Class move University branches blossom

By LAURA
LUPPINO-WARREN

To Judy Linn, a college degree could mean moving up the corporate ladder of success.

For nearly 10 years, Linn, a 50-year-old Federal Way resident, designed tools for Boeing. With an engineering degree, she could move from a technical job into a professional position where women are in demand. Linn attends Highline Community College and plans to transfer to a four-year university soon.

The same ambition drives Kelly Lenihan, but for different reasons.

After working downtown for many years, Lenihan, 32, is plain disgusted with clerical jobs. She wants a good-paying professional job so she can comfortably support her child. As a Ballard resident, she commutes to HCC but will transfer to the University of Washington this fall. She hopes the UW business school will admit her, but she knows the competition is stiff.

Linn and Lenihan are just two of many students in the Puget Sound area who are going back to school to get bachelor's degrees. Community colleges are a stepping stone, as they offer lower-division and vocational classes. But getting the last two year's worth of credits to complete a bachelor's degree can be tough these days. With tight admission standards, time-consuming commutes and few evening classes, many find such degrees an impossible dream.

BRANCH UNIVERSITY campuses in Seattle's growing suburbs may be the answer for such students, and the UW will be able to provide that answer next year with a branch in Tacoma.

Not everyone is sold on the branch campus idea, but it's an attractive alternative to others.

Linn supports the branch campus concept and believes it will help many students.

Family man must juggle kids, campaign

By LYNN FRANCISCO

It can be difficult to talk with David Miller.

One minute the novice politician and young father is brainstorming imaginative ways to improve the quality of life in King County. The next minute, he's chasing his 18-month-old daughter as she stubbornly heads into the street.

She's a determined toddler, and it's clear where she got her determination.

Her father's tenacity has propelled him headlong into an uphill race against veteran King County Councilman Paul Barden.

MILLER, A 33-YEAR-OLD Normandy Park househusband with three small children, is providing the spice in what had promised to be a dull race for County Council District 7.

Republican Barden has held the seat for 16 years and, until Miller appeared, was assumed to have a free ride into another four-year term.

But on the last day of filing, July 28, Miller gathered up his three children, marched into the county elections office and signed up as a Democrat.

"Paul Barden has been in a

Miller, Piquette battle for water/sewer district seat

By KURT HERZOG

Federal Way Water and Sewer District commissioners Don Miller and Bob Piquette come from different ends of the pipe, you might say.

Miller was a commissioner for Water District 124 and Piquette was a commissioner with the Lakehaven Sewer District when the two districts merged in 1985 to become the Federal Way Water and Sewer District.

Since then, the district's board has been evolving into a three-member board as terms expire. Miller and Piquette are both up for election this fall and both want the one vacant seat on what will then be a three-member panel.

The two commissioners will go head-to-head in the Nov. 7 general election. There will be no primary election for the district, because only Piquette and Miller filed.

Besides their obvious differences in the functions of the boards for which they were originally elected, there are strong differences between the candidates' priorities, working styles and personalities.

Miller, 52, is an insurance and financial services adviser affiliated with Prudential. He is also an active Kiwanian and said he has more contacts in the community than Piquette.

Felix fights county rodents

By LYNN FRANCISCO

The King County parking garage in downtown Seattle is the last place you'd expect to find a fat, friendly black cat.

But Sgt. Felix, Rat Patrol, is no ordinary indolent kitty.

He's a first-rate mouser, who's lived in the garage for 3½ years, keeping the parking area and auto maintenance shop free of unwanted rodents.

Before Felix came to stay, auto parts manager Billie Shantz used to dread what she would find when she opened up the maintenance shop in the morning.

"EVERY DAY WHEN I came to work there would be a pile of mouse and rat droppings where we kept the auto parts. We'd even find them in the lunchroom. It was awful," she says.

Advocates unsnarl court for abused

By MELODIE STEIGER

Anne Anthony hasn't finished college, but she figures she's already earned her diploma — in the form of a protection order, designed to keep her former husband at bay.

Anthony calls the order her diploma because she learned plenty to obtain it. She learned about the violent man she had chosen to marry, and about her own strength.

She learned about spouse abuse, something she had suffered first-hand but had been too crushed to see.

And the Federal Way resident learned to flee, and maybe to start over again. That, she says, she learned from DAWN, South King County's Domestic Abuse Women's Network.

DAWN's support groups made clear to her the danger of living with a man obsessed with control, who keeps loaded weapons stashed in the house and is well-known to police for his criminal activity.

DAWN's legal advocacy program then provided help at the courthouse, where Anthony received a court order and then

Community council votes to back open space bond

By KURT HERZOG

The Federal Way Community Council voted unanimously Thursday to support the $117 million King County open space bond.

The bond includes $5.3 million in open space for the Federal Way area. The King County Council unanimously approved the bond issue Monday. It will go before voters in the Nov. 7 election and requires 60 percent approval.

Some community council members had been concerned that the list of seven open space parcels in Federal Way might be changed or dropped if any of those parcels won't be sold by their current owners or if county appraisals are too low.

However, county staff quoted a section from the proposed bond ordinance that stipulates that any plans to spend money on other parcels must first be approved by a citizens oversight committee.

THE ORDINANCE is in response to concerns from residents who live east of Interstate 5, outside of the soon-to-be city limits of Federal Way. Eastside residents were concerned that two parcels on the eastside might be dropped without notice.

However, the ordinance states that those parcels must be replaced with "suitable substitute projects that appropriately serve the same populations as these projects before considering the reprogramming of the funds."

Watchdogs show teeth to builders

Citizen watchdog groups usually are all bark and no bite. But don't try to tell that to a quartet of developers who recently felt the teeth of DIRE to the tune of $41,000. That's how much money the developers of four local apartment complexes offered to contribute to the Federal Way School District if DIRE (Development Impact Resistance Exercise) dropped its appeal of their projects. Some might brand DIRE's tactics extortion, and school officials are feeling a little used because they weren't consulted by DIRE before the tentative agreements were announced. We're still impressed with DIRE's efforts, though, and are happy to see the pendulum of progress swing in a slightly new direction. For years King County has been taking out a giant rubber stamp and giving most every apartment project proposed here its particular form of blessing: "No EIS Needed." DIRE is simply trying to do what the county should have been doing a better job of all along — persuading, or if necessary forcing, developers to pay their fair share for improving the roads, schools and parks their projects will affect.

We appreciate good one-liners

In the news business, you learn to count on certain people to make outrageous comments. Even when a sensational statement fails to make its way into the story, at least it keeps the reporter awake. Our favorite zinger of recent days came from community activist Dick Burris, long known for having a sharp tongue and little inclination to bite it. During last week's chamber of commerce debate between Pos. 5 candidates Jim Handmacher and Bob Wood, the candidates were asked how the new city should regulate massage parlors and topless nightclubs. As the red-faced candidates tip-toed through bland answers, Burris piped up with a question of his own. "You going to hire inspectors?" he inquired in a hopeful voice.

I left my heart (it's stuck in traffic) in Federal Way

Among the characteristics of a great city, one is a song dedicated to the city.

Often these songs will suggest that the singer has dunked his head into a bucket of syrup for 20 minutes, and cannot quite see the city as it is. When Sinatra sings about Chicago, we get the impression that he and his pals have lived in hotel saloons, leaving only now and then to make an appearance in Las Vegas.

Or the song will turn the pages of a scrapbook, shining a brief spotlight on some city's warless face. That's the feeling you get, hearing Tony Bennett warble about San Francisco. He says it puts Paris to shame. It makes the glory that was Rome dead as Latin. It is fine with me if a singer wants to exaggerate. But a city has a tough time living up to the hyperbole. Why can't we have a song that tells the truth, so that visitors will know what to expect?

I have tried to apply this to Federal Way, where the city barely has its beak out of the shell. If I write a song about the place, I'd make sure I mentioned the views of Mount Rainier, and the sunsets over the sound.

To give it flavor and texture, I'd drop in the names of a couple of major landmarks — maybe the exotic dancing club that just reopened (as Deja Vu) on Pacific Highway, or the old Star Lake Fire Station, an original hot spot.

It isn't easy putting flavor and texture into a song about a city that hasn't even had a mayor die in office, like Chicago has. Unlike New York City, we've never appointed a former beauty queen to a high post where she could then be accused of influence peddling.

I don't have much to work with. I suppose I could put in something about all the great soccer players around here, but then it might sound like a pep rally.

Songs about big cities usually include a reference to the night life. In Federal Way, that would mean a trip to the 7-Eleven for orange juice.

A big-city song typically talks about places where you meet a lot of women. Around here, I guess that means Sears, or maybe the Hallmark store on Father's Day.

I could quickly compose — but who would sing — a song about gridlock on I-5, moonlight sales at the mall, or getting a free pizza because the guy took 32 minutes.

These are not the nitty and gritty of a song about a city. I may have to stifle my impulse. That's unfortunate, because we clearly need a rousing tune.

I realized this lately when I attended a dedication of the new county park at Palisades. Paul Barden was there. Jean Marie Brough was there. Peter von Reichbauer was there. So were a number of city council candidates and leading citizens.

I could see they all felt uneasy. They shuffled around while some formal words were spoken. They warmed up briefly when we said the Pledge of Allegiance.

But imagine someone stepping out of the crowd to say,

"Well, I think this is an appropriate time to sing the Federal Way song, and I'd like you to join me."

And then they'd launch into it, their faces a little foolish-looking at first, but then getting the spirit, realizing that a city is a fine thing to sing about, especially if you've spent enough time making it into the kind of place you want to remember when you are old enough to consider reminiscing.

In that spirit, I offer the first two lines, to be completed over the next two decades:

Oh we came out west to see some friends one day... And we stumbled on a place called Federal Way...

You'll have to finish the song yourself. I know I can count on you.

Ring road isn't the path to solving traffic problems

Editor: A recent guest editorial on transportation issues ("July 9, "Road projects grinding to a halt") showed some confusion on behalf of the author.

I believe the author might have been absent when some of the public came to the Federal Way Chamber of Commerce meetings in 1988. The confusion is mainly in regard to Southwest 344th Street and its importance to the future of Federal Way. I believe there is also confusion by several advocates for a proposed "ring road" that would run from South 312th to South 320th.

When discussions of the ring road began in 1988, some leaders of the chamber's Transportation Committee began promoting the ring road around the Federal Way Shopping Center. The road had been in our community plan since the 1970s and several of the members of the committee thought that now was the time for the new shortcut.

They quickly convinced Paul Barden that plans to develop Southwest 344th Street be put on the back burner and the proposed budget for the road be used to study the ring road. That was when the anxiety of all of the residents from Eighth Avenue South to Pacific Highway South between South 312th and 320th streets began. The county began studying what routes would be best for the ring road, whose homes would be removed and which businesses would be terminated. Nothing destroys the quality of life in any community more than the county or the — God forbid — new city studying whether to take away the residents' homes. Nothing is more frightening to an established business than the threat to demolish their building.

Yet even with vocal and determined local opposition, the most vocal of the committee continued to insist on encouraging the approximately $4 million project. Even when the county's own study showed that the expenditure would be of little or no value in solving traffic problems, our local activists are still promoting the project to the detriment of Southwest 344th.

For those who don't know, Southwest 344th is designed to alleviate traffic congestion at Southwest 336th Street and 21st Avenue Southwest. It would serve as a bypass for the thousands of new and older residents who live east and south of Southwest 344th Street and 21st Avenue Southwest. It is also designed to make development of that area more orderly and efficient. It would also be a helpful access to a new proposed park in the area.

Our community has suffered through many years of poor planning by King County. Finally they are willing to put in a major arterial before the area becomes a mass of crooked cul-de-sacs adding only to the existing congestion in Federal Way.

We must plan ahead and, sometimes, spend money ahead of development to avoid the problems we have encountered in the past. Blocking planning and sensible improvements serves only as a detriment to our future.

