thomas has found America to be a very patriotic land. The Assembly of God Patriotic Program at the Puyallup Fair almost brought tears to her

"At home, yes, we stand for the anthem, but we don't pledge the flag," she says. "When everybody was singing, I thought I ought not to be here. I felt like a spy. I was afraid somebody would poke me and tell me to sing the anthem."

THE BEHAVIOR of the crowd surprised her, too. In Britain, crowds tend to "be much more Knell has a full slate of sightseeing activities planned for her new friend.

They've already visited Victoria and Vancouver, British Columbia. "I'm not so far from home after all," Thomas laughs.

Next week, Knell plans a party with Thomas as her guest of

"What do you do when you're a guest of honor?," Thomas asks. "My daughter told me to write to the Queen Mother and ask to borrow a hat."

But that's next week. For now, Thomas just wants to buy a lottery ticket.

"Britain tried to start one a year ago, but it failed," she says. "Wouldn't that be something to strike it rich in