And what about the future? What happens if we try to put in a road in the vicinity of Southwest 344th after it is developed? Then we have to take out more homes and destroy more lives in the process. In fact, we would end up with the same problems that not delaying the ring road has caused. Not only do we disturb the tranquility of life in our community, but the cost of making the improvements doubles or triples.

The ring road, under the current county standards, is not practical because it was not installed prior to development. The new city will have the option to encourage land swaps and to encourage business support and even to develop more reasonable standards for the road. It will have the opportunity to have public hearings to decide if the public really supports the road.

Meanwhile, the use of county funds to build Southwest 344th should be encouraged. We must encourage the county to do all it can prior to dumping us on our own. Killing capital projects that the county is willing to fund is a poor way to go.

Realtors don't deserve blame for growth

Editor: I don't understand Mr. Jack Ellison's choosing to blast only two of the five candidates that the Seattle-King County Association of Realtors (SKCAR) endorsed (Aug. 2, "Developers' donations should be shunned").

I also would like to inform an obviously uninformed Ellison that all the candidates who were running for the city council were invited to meet with the SKCAR for our endorsement and all but two of the field of 36 candidates were interviewed (not bad participation, Mr. Ellison).

I do not believe Mary Gates, who is one of the best qualified candidates running for the city council, expressed the opinion that she is for rapid apartment growth. She has expressed strongly that she is for controlled growth, as we all are. Why is Ellison singling out

Campuses will bring university closer to home

"I think any way you can get education available to people is a good idea," she said.

Bob Green, president of the Greater Federal Way Chamber of Commerce, anticipates the Tacoma branch campus will be an asset to the community.

"Overall, the idea of a branch campus is very attractive and positive. It's a big plus for the community and for economic development and provides opportunities for people to increase skills, general knowledge and makes them more marketable," he said.

In the fall of 1990, the UW will open temporary branch campuses at as-yet undecided sites in Tacoma and Bothell, offering bachelor's and master's degrees. Each campus will serve nearly 400 students.

By the year 2010, the UW expects the Tacoma branch to enroll 5,000 upper-division (third- and fourth-year) students and 1,000 graduate students. The Bothell branch will serve close to 4,000 upper-division and 800 graduate students.

THE TACOMA AND BOTHELL campuses may be especially attractive to people with children and full-time jobs. The branches will be closer for commuters, admission standards will be looser than at the main UW campus, and evening and Saturday morning classes may be more convenient.

"They are designed to serve students whose time is at a premium. Our goal is to pay attention to access and make it doable," said Donna Kerr, newly promoted dean of the UW's branch campuses. Most of the students will be in their mid-30s and working full-time, she predicted.

Lori Sachs, a 28-year-old Burien resident who studies dental technology at HCC, also believes the UW branches will succeed.

"They will work because most people like myself, in their late 20s, will apply themselves. They have a goal and they are willing to work for it," she said.

While the branch campuses are a great idea to some, others question the concept and wonder if the UW is making the right move or taking too big a risk.

FOR EXAMPLE, with lower admission standards at the branches, would the prestige of the UW be in jeopardy?

While the minimum grade for admission to the UW is 2.0 (C), stiff competition among applicants last fall meant that the grades for entering freshmen averaged 3.5 (A-minus). The admission policy at the branch campuses could allow more students to be admitted with grades that are closer to 2.0 average.

But Lee Brock, newly appointed Tacoma branch admissions director, doesn't see the difference in grades as a threat.

"We are really talking about two different groups of students at point of entry. We will focus on juniors and seniors who have already met their entry requirements and who are working on their majors," he said.

Another potential problem, which community college students point out, is that setting up the two branches might affect the state's education budget.

Will the budget expand to accommodate the new campuses? Or will the budget be split and shared among all the state schools, including the new branches, making the budget for each institution smaller?

"There is a need (for the branches), but at the same time I question funding in other four-year universities," said Steve Holt, a 31-year-old Federal Way resident who is attending HCC this summer to save money on

JODY LINN, currently a Highline Community College student, says a UW branch campus in Tacoma will make it easier for south-end residents such as herself to obtain bachelor's degrees. Linn is a Federal Way resident.

tuition but regularly attends Western Washington University in Bellingham.

Scott McQuage, a 20-year-old HCC student from Kent, also questions the budget and the motives of the UW branches.

"They are a great opportunity, as long as they work with community colleges and the state doesn't cut the budget for existing schools," he said.

THE STATE HIGHER education board estimates each branch, when fully built, will cost $67 million. The 1989 state Legislature approved a two-year, $6.62 million operating budget to begin degree programs for both UW branches.

The Legislature also budgeted $45 million to plan physical development and acquire land for UW branches, said Jim Reed, spokesman for the state Higher Education Coordinating Board.

A citizens group consisting of seven people from Tacoma and 10 from Bothell is scouting out sites for the branches. By Dec. 1, the group will recommend sites in ranked order to the UW Board of Regents. The regents will forward their proposals to the education board, and Kerr expects a decision on the sites in late January.

The group is trying to find sites to house temporary structures that can be expanded into permanent campuses, which are to open during the 1994-95 school year. This plan will allow the UW to use the same land for the temporary and permanent campuses, which will prevent later problems when the branches convert from temporary to permanent buildings, Kerr said.

ADMISSION STANDARDS at the branches will be much more flexible than the main campus. Students will have to meet the minimum 2.0 grade average, but the branches will consider other factors, too, and will weigh each case individually, Kerr said.

The UW will look at students' career goals and academic plans, course prerequisites and the degrees they seek, letters from employers, and ethnic background.

The UW has designed a Liberal Studies Program for the branches that will begin in the fall of 1990 in which students will graduate with a bachelor of arts degree. The curriculum will blend social sciences and humanities, Kerr said.

Other bachelor's degrees that will wrap around the liberal arts core are nursing, business and mechanical and electrical engineering, Kerr said.

Master's programs will be available in engineering, business, teaching and nursing. Because of the region's tremendous need for specialized nurses, the UW wants to carry its nursing program through the master's level at the branches, Kerr said.

The branches also will help students transferring from community colleges.

"We have been working closely with community colleges. Their students are our students, and it is important (that) we carefully insure to move smoothly to baccalaureate studies," Kerr said.

The UW has been working with Highline, South Seattle, Tacoma and other community colleges in the area, Kerr said. The Joint Community College/UW Branch Campus Committee meets monthly to work on academic policies.

ED COMMAND, HCC vice president, will support university branches as long as they remain upper-division.

"We don't anticipate any problems as long as the UW continues to abide by the Higher Education Coordinating Board's master plan and offer upper-division classes," he said.

Schools such as the University of Michigan that have started upper-division branches have evolved into independent institutions in a few years, Command said.

Kerr, however, insists that the UW's branches will remain upper-division.

"This area is well served by community colleges. The need is to serve upper-division," she said.

BESIDES SMOOTHING the transition from community college, the branches will aim to ease the transition for students re-entering college after being away for many years.

"The branch campuses aren't only going to be physically accessible, but psychologically accessible," Kerr said.

Child care may be available, and the branches will schedule most classes in the evenings and Saturday mornings to accommodate working students and those with children.

The branches will try to offer a full range of loans and grants, although the UW worries that part-time students might not qualify under financial aid standards. Most students at the branches probably will carry three-quarters of a regular load — about nine to 12 credits, Kerr said.

Kerr sees the branches as cultural centers, with the activities suiting the character of the students. Lectures, art exhibits and possibly a performing arts center are some of the ideas, she said.

"We want to give students a social identity in the community," she said.

Bond has 273 acres of Federal Way land

Those eastside parcels are 31 acres on Lake Killarney called Lutherland, and 14.9 acres next to the existing Camelot Park.

The other parcels, within city limits, are 9.9 acres in the Adelaide/Lakota area, one parcel of 24 acres in the Hylebos Wetlands, another parcel in the Hylebos Wetlands of 71 acres, 95 acres in Spring Valley and 25.5 acres near Southwest 363rd Street between 10th and 14th avenues southwest.

This is the second time the county has tried to pass an open space bond. The 1988 open space bond failed, largely because funds for the Seattle Aquarium and other non-open space items were included.

IT WILL BE next to impossible to propose another bond issue if this one fails, King County Council staffer Gene Duvernoy told the community council, because it will have become obvious voters won't buy another one.

"This is probably our last chance at passing a bond issue," Duvernoy said.

There is little money available for advertising for the bond issue, he said. County officials are counting on grass-roots citizen support to help pass the bond issue.

The bond issue includes acquisition of 3,144 acres of land and 70 miles of trails. It also includes 253 acres of county-owned land and 115 miles of trail that will be improved.

If approved, property owners will pay $12.99 a year on a $100,000 home for 20 years.

Supporters are comparing that cost with the price of a medium-size pizza.

"I'm not sure if that's with or without anchovies," joked Duvernoy.

$25 million office complex planned for West Campus

A Bellevue developer intends to build a 200,000-square-foot, $25 million office complex called Washington Park in West Campus.

The first of the complex's three buildings will be finished by March 1990, according to officials with TOLD Development Corp. TOLD has operations in Bellevue, California, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin.

The complex will consist of Class A office space, the most expensive space to lease because of its primarily steel and glass construction.

According to commercial real estate brokers, there is only a 4 percent Class A vacancy rate in Federal Way, which is considered a shortage.

No tenants have been signed yet for the complex.

The complex will be built on a 10-acre site at the corner of First Way South and South 340th Street.

The buildings will face toward Mount Rainier and will have a "pewter-colored" glass exterior. Three teal-colored bands will wrap the buildings.

The first of the three buildings to be constructed will be three-stories high and will include open balconies at stepped corners.

The buildings also will feature built-in technological advances such as fiber optics and wiring systems for telecommunications, computers and cable television.

long time," says Miller. "How many fresh ideas can he still have? Running over and over like that, you get stale."

MILLER'S WIFE, Nancy McGinnis, is a metallurgical engineer at the Boeing Co. She calls his leap into politics "a great decision."

"I had some concerns about how it would affect our personal life, but we decided it was important for him to do this," she says.

"Dave has lived here all his life and he's seen the area deteriorate. We're the kind of people who, if we believe in something strongly, we go after it."

Miller's background includes teaching and business management. He is articulate and outspoken on issues he feels are important to the community, including one that hits very close to home: day care.

EVEN THOUGH he is happy staying home with his kids ("I do it on purpose, not by default."), he believes in neighborhood day-care centers.

"People just feel more comfortable when their kids are cared for in their own neighborhoods."

A movement to save neighborhood day-care centers gave Miller his first taste of political victory. From there he moved on to environmental battles and a stint on a committee that helped write Normandy Park's Shoreline Management Plan.

Through it all he says he developed an appreciation for government that's "close to the people."

HE SUPPORTS THE recent cityhood votes in Federal Way and Sea-Tac, and chastises Barden for trying to keep the new cities under county control. "Paul Barden still has his foot in the door, like a door-to-door salesman. The cities want to shut the door (on the county) and he won't let them," he says.

Miller points to unplanned and accelerating growth as the driving force behind the cityhood votes.

If elected, his first priority would be to improve zoning policies through region-wide land-use planning.

"ZONING DECISIONS now are too development-driven. If a developer wants to do it, it happens," he argues.

"I'm not saying there shouldn't be development, but developers don't always have the best interest of the community in mind."

Miller would involve the county in long-term land-use planning encompassing the four-county region of King, Pierce, Snohomish and Kitsap counties.

He would also like to see time limits on zoning decisions, similar to the time limits on building permits. If a piece of land is not used for its zoned purpose, he says that the land should revert to another use, after a certain time period.

HIS CAMPAIGN depends on a lot of help from his friends, and a minimum budget of $10,000 to $20,000. Barden has said he plans on spending as much as $80,000 in his campaign.

AS HIS CHILDREN squabble over toys in the front yard of their modest home, Miller describes one of his household rules, called the "rule of thumb." It's a quick way to settle arguments, he says.

"What it means is the one with the biggest thumb rules."

Miller's political advisors might do well to measure the circumference of Paul Barden's politically prodigious first digit. A veteran with the staying power that Barden has exhibited may have that "biggest thumb."

Neighbors burgled, one loses AK-47

Two apartment building neighbors were burglarized Friday, possibly by the same person at about the same time, but one will be feeling her loss more than the other.

One woman told King County police she was away between 1 and 3:12 p.m. Friday. When she returned home, she found her apartment door kicked in and her piggy bank smashed. Gone was about $20 in change. Nothing else was taken or disturbed.

But her next-door neighbor, who was gone between 12:30 and 2:15 p.m. that day, returned home to find her door broken in too, but her losses a little higher.

Missing from her apartment are $300 in cash and an AK-47 assault rifle. Nothing else in her apartment was disturbed.

Woman says man pushed, kicked her

A mentally handicapped woman told King County police an elderly man pushed her down and kicked her without provocation.

The 25-year-old woman said she was at the bus stop at Pacific Highway South and South 312th Street shortly before 4 p.m. Monday, when the man walked up, pushed her to the ground and kicked her several times, then walked away.

Developers balk at paying for increased traffic

Like a pitcher who's gone nine solid innings, but still walks away with a no decision, King County Councilman Greg Nickels saw his proposal to charge developers for road improvements go nowhere on Monday.

After a lengthy debate over how the fees should be calculated, councilmembers voted to send the measure back to the executive branch with a request that two different versions be drafted.

One version would charge developers the full cost of traffic generated by the development. The other would base the fees on one-half of the traffic that enters and exits the development.

Nickels called the full-traffic proposal fair and equitable, but developers and real estate experts at the hearing argued that it would add between $2,400 and $9,000 to the cost of the average home.

Russell Segner, president-elect of the Seattle King County

Association of Realtors, told the council that developers would simply pass the road improvement fees onto the homebuyer.

"This will be the death knell for home affordability," he said.

Segner said that developers are willing to pay a portion of the costs for road improvements, but not the amount demanded by Nickels.

Councilman Paul Barden agreed with Segner, calling it futile to "whack developers" for the cost of road improvements.

Barden said that road use fees, such as auto licenses and gasoline taxes, should be increased to pay for new roads.

"We're going to be charging the homeowner for the road that the furniture dealer and the home oil salesman is using," he said.

Nickels countered that the county faces a transportation deficit of $462 million in the next decade, and that his measure would erase 20 percent of that deficit.

But the compromise no-decision vote prevailed. The council is now set to consider the two different versions, both of which apply to commercial and residential developments in unincorporated King County, at its Nov. 15 meeting.

At this point, Nickels said it may take that long to muster the votes needed to pass the measure, unless he is willing to cut the fees charged to developers.

SGT. FELIX works rat patrol at the King County parking garage in downtown Seattle. The cat had been abandoned by its owners and was hours away from being put to sleep when it was recruited for its present assignment.

Felix keeps garage rodent-free

But since Felix began his tour of duty, the shop has been mouse and rat free.

Felix does not work for free, however. He insists on a proper ration of pats on the head, scratches under the chin, and gentle murmurings of, "What a nice kitty."

HE GETS PLENTY of those from Shantz and the mechanics. He even gets an occasional ride on the repair shop's hydraulic lift, which he loves.

But cats tend to be demanding.

When he feels the need — usually several times a day — Felix wanders throughout the garage in search of a friendly petting or a tidbit to eat.

Everyone who parks in the garage knows Felix, and few can ignore him. He saunters up to anyone, lets out a demure miaow, and waits for his due.

He usually gets it.

SHANTZ SAYS FELIX was a "bag of bones" when he came to the garage. He'd been abandoned at the King County Animal Control Shelter by an elderly couple who could no longer afford to feed him.

He was only hours away from being euthanized when an animal control officer remembered Shantz's complaints about rats at the garage.

The officer took Felix to the garage and Shantz agreed to give him a try. She's never regretted it.

She buys his food and his kitty litter, and gives him water in an old hubcap.

FELIX SPENDS his nights catching mice and rats, and his days making friends.

Even King County police officers have fallen under his spell. One lets Felix sleep in his helmet. Others have been seen carrying a compliant kitty down to the maintenance shop, after his curiosity led him onto the elevator and up several flights.

Alicia Stipland, who monitors the fleet of King County cars in the garage, says everyone watches out for Felix.

"He's something special, to all of us."

Both Miller and Piquette claim district expertise

"I'm more open and gregarious than Bob will ever be," Miller said. "People talk with me."

Piquette, 63, is real estate salesman and broker for Flannigan Ewing and Associates. He is active as a member of the Federal Way First! Transition Team and said he has a more critical approach to district projects and customer rates than Miller.

IN FACT, Piquette accused Miller of "rubberstamping" many district projects and expenditures as presented by staff without questioning whether they're needed.

Not true, Miller said. "I haven't been afraid to ask questions," he said.

Perhaps the most important, though intangible, issue in the campaign is "The Tweddle Factor."

Commissioner Bev Tweddle was elected two years ago on a campaign platform of making the district more accountable and more open. She defeated John Sawyer, a fixture on both sewer and water boards for years, on the argument that the district wasn't responsive to its customers.

Both Piquette and Miller were recruited by Sawyer to run for boards, Piquette as a former business partner of Sawyer's and Miller as a fellow Kiwanian.

Although initially both Piquette and Miller strongly disliked Tweddle, Piquette has now allied himself with her. Miller said he too has learned to work with Tweddle, but still thinks she is sometimes disruptive in her questioning of minute details.

TWEDDLE SAID she will not actively campaign for either commissioner but publicly makes her choice clear.

"Bob has made considerable strides...on being able to evaluate the issues," Tweddle said. "Although we don't often agree, I respect that he's put the time and effort into evaluating the process."

About Miller she said, "Don Miller's focus seems to be how better to reward the employees as opposed to being concerned about the ratepayers."

Again, that's not true, Miller said. Although he might have a different, less confrontational style than Tweddle, he has been active in many state and national utility issues that have saved customers money, he said.

As a member and secretary of the Washington State Association of Water and Wastewater Districts and as president of a group of Puget Sound districts' insurance pool, he has saved the district a great deal, he said.

"I've spent the time for the district's benefit," Miller said.

Piquette, however, said he's put in more time than Miller, citing his activities to revamp the district's finance division and being on the district's bonding committee.

"I've been more concerned about rates than Don," Piquette said. "I take more time to read the budget and I get more involved in what's going on."

THE DISTRICT'S other commissioner, Leonard "Doc" Thompson, said both candidates are qualified and he won't support one over the other.

"They're both good men and they've contributed a lot," Thompson said "I'm strictly neutral."

Both men list the district's Lakota secondary sewage treatment plant now under construction, at a cost of $34.1 million, as one of the most important projects they will keep their eyes on if elected.

Originally elected as a sewer commissioner, Piquette said he has more expertise in managing plant construction.

Miller denies that saying, "We sit on the same board and get the same information."

Neither candidate has any secret campaign strategy. Both say they'll use the traditional method of yard signs and mailings. There are no candidate forums planned.

Both say the campaign has not strained their working relationship and they're friendly with each other.

"I have no mud to sling," Miller said.

Whichever commissioner is re-elected will serve a six-year term beginning next January.

Miller has lived in Federal Way for 27 years. He and his wife are Marine Hills residents. They have seven children.

Piquette has lived in Federal Way for 28 years. He lives with his wife and daughter near the Buenna area.

Buenna water chlorinated

Several hundred customers in the Buenna area might notice the smell or taste of chlorine in their drinking water this week.

Federal Way Water and Sewer District officials began adding chlorine to the water of about 500 customers north of South 300th Street and west of First Avenue South early last week after higher than usual bacteria levels were found in the water.

Officials stress that the levels — which were discovered during testing — never reached harmful levels. But to be on the safe side, the district will continue chlorinating through this week.

Officials say the unusual coliform bacteria levels were probably caused by some dirt that got into water lines because of work on the aging water system of the former Water District 56 area. Dirt may have gotten in the existing line when a new line was hooked up, despite district health procedures, according to Jim Miller, district general manager.

The area affected also includes homes in Redondo along the waterfront.

Abuse victims find aid inside and outside court

a divorce. ANTHONY DIDN'T know anything about the legal system and didn't know help was available until the judge presiding over her case urged her to seek out DAWN.

She thought she would contact the agency as requested, then go it alone through the court system. But she found comfort and advice in the old Kent home that serves as headquarters for DAWN. She also found Donna Cooper, coordinator of DAWN's volunteer legal advocacy program, who would help her obtain legal freedom from her husband.

"It helped me that I had to do it, I had to call DAWN because the judge said so," Anthony said. "If not for that judge, I don't know where I'd be."

Cooper was at Anthony's side when she asked again for a protection order, and she also was there when Anthony asked for and received a divorce. She helped Anthony fill out forms, directed her to the right clerks and helped her prepare for court appearances.

ANTHONY WASN'T Cooper's first case, nor was she the last. DAWN's legal advocacy program is about four years old now, and it growing so quickly that its present supply of volunteers is hard-pressed to cover its caseload.

Cooper declined to say how many legal advocates are presently available through DAWN, but the organization's caseload has risen steadily, from 120 clients in 1986 to 190 in 1987 and to 301 in 1988.

Likewise, DAWN's hotline calls have risen dramatically, from 3,138 calls in '87 to 4,318 in '88. Its support groups took in 1,185 abuse victims in '87 and 1,549 victims in '88.

Legal advocacy began an timidated, and there was her abuser, influencing her in subtle ways," said Cooper. "And the average person doesn't realize that court is not like 'Perry Mason.' You may not have talked to the prosecutor until five minutes before the hearing, and then you have to sit there and testify against the person who you thought loved you...That's an overwhelming experience."

KING COUNTY Prosecutor Norm Maleng came to the same conclusion a couple of years ago when he decided courts should host a District Court Domestic Violence Advocacy Project. Like DAWN, it refers victims to various community services, helps arrange for "no contact" orders against defendants and its representatives will appear in court with victims when necessary.

Peg Altman, DAWN volunteer coordinator, said that program has a crucial difference. It advocates prosecution of the abuser. DAWN advocates whatever the abuse victim wants, even if it's to drop the case.

Federal Way District Court Judge Carolyn Hayek says advocates from either organization help victims do what might seem very easy to the rest of us — admit that they are being abused.

"I'm all in favor of someone being there to hold her hand or pat her on the back or whatever may help her to come into the courtroom to say what happened," she said. "I know how difficult that is...As a lawyer, it sometimes took months before victims told me they were living in abusive situations."

She says she knows her ex-husband would take control of her again, if he could. He did it once before, after she finally had gotten the nerve to take him to court for the first time for his abusive behavior. He met her outside the courthouse and threatened her again.

"He was a chameleon. And chameleons catch their prey with their sticky tongues. But they don't eat them until they stop struggling," said Anthony.

"He got me with his tongue — I needed to be told that I was beautiful, that I was attractive, and he used the spoken word to gain my confidence and trust."

ANTHONY IS CERTAIN now that if she had had a DAWN advocate with her on her first trip to court, the man's hold on her would have ended much more quickly.

As it was, support groups taught her that her case was like many others. She had grown up in an abusive family, and says she didn't think of abuse as abnormal. She learned that other women were likewise drawn back into an abusive relationship during the "honeymoon" period of flowers and sweet talk that follows abusive episodes.

Anthony's case was somewhat unusual, however, because of the potential violence of the abuser. DAWN's whereabouts are kept secret because of the possibility of violence against the organization, and DAWN volunteers are instructed to not reveal their last names. But Anthony's ex-husband was more inclined toward violence than most, said Cooper.

"But in every case, legal advocates have to be conscious of the safety issue. We are careful when going out to our cars, we watch to make sure we're not followed. If there's a chance that the abuser has a weapon, we inform the court," Cooper said.

NEVERTHELESS, Cooper stays with it, saying that the victims' eventual self-confidence upon escaping abusive relationships is her reward.

Anthony will return to college, and also will enroll in DAWN's next training class for volunteer legal advocates.

"Things are looking good now. There's a light at the end of the tunnel, and I know now there's no train there," she said.

DAWN offers safe homes, legal advocates and hotline

The Domestic Abuse Women's Network (DAWN) offers support groups, legal advocates and safe homes for victims of abuse who live in south King County.

A 24-hour hotline is available for anyone who believes he or she needs help because of an abusive relationship.

DAWN is now seeking volunteers. As legal advocates, volunteers can provide information about the court system and sometimes accompany victims to court. As hotline respondents, volunteers staff the 24-hour crises line from their homes.

DAWN holds 35-hour training sessions for legal advocates and 30-hour training sessions for hotline respondents. Classes for both will be held in September.

Volunteers also are needed to throw fundraising parties to help raise money for the organization.

For information about the volunteer program, call DAWN at 852-5529.

The hotline number is 852-STOP (852-7867).

Good news for nannies

Sisters discover interested parents in the Northwest

By ANN S. HARTMAN

If Mary Poppins had lived in the 1980s, she might not have had to piece together that soot-stained note and fly by umbrella to find a job.

And the father of the children who longed for the perfect nanny might not have been driven by frustration to tear up his children's "nanny wanted" ad and toss the pieces into the fireplace.

In today's world of modern conveniences, the distraught family and unemployed nanny might have found each other through "My Sister's Nanny."

The fledgling business in downtown Puyallup is one of a handful in the Northwest that match nannies with families. Business has been good in the two months it has been open, say owners, operators and sisters Debbie Miller and Carrell Cabrera. The two have matched nannies to families as far away as Florida and as close as Milton.

"MY SISTER'S Nanny" also has clients on file from Edgewood and Federal Way waiting to be matched with a nanny. That's fairly good, said Cabrera, condering "The West Coast has no idea how to utilize a thing called a nanny."

The idea just hasn't caught on like it has in the Midwest and eastern states, Cabrera said. "So we targeted the Northwest to educate (the area) as to the feasibility and joy of having a nanny."

Through advertising and word-of-mouth, the sisters have built a clientele of families who want an alternative to daycare centers or raising latchkey kids. A live-in or at least full-time caregiver who allows a child to stay in his or her home and cares for all the child's needs is a perfect solution for many, they say.

"The next best thing to grandma is a nanny," said Miller, 34. In the morning, parents don't have to hurry to get the child breakfast and out the door to daycare, she explained. Nor do parents have to fret about being late from work to pick up the child. Some day-care centers charge extra for every 10 minutes a parent is late, Miller said.

Plus, many working couples hire housekeepers and babysitters in addition to using day-care centers, while a nanny takes care of all those needs in one tidy job title. A nanny can eliminate stress of many working parents and increase their quality time with their youngsters, Miller said.

TODAY'S typical nanny might possess some of the magic with children for which Mary Poppins is famous, but most come a bit younger, said Cabrera, 43.

Although she has met a nanny as old as 71 and has placed one who was in her 60s, Cabrera said the typical live-in nanny is a 20- to 22-year-old woman (the sisters have no male nannies on file), has a bit of college behind her, is unsure of her career choice, loves children and is

GOOD FRIENDS AND SISTERS Debbie Miller and Carrell Cabrera own and operate "My Sister's Nanny," a new business in Puyallup that matches modern-day nannies with families. The sisters say parents in the Northwest have not yet discovered that nannies can be economically feasible and a viable alternative to day care.

not yet ready to marry and have children of her own.

She moves in with a family, takes charge of the child's schedule, does light housekeeping and laundry, fixes meals and then is off-duty after dinner. Sometimes she attends college classes to work toward a degree.

"She becomes an intricate part of the family, as close as an employee can get," Cabrera said. "A nanny is a very, very nice commodity."

Those who believe that a nanny might be out of financial reach are confusing a nanny with the "unattainable fantasy" of a governess, Cabrera said.

A governess is the very prim and proper matron of a rich family, more like the employee of Princess Di and Prince Charles than the awkward Alice on "The Brady Bunch" TV sitcom. A governess is given total responsibility for the child, while a nanny works more as the parents' partner in child rearing, the sisters say.

And the cost, they stress, is not outrageous.

"When you start comparing costs, nannies come out so ridiculously ahead," said

Dew-spewing bugs launch slime attack on begonias

Harvest the zucchini and pick the green beans this month. Fresh vegetables are the reason you planted that garden in the first place.

An easy way to put up green beans is to cook and season them just like you would for a meal, then ladle them into plastic freezer bags.

Next winter all you have to do is zap the pre-cooked beans in the microwave and pour them into a serving bowl.

Q. Could you please tell me how to get rid of "red oxalis" in my rose garden? These little clover-like weeds are sprouting up all over and when I spray them with weedkiller they come back twice as thick!

B.N., Tacoma

A. This persistent little weed needs to be smothered, not sprayed, because it hides seeds throughout the soil that sprout thickly as soon as the mother plants are killed by chemicals.

The answer to your problem is as close as your fingertips. In fact, your fingers are on it as you read this. To suffocate any low-growing weed, use this newspaper as your murder weapon and sneak up to the weed outbreak armed with four or five pages of damp newsprint.

You don't even have to knock down the weeds first. Just lay the paper on top and then cover your deathly deed with an attractive layer of bark mulch. Leave a small opening around the rose bushes so you can easily water each shrub without flooding the mulch off of the newspaper.

An even more effective weed block is to use one of the landscaping fabrics that allows air and water to pass down but no weed to poke up from below. Next year, or when the newspaper disappears into the soil, you can plant a low groundcover around your roses such as creeping thyme or the blooming Mother of thyme.

The tight growth of these two carpeting plants does a good job of crowding out any unwanted seedlings.

Q. This year, our D'Anjou pear tree is really loaded with fruit, and we need advice on how to store the harvest. Last year we followed the advice of an expert and wrapped each pear in newspaper and stored them in our cellar. The fruit turned soft and soon spoiled! What else should we try?

Mrs. A., Tacoma

A. Pears release a gas that hastens ripening, so store them cool and uncovered. Your variety of pear is a late-ripening type but should still be picked from the tree when they are green and hard.

Once they start ripening on the tree you can't stop the process. Hard green pears will soften up quickly after a day or two in a closed container.

Q. Please tell me what to do about my roses. There is a white fuzz appearing on the new buds and leaves. It seems to invade only certain rose bushes and skips over my older varieties. I've never had this problem before.

L.B., Enumclaw

A. Powdery mildew has moved in on your rose garden. The white fuzz is a moldy growth that is encouraged by cool weather and dry soil.

Roses are thirsty plants. Once they suffer the stress or thirst they become susceptible to a variety of problems. Keep the hose handy and water the roots of your roses but avoid wetting the foliage.

Splashing water spreads the mildew spores to other roses. A slowly running hose allowed to soak the soil around your roses for a couple of hours each week is your best defense from disease.

Now get outside and pluck the worst of those infected leaves from the plant. You can try a powder or spray on the mildew, but you'll have to be persistent or the disease will reappear.

Look for a rose and flower fungicide at any garden center. There is always the lazy gardener's sure-fire cure for any plant problem. Just dig up any rose that dares to defy you and throw it away.

There are plenty of well-behaved, disease-resistant roses on the market, so there is no reason to put up with the demanding behavior of a disease-attracting rose bush.

Q. My begonias feel sticky. This sticky residue drips onto the patio from the hanging begonias and stains their pots. Do certain begonia varieties drip sap?

B.S., Aberdeen

A. Your sticky problem is not sap you step in, but honeydew secreted from the bodies of aphid, mealybugs, or white flies.

These three are sucking insects and what they suck from your plants comes out the other end as a syrupy dew that attracts ants. Check the underside of your begonia leaves for the tiny varmint and then wash them away with an insecticidal soap.

For mild infestations you can usually treat the plants with a gentle washing of homemade so suds, but when the plants are covered with the dew, this indicates you may need a stronger remedy.

Ask for malathion or Safer insecticidal soap at your local garden center.

Mall promotions set stage for fall

SeaTac Mall and Terry Terry Productions will hold "In the Spirit," a back-to-school fashion show, at 1 p.m., Aug. 12. The show will be repeated again at 4 p.m.

Professional models will showcase merchandise found in SeaTac Mall for the entire family.

Other back-to-school activities at the mall include a "Vote for School Spirit" contest Aug. 11 to Sept. 4. Shoppers will receive tokens for dollars spent and may use those tokens to vote for their favorite high school in the Kent, Auburn, Federal Way, Enumclaw, Sumner and Tacoma areas.

Each high school will receive a cash donation from the mall based on the number of votes it gets.

With any $10 purchase between Aug. 12 and Sept. 4, shoppers will get a stadium seat cushion. Receipts can be redeemed at the mall information booth.

SHEILA K. ARESTAD

Sheila Arestad, a 1976 graduate of Federal Way High School, will pronounce her first vows at the Convent and Mother House in Techny, Ill. on Aug. 15.

Arestad graduated from the University of Washington in 1979 and received a master's degree in library science from Columbia University in 1980. She was a college instructor before entering the Order of the Holy Spirit Missionary Sisters three years ago.

SHERI BEBICH

The Federal Way native has received a bachelor of science in nursing degree from the University of Washington School of Nursing.

JAY T. ELDER

Jay Elder, a 1976 graduate of Federal Way High School, has earned his degree in dentistry from the University of Texas, San Antonio. He passed his Dental Board Exam and is practicing in San Antonio.

He is the son of LaVerne and Albin Tingball of Renton.

JULIANN CORNELL

Juliann Cornell, a 1989 graduate of Decatur High School, has been accepted into the honors program at Central Washington University.

Cornell will enroll in the Ellensburg school this fall and intends to major in business and law. Approximately 30 students are selected for the honors program each year.

CRAZY QUILTERS

The Crazy Quilters Club of Federal Way has completed nine quilts to benefit the South King County Multi-Service Center.

The club assembled the quilts from fabric donated by the Federal Way Senior Center and individual members. The quilts will be distributed by the multi-service center to homeless people.

William Pavao of Federal Way has graduated with honors from McDonald's Hamburger University in Oak Brook, Ill. He was appointed to the school's Dean's List.

Students are accepted to the school after completing more than two years of training at the restaurant level and three other prerequisite courses in the McDonald's Management Development Program. Hamburger University was founded in 1961.

BOY SCOUT JAMBOREE

Seven Federal Way boys recently traveled to Virginia to participate in the Boy Scouts National Jamboree. The group detoured to Florida to visit Disney World, and also stopped over to sightsee in Washington D.C.

The boys are members of Troop 239.

The jamboree participants were: Doug Lindquist, 16, Matt Wingham, 14, Robert Johnson, 15, Tim Harmon, 15, Chris Romischer, 15, Randy Shaw, 17, and Andy Bley, 16.

SPACE CAMP

Kevin Boyd, 13, recently returned from U.S. Space Camp. The camp, in Huntsville, Ala., offers young people a chance to see what sort of preparations and training go into a manned space voyage.

Participants get the chance to participate in mock space missions, once in mission control and once aboard the craft.

Boyd, who will be a ninth-grader at Lakota Junior High School this fall, is the son of Pat and Marty Boyd of Federal Way.

WWU SCHOLARSHIPS

Three Federal Way residents have received scholarships from Western Washington University.

Sandra Johnstad, the daughter of Susan and Russell Johnstad of Federal Way, has received a $1,200 Minority Achievement Program Scholarship. She is an international business major and plans to graduate in June 1996.

Dan Kim, the son of Sung Kwon and Jung Bai Kim of Federal Way, has been awarded a $300 L. Mildred Hurd Scholarship, named after a former music teacher from Bellingham.

Kim is a music education major and holds a 3.65 grade point average.

Patricia Cassidy received a $500 President's Scholarship for the coming academic year. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Cassidy of Des Moines, she is a sophomore business/accounting major. She holds a 3.9 grade point average.

REAL ESTATE AGENT

MacPherson's Realtors has added an agent to its Federal Way branch.

Nalani Ferreira, a former resident of Hawaii, has joined the office. She also works as a flight attendant.

New business targets nannies

Cabrera, who conducted a survey of day care costs in the immediate area. Depending on how many children a couple places in day care, weekly costs can run from $100 to $700 per week, not including a yearly registration fee, Cabrera said.

PEOPLE WHO run day-care centers out of their homes offer a cheaper alternative, but you still have to factor in the costs of transportation, overtime hours and the money parents lose when they stay home to take care of a sick child, Cabrera said.

In contrast, nannies whom Cabrera and Miller place in homes charge about $150-$200 per week, depending on how many children need care and what other duties the job includes.

The two sisters make their living by charging the hiring client a one-time fee. The placement service is free to the aspiring nannies. The fee covers the cost of paperwork and research to place a nanny, Miller said. When a nanny comes for placement, she is asked to provide a criminal history record, a driver's safety record, write an essay about why she wants to be a nanny and fill out an original "My Sister's Nanny" questionnaire.

The questionnaire asks such thought-provoking questions as, "What qualities do you possess as examples for young persons to aspire towards?" and "What type of friend do you make?"

After a check of several references and a careful interview, Miller and Cabrera give the packet of information to a potential client, who can then set up an interview with the nanny directly.

The whole process is guarded in strict confidentiality.

which is why Cabrera and Miller would not allow this newspaper to interview or photograph a paired nanny and client.

The sisters, both of whom live in Puyallup, grew up in Oklahoma. Miller is a part-time nurse at Good Samaritan Hospital and works part-time in a pediatrician's office, as well as being co-partner at "My Sister's Nanny." Cabrera works full-time at the business.

AT VARIOUS points in their lives, the two played nanny for each other's children. Cabrera worked as a professional nanny in New Jersey as well, in preparation for the business she and her sister dreamed of opening.

While she was on the East Coast, she interviewed "every nanny I could find" to gather information for the business. What she found were many nannies from the Northwest. "I'm not sure what causes the nurturing-type quality that makes someone want to have a career as a child-care giver," but the Northwest seems to breed them, Cabrera said. In fact, a number of nanny firms, including one in Tacoma, act as brokers, soliciting Northwest nannies for Midwest and East Coast jobs, she said.

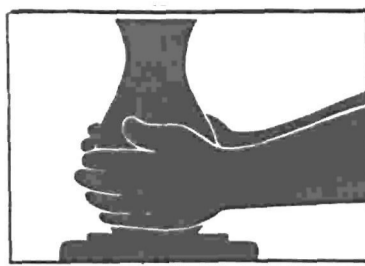

One of the reasons for opening "My Sister's Nanny" in the Northwest was to keep and use the talent here, said Cabrera. Two firms in Seattle have the same idea, but "My Sister's Nanny" is the only one in the Puyallup area.

"My Sister's Nanny," which got its name from a children's story, finds and places companions for the elderly as well as nannies. In the future, the sisters hope to expand their business to include a nanny school like ones at Seattle Central Community College and Pierce College.

H&R BLOCK TO OFFER TAX SCHOOL IN SOUTH KING CO.

The only sure thing about tax laws is that they seemingly change from year to year. That's why so many people annually enroll in the H&R Block Tax Course.

H&R Block, the nation's largest income tax preparation firm, has offered the course for 23 years. This year's course starts September 6. Students may choose from morning or evening classes held for a 13-week period.

Experienced Block instructors teach all phases of income tax preparation. Classroom includes group discussions, practice problems, and hands-on experience preparing individual tax returns. This year's course will also cover the latest tax law changes.

Qualified tax course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many Block employees find the flexible hours a plus. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low fee includes all materials, supplies, and textbooks. Students who successfully complete the course receive a Certificate of Accomplishment and 7.5 continuing education units. The course is registered with the Washington State Board for Vocational Education.

For more information and a registration form, contact the H&R Block office at 15015 Main St., Bellevue, Wa. 98007 or at 22608 Marine View Dr. S., Des Moines, Wa. 98198. Federal Way call 941-3481; Des Moines call 824-8000.

Master's in microcooking is only a cookbook away

"Microcooking is simple," according to Carol Trench, home economics teacher and author of "Microwave Mastery." "If you can read, you can do it," she says in the beginning of her new cookbook.

Microwaving is made easy in this unique cookbook. Easy-to-read print, Reminder Symbols, and step-by-step directions aid the new or experienced microwaver. Clues to doneness in all individual recipes also would have been helpful for beginning cooks.

A complete and easy-to-understand introduction to microwave cooking starts this book. A "How to Microcook" section also shows the book's Reminder Symbols for cooking procedures. These helpful symbols are used in each recipe to make micro-cooking easier. For example, if you read the Spinach Ring recipe (below) from the pages of "Microwave Mastery," you'd see three different symbols: a microwave oven surrounding the words "100 percent" to show you that cooking is done on High power, a stirring spoon, to show you when to stir, and a curved arrow, to remind you to rotate the dish.

In the beginning pages, healthy diet guidelines give

by Joyce Batcher

pointers on food shopping and label reading. Appendixes at the end, such as "Foods High in Dietary Fat, Sodium and Sugar" and "Instead Try to Include These," list health information.

Nutritional analysis is given for each recipe, although cholesterol amounts are not given. Cooking time is also given for each recipe. When necessary for success, use of special equipment is noted at the top of a recipe.

If you'd like to order "Microwave Mastery," send $14.95 (includes $2 postage and handling) per book to Mic It Publishing, Inc., Cookbook Order, Dept. 1111, P.O. Box 23148, Minneapolis, MN 55423. Minnesota residents, add 6 percent sales tax.

Chicken Royal
2 cups cooked rice
1 whole chicken breast, cooked and cubed
1 can (10 1/2 ounces) low-sodium cream of chicken soup
1 can (8 ounces) sliced water chestnuts, drained
1 jar (4 ounces) whole mushrooms, drained
1/4 cup chopped celery
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup frozen peas
1 jar (2 ounces) pimiento, drained
1/4 teaspoon onion powder
Dash pepper

Place butter and mushrooms in a microwave-safe 4-cup measure. Microwave (High) 2 minutes. Stir in spinach, cream of celery soup, lemon juice, Parmesan cheese and pepper. Place in a greased microwave-safe 9-inch ring mold. Microwave (High) 6 minutes, rotating dish twice during cooking. Stir. Continue microwaving (High) 2 to 6 minutes, or until knife inserted comes out clean. Let stand for 5 minutes. Invert on serving plate or spoon into serving bowl. Makes 4 servings.

Each serving: 249 calories, 15g protein, 7g fat, 32g carbohydrate, 536mg sodium.

Spinach Ring
1 1/2 tablespoons butter
8 fresh mushrooms, sliced

1 package (10 ounces) chopped spinach, thawed and drained
2 eggs
1/2 can (10 1/2 ounces) low-sodium cream of celery soup
1/2 cup seasoned croutons
1/4 teaspoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
Dash pepper

Place butter and mushrooms in a microwave-safe 4-cup measure. Microwave (High) 2 minutes. Stir in spinach, cream of celery soup, lemon juice, Parmesan cheese and pepper. Place in a greased microwave-safe 9-inch ring mold. Microwave (High) 6 minutes, rotating dish twice during cooking. Stir. Continue microwaving (High) 2 to 6 minutes, or until knife inserted comes out clean. Let stand for 5 minutes. Invert on serving plate or spoon into serving bowl. Makes 4 servings.

Each serving: 182 calories, 9g protein, 11g fat, 12g carbohydrate, 388mg sodium.

Snacking Cake
1/4 cup butter
1/4 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1 cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 package (6 ounces) (1/2 cup) butterscotch chips
1/2 package (6 ounces) (1/2 cup) chocolate chips

Cream together butter, granulated sugar and brown sugar in a mixing bowl. Add the flour, baking powder, egg and vanilla. Stir until well combined, then stir in the chocolate chips and butterscotch chips. Spread into a microwave-safe 8-inch round cake pan. Place on an inverted microwave-safe saucer. Microwave on Medium (50 percent power, 325-350 watts) 6 minutes. Microwave (High) 1 to 4 minutes. Cool on counter. Makes 8 servings.

Each serving: 320 calories, 3g protein, 15g fat, 44g carbohydrate, 190mg sodium.

Note: Cook until top still looks slightly moist. Do not overcook. If desired, before cooking, sprinkle top lightly with a sugar-cinnamon mixture.

Picklers should follow proper procedures

Keeping home processed pickled food products crisp and crunchy is difficult when they are heat-treated to ensure safety from unhealthy organisms.

But, that heat treatment is necessary unless the pickles are kept refrigerated, according to Olga Fuste, registered dietician with Washington State University's Pierce County Cooperative Extension.

Fortunately, proper use of existing U.S. Department of Agriculture approved recipes and a new USDA procedure help ensure that crispness demanded by pickle lovers.

Pickled products require heat treatment to destroy organisms that cause spoilage and to inactivate enzymes that may affect flavor, color and texture. These products include such things as fermented cucumbers, sauerkraut and fresh-pack dills.

Processing times and procedures will vary according to the acidity of the pickled food and the size of the pickles.

Sauerkraut and most fruit and vegetables are processed in boiling water.

Fuste also advises that the USDA has approved a new simmering water pasteurization treatment for most cucumber pickles, which will produce crisper pickles.

You must follow instructions very carefully to avoid the risk of spoilage.

In this new process, place filled jars in a canner filled halfway with warm water, between 120 and 140 degrees.

Add hot water to a level one inch above the jar lids. Heat to 180 degrees to 185 degrees and maintain that temperature for 30 minutes.

Use a candy or jelly thermometer to be certain that the water temperature remains at or above 180 degrees for the entire 30 minutes.

Fuste said temperatures above 185 degrees will cause unnecessary softening of pickles. Temperatures below 185 degrees will not ensure safety.

This pasteurization treatment is used only for cucumber pickles which are high in acid and contain salt. Low-salt pickles need to be processed in boiling water to prevent spoilage.

Honey use is on the rise

September is recognized as National Honey Month, the beginning of the season in which honey is in greatest demand.

The United States produced more than 211 million pounds of honey last year, with a crop value of more than $107 million.

There are over 300 types of honey available. The color and flavor varies, depending on the type of blossoms visited by the honey bees. Colors range from water white to a deep, dark brown. Generally, honey with a lighter color will have a more mild flavor while darker honey will have a stronger flavor.

Honey Bread Pudding
8 cups day-old egg bread, cubed
3 cups milk
1 cup half-and-half
6 eggs, beaten
1/2 cup honey
1 T grated orange peel
1 t each vanilla and ground cinnamon

Honey Cream Sauce
Arrange bread in bottom of lightly greased shallow 2-quart baking dish. Beat remaining ingredients until well blended; pour over bread cubes in baking dish and let stand one hour or until liquid is absorbed by bread. Bake at 375 degrees F. 45 to 50 minutes or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Makes 8 to 12 servings.

Honey Cream Sauce: Beat 1 cup whipping cream until fluffy; add 1/4 cup honey slowly and beat until stiff. Fold in 1 T rum (1/2 t rum extract can be substituted). Makes about 2 cups.

Honey Mustard Mayonnaise
1/4 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup honey
2 T Dijon mustard
1 t prepared horseradish

Combine all ingredients; mix thoroughly. Makes one cup. Serving Tip: Serve as dip for fresh vegetables, spread on sandwiches with meat filling or heat slightly and spoon over cooked vegetables.

Honey Vinaigrette Salad Dressing
1/4 cup red wine vinegar
1/4 cup honey
1/4 cup olive oil
2 T lemon juice
1 to 1 1/2 t dry mustard
Salt and pepper to taste

Honey Bread Pudding with Honey Cream Sauce. September is National Honey Month.

Combine all ingredients; mix thoroughly. Makes 1 1/4 cups. Serving Tip: Serve over favorite fruit or vegetable salad. Variation: 3/4 to 1 t dried basil, crushed, can be added.

Tangy Honey Sauce for Meat and Chicken
1 cup catsup
1/4 cup honey
1 T prepared mustard
1/4 t ground nutmeg

Combine all ingredients; mix thoroughly. Makes 1 1/4 cups. Serving Tip: Spread on meatloaf, pork loin, ribs or chicken pieces during the last 15 minutes of baking, or serve as a dipping sauce.

Honey Berry Sauce for Ice Cream
1 cup frozen blackberries, blueberries and raspberries
1/4 cup cranberry juice
1/4 cup honey

1 to 1 1/2 t grated orange peel
Combine berries and thaw; drain and reserve 1/2 cup liquid. Combine cranberry juice, reserved liquid and honey, bring to boil over high heat. Reduce heat to medium; simmer about 10 minutes or until mixture is reduced to 1 cup. Remove from heat; stir in orange peel. Cool; pour over berries. Chill until serving time. Spoon over ice cream or fruit sherbert. Makes 3 cups. Storage Tip: Refrigerate in covered container up to one week.

Honey Peanut Butter Frosting

1/4 cup honey
1/4 cup butter or margarine, softened
1/4 cup creamy peanut butter
1 t vanilla

Combine honey and butter; mix thoroughly. Stir in peanut butter and vanilla. Makes 1 1/4 cups. Serving Tip: Spread between chocolate wafer cookies, on banana bread or brownies or serve as dip for freshly cut apples.

Honey Lemon Whipped Cream

1 cup heavy cream
1/4 cup honey
5 t lemon juice
1 to 1 1/2 t grated lemon peel
Whip cream to soft peaks; slowly add honey and whip to stiff peaks. Fold in juice and peel. Makes 2 cups. Serving Tip: Serve over gingerbread, fresh apple cake or fruit crepes.

MASSAGE FOR HEALTH

Wendy Corlett, LMP and Shelley Wingard, LMP are celebrating the grand opening of their business "Massage For Health." "The clinic's motto is "The Natural Health Approach to Well Being." Both Wendy and Shelley are excited about offering the Federal Way Community Professional Licensed Massage Therapy.

Wendy has been practicing massage for over 2 years and was a graduate of the Brian Utting School of Massage in Seattle. She has also taught massage classes for Meeker Community Services in Tacoma. Having worked with local doctors and chiropractors Wendy stresses the importance of massage in conjunction with other therapies for rehabilitation.

Shelley is a graduate of the Alexander's School of Massage in Tacoma and has been practicing for over 2 years also. She has taken sports massage seminars and has been a member of the Washington Sports Massage Team, participating in local sports events. Massage shortens recovery time from sports injuries and improves an athlete's performance.

Both therapists are trained in various massage techniques including Swedish, Shiatsu, Deep Tissue, Sports, Foot Reflexology and massage for pregnant women. All of these are offered at their clinic. They do take insurance cases and Labor and Industry claims. Currently their clinic is offering 20% off on your first massage and welcomes all those who feel chronic tension, stress and strain to try a treatment and leave feeling like a new person! The clinic's motto is "The Natural Health Approach to Well Being."

Massage For Health is located at 33720 9th Ave. S., Suite #11, Federal Way. Telephone: 874-3857. Please call for an appointment. Business hours are Monday-Friday 10-7 and Saturday 10-5.

Campaign heats up

Candidates write about growth

As part of our continuing coverage of the election of Federal Way's first city council, the Federal Way News is giving candidates the opportunity to speak directly to the voters in their own words.

The News asked the 14 candidates to respond to questions on growth, traffic and contract services in 75 words or less.

The candidates' answers to questions about traffic and contract services will appear in the subsequent Wednesday editions of The News.

Our coverage will include even more substantial stories on each of the candidates before they face off in the Sept. 19 final election which will decide the seven members who will represent the soon-to-be city.

This week, we asked candidates the following question: "How does your position on growth and development differ from your opponent's?"

Position 1

Mary Gates: "In three months Bill has changed his mind four times. Where was he during the land-use hearings in 1986 when I testified against increased multi-family zoning and pro-mitigation on behalf of the community? Since 1984 I've been pro-mitigation: Control growth by requiring all development to pay for impact on schools, transportation, etc. Development generates sales/user taxes that keep property taxes low and makes money available for parks, the arts..."

Mary Gates

Bill Shortt

Bill Shortt: "From July 7, Federal Way News headline: 'Candidates part ways on growth,' the campaign's most volatile issue. Shortt: Strongly supported Paul Barden's moratorium resolution in February, 1989; wants tough code enforcement on apartment buildings; believes that a temporary moratorium on apartments is necessary to prevent the abuses that have made us so angry."

Gates: In favor of speeding up building permits; is financed by the realtors PAC (Political Action Committee) from Seattle; repeatedly opposes any moratorium.

Position 2

Mark Freitas: "Federal Way needs to set standards to manage growth."

"Roads and transportation need our immediate attention. Additional roads will improve flow and circulation. Rewards for car pooling and alternative modes of transportation are possible."

"A strong planning commission dealing with growth issues will assure that the growth is paid for by those causing the problem. Federal Way's Comprehensive Plan will be amended immediately to fit local needs."

Joel Marks: "I cannot speak for my opponent."

"Federal Way development and growth of multi-family housing is out of control. Economic development is important to a community, but we must now stop or put a temporary moratorium on multi-family housing."

"There are three ways to do this:

1. Slow the permit process and comply with environmental impact statements on multi-family housing.
2. P-suffix (a conditional restriction) on existing zone or site-plan approval so that developers will be able to mitigate impacts such as drainage and roads.
3. Upzone RM 900, RM 1800, RM 2400 (multi-family zoning) to business commercial or neighborhood business."

Mark Freitas

Joel Marks

Position 3

Debbie Ertel: "I haven't heard my opponent's position. Growth can be positive if it occurs in a planned, orderly manner with services such as roads, schools and parks in place prior to construction."

"Unfortunately, that hasn't occurred. We must now slow down or stop growth for a period of time to allow services to catch up. Then we must move ahead only after we have prepared a new community plan and adopted ordinances to ensure compliance with the plan."

Georgene "Jo" Asbury: Asbury did not return her response to the question.

Charges filed in drug lab case

The King County Prosecutor has charged one man, two women, and a juvenile girl with manufacturing the drug methamphetamine (speed) in a Federal Way motel.

The charges, filed on Monday, say that Donald Howard Turpin, 31, a transient, Sonja Marie Gleason, 22, of Federal Way, Christine Rose Powers, 25, of Renton, and a 17-year-old juvenile were operating a "fully functioning" speed lab inside a room at the Super 8 Motel near the South 348th Street freeway interchange in Federal Way.

King County police discovered the drug lab on Wednesday, Aug. 2. The defendants were arrested early in the morning on the same day.

ALL OF THE adult defendants were released without bail shortly after their arrests. The juvenile remains in custody.

However, on Monday, the prosecutor requested another arrest warrant for Turpin, setting his bail at $200,000.

According to the charges, Turpin bragged to police that he has a recipe book with 42 recipes for cooking methamphetamine. He also said that since his release from jail six weeks ago, he has made more than $100,000 cooking the drug.

TURPIN ALSO faces charges in three earlier drug violations, all related to operating speed labs, according to the prosecutor.

Charges state that the motel was evacuated because of the toxicity of the fumes and the potential for explosion. However, in earlier statements, police said they waited several hours for the suspects to return before evacuating the building.

Council president proposes new office

Federal Way Community Council president Ron Belknap had an idea to help control sometimes rancorous council debate.

One of Belknap's ideas, much to the amusement of some of his fellow members, was to appoint a sergeant at arms.

"We need a sergeant at arms that can oversee conduct at these meetings," he told the council.

"Is that like a bouncer?" joked the council's Lisa Grimes. "I think our chair (Belknap) is very good at gaveling people," responded council member John Metcalf.

Debate during council meetings over the last seven months has occasionally become a free-for-all, particularly during an attempt to remove former president John Hale from office. Ironically, many of the more vocal members wanted Hale removed for not limiting out-of-order debate and comments.

Hale survived the removal attempt, but later resigned and was replaced by Belknap.

News Digest

Belknap, 43, is an industrial freight company manager and owner and has had little problem maintaining order.

Belknap quickly gave up on plans to appoint a "bouncer," but his request to appoint a parliamentarian was approved by the council.

The parliamentarian would be a member familiar with the council's by-laws and with Robert's Rules of Order who would have the final say on points of order.

No one was appointed at Thursday's meeting for the job.

Center starts with Tops

A Ross Dress for Less store is out, but a Tops Foods grocery store is still in, so work is proceeding on a new shopping center in central Federal Way.

Charles Oewel, owner of Oewel Partners in San Francisco, says his company's Federal Way SuperCenter now has only Tops Foods on its list of tenants since the Ross Dress for Less discount clothing store terminated plans to move in there.

The clothing store instead will open at 1320 S. 324th Street.

Ross was supposed to anchor 187,000-square-foot SuperCenter, to be built at 20th Avenue South between South 312th and South 316th streets, near Federal Way School District headquarters.

But construction is progressing for the 62,000-square-foot grocery store. Tops Foods will be a large warehouse-style food store similar to Tops shops in Everett and Tacoma, said Oewel.

The shopping center originally was scheduled to be complete in May, but tenant snarls delayed construction, said Oewel. The grocery store is now scheduled to be complete in April 1990.

The entire center eventually will hold 30 tenants.

The center's parking lot will flank 20th Avenue South, and the center's stores will face the street and the shopping center on the other side, which includes Toys-R-U's and a Target department store.

Group promotes recycling

King County's new Commission for Marketing Recyclable Materials will continue its search for new markets for recyclables at its second meeting, set for mid-August.

Now that all 21 members of the commission have been appointed, County Councilman Paul Barden said that the commission's work can begin.

Barden and several members of the commission recently returned from a national conference on recyclables in San Francisco, where they met with other local government officials who also are looking for ways to reduce the solid waste stream.

Barden, who sponsored the ordinance setting up the commission, said that markets for recyclables are dwindling, because of the increased supply of recycled goods. He said the group will be looking for new domestic, as well as foreign, markets for the goods.

The commission also will be looking for ways to convince King County citizens to use more recycled products.

Woman says men drugged, raped her

A woman told Auburn and King County police she was taken against her will from an Auburn bar, forced to take drugs, and then raped by two men in a Federal Way area home.

The 30-year-old woman said she had left the bar late Friday night for a while to take her daughter to a friend's house. On her return shortly after 1 a.m., she met two men she recognized from the bar out in the parking lot. She said they asked her if she wanted to do drugs, and she refused and began to walk away.

But one man told her, "You're not going anywhere..." and made her get into the passenger seat of her own car. He then drove her to a house in the Federal Way area, followed by his friend, driving a blue Nissan 4-by-4 pickup.

Once at the house the men forced her to snort three lines of cocaine, and then took turns sodomizing and raping her for three hours, she said.

When they were done, they left the room and the woman grabbed a piece of paper on her way out, hoping it would have a name and address on it for police use. It didn't, but she was able to give police a possible address and the license plate number of a car in the driveway, which, when checked, came back to an address that matched the woman's description of where she had been, reports said.

As she was driving away from the house down Peasley Canyon Road, the woman said she threw some of the clothes she had been wearing out of her window. She told police she did that because she thought she was being followed by one of the men and wanted to leave a trail. A police officer who drove back over the road later reported he was unable to find any of the clothes.

The woman was taken to Auburn General Hospital for examination.

SUMMONS
FOR DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE TO THE RESPONDENT:
 The petitioner has filed with the Clerk of the above court a Petition requesting that your marriage be dissolved. The object of this action is to obtain a judgment and decree of the court in favor of the petitioner and against you, forever dissolving the bonds of matrimony and equitably distributing the property, real and personal, and debt, of petitioner and yourself. Additional requests, if any, are stated in the Petition, a copy of which is attached to this Summons.
 You may respond to this Summons and Petition by serving a written Response on the person signing this Summons. If you do not serve your written Response within twenty (20) days after the date of service, or within sixty (60) days if this Summons was served outside the State of Washington, or within sixty (60) days after the date of the first publication of this Summons, the court may enter an order of default against you, and at the end of ninety (90) days after service, the court may, without further notice to you, enter a decree dissolving your marriage and approving or providing for other relief requested in the Petition.

 One method of filing your Response and serving a copy on the petitioner is to send them by certified mail with return receipt requested to both the court (original) and the person signing this Summons (copy) at the respective addresses stated below.

Hanson pilots hydro to high Seafair finish

'Budget' boat gains respect

By GERARDO BOLONG

It was time for an Eagle to fly high in the Sunday sun at Lake Washington.

Exercising good judgement and deft driving skills, Federal Way High School graduate Mike Hanson piloted his piston-driven Holset/Miss Mazda hydroplane to a strong fourth place in the 1989 Seafair Rainier Cup.

Also aiding the Mazda effort were a good crew effort and a draw that kept Hanson away from most of the turbine-powered boats until the winner-take-all final heat.

"We've got a good crew and work well together as a team," stated the pleased Hanson. "I would have liked to get a better start in the last heat, but we did well overall, especially for a low-budget team. Our goal has been to become competitive and we're certainly getting there."

"We'd still like to pick up another five miles an hour, but in time it will happen. The bugs that we've experienced are gradually getting taken care of."

Hanson's finish is even more noteworthy, when you consider that Hanson is the only compensated full-time employee. The others are unpaid volunteers. Strapped for cash, the former Madison team rose like a Phoenix from the ashes with volunteer labor, municipal donations, and a sponsorship deal that set up the 1989 season.

"We did as well as we could expect in light of the equipment on hand," added Crew Chief Charlie Grooms. "Mike drove well and the crew did a great job. Our game plan for reaching the final was accomplished. We're tickled to death with this finish."

MIKE HANSON, driver of the U-6 Holset-Miss Mazda hydroplane, enjoys a break from racing Sunday during the 1989 Seafair Rainier Cup. Hanson, a 1979 graduate of Federal

Before the day's racing convened, Federal Way's Hanson based a game plan on the draw he received. With the turbine Winston Eagle as the biggest threat in heat 1-B, Hanson concentrated on taking the heat and winning 400 points.

Setting himself up nicely at the start, the Mazda driver took the lead from the start and cruised to an easy win.

"When I realized that the Winston Eagle had gone dead," I knew I could back off the throttle and save our only engine some wear and tear."

For heat 2-B, Hanson intended to run hard at the start, but stay clear of any trouble. After leading down the first straightaway, he eased off and cruised the rest of the two-mile laps in second place.

With the finals already reached, the Holset/Mazda combine simply wanted to do as well as they could.

Last year at Seafair, Hanson's U-6 Holset/Miss Madison was rammed in the rear after heat 2-B of the Seafair Budweiser Cup. Did that incident affect Hanson's approach to the 1989 season?

"I didn't really think much about it," said Hanson. "After things happen, you just need to keep going on."

In the national high point standings, the Holset/Miss Mazda boat is in third place. Hanson holds down second in the driver standings. It appears that the Holset/Mazda team is going on quite well.

Meanwhile, Chip Hanauer drove one of the most expert races of his life to propel the Miss Circus Circus to the 1989 championship heat title. Hanauer had 15-20 miles-per-hour more boat speed at the start to put Miss Budweiser in his roostertail going into the first turn. From that point, the defending Gold Cup Champion repelled every challenge from the beer boat.

As the final heat progressed, it became clear that the Bud had suffered damage from the Circus Circus' roostertail. Hanauer was then able to slow down the pace as he drove to victory.

"Winning in Seattle was more important than winning the Gold Cup," declared Hanauer. "I'll remember this race the rest of my life."

It was a very satisfying victory for Seattle's Hanauer. Just a few weeks ago in Syracuse, he lost his number one boat and appeared to literally be dead in the water. The Circus Circus crew, just as the Holset/Miss Mazda crew, rallied for a remarkable performance on day that featured more competitive racing than has been seen for several years. Even the battles for second, third, and fourth were memorable.

Heat Winners: Heat 1-A restart (Pietro's Pizzo collided with U.S. Cellular West on lap one of the original start, forcing the restart) - Circus Circus 124.402 average speed.
Heat 1-B - Holset/Miss Mazda 119.052
Heat 2-A - Winston Eagle 117.293
Heat 2-B - Miss Budweiser 129.042
Winner-take-all final - Circus Circus

Omni winds up fourth after loss to Kirkland

By TIM CLINTON

KENNEWICK — Federal Way Omni finished fourth in the Junior Legion state baseball tournament with a 7-2 loss to District 11 rival Kirkland Blue Monday.

The Feds were knocked into the loser's bracket of the 10-team tournament by a 2-1 loss to Skagit Valley Sunday morning, before coming back to blast Marysville later that day, 17-7.

Kirkland and Skagit Valley went on to play for the right to meet the Kennewick Dusters for the title.

"I'm glad to see two of the top four teams be from District 11, it shows our league is strong," said Omni head coach Dave Sugg. "It was too bad we couldn't have placed higher, but for the heat and conditions we had to play under, we did a good job."

"A big factor was nine-inning games," said assistant Ron Murray. "We don't have that all year, you run out of gas."

Federal Way went 2-2 at the tournament and finished with a 22-20 mark overall. Omni tied Kirkland for first in the District to reach state.

Curt Nelson of the Feds allowed just three hits over the first six innings Monday, but Blue still scored solo runs in the first, third and fifth.

Jamie Wright doubled in Dan Lydell for an Omni run in the fifth before Kirkland took a 7-1 lead with two in the seventh and eighth.

Mike Dunlap walked and came around on a Justin Mentink walk and ground balls by Lydell and Josh Austin before the season ended on a deep fly out by Jeff Murray.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON the Feds played in 100-degree weather and had three players leave the game because of heat-related problems, but they were still able to scorch Marysville in seven innings, 17-7.

Mike Sugg had the hottest bat in the 17-hit attack going 4-for-5 with a double and five RBI. Dan Graham went 3-for-4 with a triple, a double and four RBI, while Jeff Range also hit 3-for-4 and Joey Sonnenfeld 3-for-5 with a triple and three RBI.

Sugg picked up the win on the mound throwing five innings and allowing no runs on two hits before being relieved by Lydell to start off the sixth.

Omni started off with six runs in the bottom of the first. Range walked ahead of a Sonnenfeld triple and Sugg singled in Sonnenfeld. Graham doubled in another run and Mentink tripled him in. Austin walked and stole second with Mentink scoring on an errant throw to second. A single by Range tallied Austin.

Austin singled in Dunlap with another run in the second and Federal Way added four in the third. Graham launched a two-run triple in the rally and Sur Johnson, Grange, Sonnenfeld and Sugg all singled.

Sugg and Graham singled in a four-run fourth and Sugg scored Johnson with a double in the fifth.

Marysville came back to make it a 16-7 ballgame, but the

Seahawks

The Seattle Seahawks will face their first opponent of the year Friday, when they travel to Phoenix, Ariz. to play the Cardinals.

The preseason action will start at 7:30 p.m. at Sun Devil Stadium, and can be seen live on KING-TV Channel 5 with radio coverage on KIRO 710.

Seattle took the AFC West title last year with a 9-7 record, but lost to the Cincinnati Bengals in its playoff opener.

Chuck Knox will lead the Seahawks into three more preseason games, including two in the Kingdome later this month, before opening the regular season at Philadelphia Sept. 10.

Mariners

Seattle will be in Anaheim, Calif. today and tomorrow playing the California Angels in 7:35 p.m. games, both of which can be seen on KSTW-TV Channel 11.

The Mariners come home to the Kingdome for 7:05 p.m. games with the Chicago White Sox Friday and Saturday, followed by 1:35 p.m. action against the same team at the same place Sunday.

The Texas Rangers pay a visit at 7:05 p.m. Tuesday, and stay for a 1:35 p.m. clash next Wednesday.

All Seattle games are carried live on KIRO-Radio 710.

Tigers

The Tacoma Tigers will be playing in Phoenix, Ariz. tonight and tomorrow, wrapping up a four-game series with the Firebirds, before coming home to Cheney Stadium for three games against Vancouver this weekend.

Friday's Pacific Coast League game will begin at 7:35 p.m. along with Saturday's, while Sunday's action starts at 2 p.m.

Monday Tacoma takes an unusual one-game, one-day trip to Vancouver, before entertaining the Calgary Cannons for 7:35 p.m. action Tuesday through next Friday.

The Cannons are the Seattle Mariners' AAA farm team. All Tiger games are broadcast on KTAC-Radio 850.

SERENA TAYLOR, 14, takes a swing for the Federal Way Tennis League's tournament for girls last Wednesday at the South King County Junior Team Tye High School tennis courts.

Summer net team makes debut

The Federal Way-Des Moines Recreation District office entered a team in the South King County Junior Team Tennis League for the first time ever this year.

League play culminated with tournament play for girls last Wednesday and for boys on last Friday at Valley Ridge Park/Tyee High School tennis courts.

Tennis teams participating in the league include: Gregory-Seahurst, Tukwila

Tennis

Des Moines North and South Hurrucanes, Arbor Heights and Kent Swim and Tennis Club.

This was a growing year for Federal Way's team, which played seven matches in league play, winning one — against Tukwila.

Team tennis participants, ages 10 to 16, receive instruction and practice two days each week and league matches were held two days per week as well.

The program is held at the Sacajawea tennis courts. Members of the Federal Way team are Heather Wilcox, age 8; Marcie Sako, age 12; Serena Taylor, age 14; Kirsti Scheer, age 13; Atif Saeed, Jason Ahrens, Jim Campbell and Grant Bailey, age 13; Brian Bova, age 14, and Clark Johnson, age 15.

Instructor and coach for Federal Way Team Tennis program is Sandi Calvin, who has instructed youth and adults in the Federal Way tennis program for four years.

Team tennis offers the young tennis player the opportunity to improve skills, learn strategies of the game, grow with equal levels of competition, make friends and have fun.

The league is sponsored by the King County Natural Resources and Parks Division.

Tacoma legion haunted by close losses

By TIM CLINTON

Close losses made all the difference in the world for the Tacoma Post 138 American Legion baseball team this summer.

Even though Tacoma struggled to a 5-13-1 District 3/4 record and a 9-26-2 overall mark, seven of the losses were by only one run and four by just two runs. Out of those, four of the one-run and two of the two-run losses were in league play.

"If you turn half of those around, you're in playoff contention," said Post 138 head coach Bob Riegel of the league losses. "But I guess that's what you go through when you have a young club."

Riegel will lose only five seniors in Corey Anderson, Mike Hemphill, Gary Markham, Paul Strong and Dominic Yarrington. One other senior — Ezra Graham — is young enough that he can return to the team next year.

Aside from Graham, Riegel has 11 other players who are young enough to come back.

That gives Riegel hope for a return to post-season action next year, if those players return and play as well as they can.

"But baseball is a screw game," he said. "A player can have a good summer season and turn around and not hit a lick the next year. If someone could invent how to get out of a slump and can it, they'd make a fortune."

RIEGEL feels that one key to helping keep up the interest for his team and others in the Tacoma area is to get improved facilities.

Even though a good number of games are played at Heidelberg Park, that is occupied almost constantly and practices must be held elsewhere.

Tacoma Post 138 holds its practices at Bellarmine High School.

"That field has possibilities, but it does not get much work during the summer," said Riegel. "Some places (like Olympia and Centralia) that have good facilities with batting cages and everything, the kids are more inclined to stick around and play. When the facilities are not up to the level of others, it's hard to keep up the intense quality of play."

While Olympia won the District 3/4 championship, that team also did not have competition from a team such as the

Baseball

Connie Mack Tacoma Dodgers.

The Dodgers got four of the possible players for Tacoma Post 138, and some from other Legion teams as well.

"If we could have put some of those on this roster, we could have sent some of the others down to juniors where they're more at their level," said Riegel. "But, as Chuck Knox keeps saying, you play the hand you're dealt. I have a feeling there's enough room for all these teams in the area. The problem is when you play an Olympia or a Centralia where they don't have that."

OUT OF THE players Riegel did have to work with, he especially had praise for Corey Cosentino, Markham, Jeff Imhof and Mike Fjone.

"Cosentino was consistent all year," said Riegel. "And Imhof, Markham and Fjone came on at the end. With Fjone, everything he hit was hard for awhile. I think those young men will have good senior years. They come out to play and have some ability."

Cosentino, a junior from Stadium, hit .340 with a game-high 29 runs and 32 walks, while Foss' Markham led the team with his .351 average (34-for-97).

Imhof and Fjone are juniors from Fife High School, with Imhof hitting .299 and leading in at-bats (117), runs with Cosentino (29), hits (35) and RBI (26). Fjone hit .300 (33-for-110).

Stadium's Hemphill hit for a .313 average with a team-high three home runs, while Fife's Craig Davidson hit .309 and Graham .286.

Bellarmine's John Parks hit .272 and Yarrington .270 in part-time play.

Other players included Jeff Williams of Foss (.182), Foss' Strong (.158), Bellarmine's David Bufalini (.147), Stadium's Jeff Wilfong (.077), Fife's Anderson (.048) and Clint Davidson (.073) and Stadium freshman Erik Brubaker (.057). Getting only three at-bats at the Senior Legion level was Stadium's Jeff Hudson.

Pitching-wise, Anderson was the most used but was a victim of several one-run losses to finish with a 2-8 record.

Imhof went 1-2 and Craig Davidson 2-4, with Strong going 2-2 and Brubaker 1-1. Clint Davidson was 1-6.

Franciscans set annual golf tournament

The Franciscan Fellowship, a men's fundraising and service group from St. Francis Community Hospital of Federal Way, has scheduled its annual golf tournament for Sept. 7 at the North Shore Golf Course.

The format is an 18-hole, 4-person scramble with a shotgun start at 1:30 p.m. Check-in will be prior to the start from 12:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The cost of the tournament is $60 per person, which includes green fees, power golf cart, lunch and dinner. An awards ceremony and dinner will follow golfing at 6:30 p.m. Non-golfing spouses and guests can join tournament participants for dinner at a cost of $10 each.

Prizes will include hole in one, trip for two to Hawaii or cruise for two to Mexico; first through 10th places; KP and long drive.

Members of the tournament committee include Tom Kabeary, Dean Gullikson, Bob Krotz, Jim Layton, Jack Stanford, Ron Gintz and David Hopkins. Proceeds from the tournament will be used to benefit St. Francis Community Hospital.

For additional information or a registration form, call Dean Gullikson, chairman of the Franciscan Fellowship, at 852-9877, or the hospital's Community Involvement Department at 952-7910.

Omni finishes fourth

Feds were still able to stop the game on a 10-run rule with a run in the bottom of the seventh, as Wright walked, stole second and scored on a Sonnenfeld single.

GRAHAM THREW seven innings of shutout ball against Skagit Valley that morning, but that wasn't enough for the tournament's nine-inning format.

The Feds had taken a 1-0 lead, as Sonnenfeld hit into an error, stole second and scored on a base hit by Sugg in the bottom of the first.

But Skagit scored two in the eighth on wild pitches, then held on for the win.

Graham lasted until two were out in the seventh and struck out eight, allowing four hits and the two runs, and Johnson finished off the game in relief.

Omni outthit Skagit, 7-4, led by the 2-for-4 outing of Sonnenfeld.

Sonnenfeld, who had to play from the first inning on with an injured shin, also turned a bases-loaded double play to get his team out of a jam in the fifth.

Federal Way Legion peaked before playoffs

By TIM CLINTON
At times this summer, the Federal Way Omni American Legion baseball team played like it could beat anybody. Unfortunately, the Feds were not able to knock anybody off when it came time for the playoffs.

Omni finished third in the District 11 standings with an 11-6-1 record behind Kent Post 15 and Kent Security (both 15-3), and went 23-14-1 overall.

Along the way, the Feds captured second out of 12 teams at the Vern Bean Classic in Bellevue and third at the Silverdale Tournament. They also took fourth at a tournament in Selah in June, and won their division there against Tacoma-area champion Olympia and the Yakima Valley Pepsi Pak.

Federal Way won its first six games of the season, won seven of nine between June 26 and July 9 and five of six between the July 12-15 Vern Bean Classic and a 9-4 win over Kent Security July 18.

The Feds lost four of their last five after that, though, with the lone win being an 8-6 decision over their own alumni July 24.

The last two losses came at last weekend's Division II tournament in Kent, leaving Omni two games shy of state.

The losses were at the hands of the two teams that went on to state — Kent Security and Kent Post 15.

Federal Way had split with Security in two regular season games, but lost the tournament opener to that team, 11-4, before dropping a loser-out game to Kent Post 15, 5-3. Post 15 beat the Feds four times in all this year, with the last being the closest.

"At the Vern Bean Classic we faced good teams, and we realized we could play with them," said Federal Way head coach Tom Wagner. "We had a good season and I'm happy, but I'm not happy that we did not win districts. I felt we should have won that. We were capable of beating anyone on any given night, but we also lost to teams we shouldn't have lost to."

WAGNER FELT his team had good offensive production this year, and the Feds did drive in an average of 6.13 runs per game to go with a .275 team batting average.

"And some kids played

Baseball

outstanding defense — like (senior shortstop) Jamie Sonnenfeld," said Wagner. "But overall we lacked a little experience and consistency, although we saw improvement as the year went on."

"The pitching was a little inconsistent. Some of the guys would have a good game one day and be all over the place the next. We had way too many walks."

Federal Way pitchers allowed 183 walks while striking out only 177.

"I hope in the future our trade mark is to throw strikes and play good defense," said Wagner.

Offensively walks were a major weapon for the Feds, as they drew 246 (the team record is 298, but that was in a 55-game season). They struck out 241 times this year at the plate.

No records were set this year, although Omni did lose less games than any team (14) since the 1979 squad went 18-8 overall. Federal Way's 38 games were also less than any team in the 1980's by two contests, although the Feds had seven cancelled by rain.

WAGNER'S SON, Jeff, was the leader in seven offensive categories.

He led among regular players with his .373 batting average, and had the most at-bats (110), runs (33), hits (41), RBI (35), doubles (8) and home runs (8). His season home run total ties him for third on the Feds' all-time list behind Mike Meyers (12) and Marc Crevling (9).

Aaron Martin had eight home runs just last year, but cooled off to four this summer. Allen Hensley was next on the team with two, both of which were grand slams.

Matt Wimmer hit .333 and led in triples (5) while tying Marty Mogensen for the lead in sacrifices at five each, and Doug Conzatti finished with a .324 average.

Mogensen hit .310 and Mark Nielsen .283 with a team-high 22 stolen bases and three times hit by a pitch. Martin was right behind at .281 while leading in walks (30, eight behind the record) and strikeouts (33).

Floyd French led or tied for the lead in every pitching statistic except earned run average. He led with his 62 innings, eight wins, three saves, 59 strikeouts, 45 runs allowed, 30 earned runs, 58 hits, 38 walks and six hit batters, while tying Terry Holbrook and Wagner for the most losses at three.

Wimmer had the lowest earned run average at 1.90, albeit in 19 innings, while Danny Graham went 1-1, 2.50 and Aaron Martin 3-0, 2.57.

Chris Martin finished at 1-1, 2.98 with one save, with Holbrook going 2-3 with two saves and Wagner 2-3 with one save. Mike Sugg, who split time with the Junior Legion team, went 3-0.

OUT OF THE 16 players on Federal Way's roster at the end of the year, seven will be too old to return next year in Conzatti, Mogensen, Aaron Martin, Hensley, French, Holbrook and Sonnenfeld.

Two high school graduates — Wimmer and Nielsen — will still be young enough to play next year, while French will be a senior but too old.

Eligible to return to Legion play after senior seasons at school are Wagner, shortstop

Gregg Landskov, Chris Martin and catcher Mike Dunlap. Center fielder Milt DeAsis, Sugg and Graham will only be in their junior years at school.

"And we have good players coming up from the Junior Legion team," said Wagner. "I think we'll have a real good ballclub next year."

Wagner was assisted by Nick Snider, and Stacy Hart served as manager and bat boy.

Local athletes head to Centennial Games

Federal Way area athletes will be joining other competitors in Spokane Aug. 10-13 to vie for gold, silver and bronze medals in the Washington Centennial Summer Games.

Nearly 3,200 Washington athletes will compete in more than 30 events at the Olympic-style competition. Events will range from traditional team sports like basketball to less well-known sports like orienteering and black powder shooting. Several physically disabled sports (PDS), such as wheelchair tennis, will also be included in the games.

Competitors will range in age and background, and all hold amateur status in the sports in which they will be competing.

Opening ceremonies will run 8-9 p.m. tomorrow at Joe Albi Stadium. Closing ceremonies are scheduled for Sunday, 3-4 p.m., in Riverfront Park.

The following is a list of Federal Way area athletes competing in Zone 5 (King County):

Lisa Allen, softball, 16, Federal Way; Kelly Baker, track and field, 16, Federal Way; Rusty Belknap, PD swimming, 17, Auburn; Carl Buena, track and field, 18, Federal Way; Brian Cartwright, track and field, 13; Kent; Melia Filmore, track and field, 13, Federal Way; Pete Firth, track and field, 41, Federal Way; Kathy Kennedy, sailboarding, adult, Federal Way; Jim Kennedy, sailboarding, adult, Federal Way;

Mini-golf course plays tougher than it looks

This is another biweekly article on fun south-end activities. By TONY C. DUARTE

"We want to play golf," two scraggly looking men said as they shuffled into the building. The clerk immediately recognized that this was not Chip and Chet from the country club across the street. These men had a purpose. They wanted to play miniature golf.

"That'll be $2.50 each." He spoke quickly, then pointed them in the direction of putters lying on the counter. A basket of multi-colored balls, which looked like black-market easter eggs, sat on the floor.

The men fearlessly strode out the door, surveyed the scene with steely eyes, and set out to conquer the ravenous obstacle course called miniature golf at the Riverbend Golf Complex in Kent.

Miniature golf is one of the most frustrating games to the untrained eye, and the course at Riverbend is no different.

THE IDEA seems simple enough: with a special club, propel a small, dimpled ball through a series of bizarre obstructions apparently designed by a renegade band of Santa's elves.

Once past the barriers, the object is to put the small ball in the small hole found at the end of each mini-expedition in as few strokes as possible.

At Riverbend, they say it should take two strokes for each of its 18 holes. The entire course is a par two. "Par" is a fancy golfing term used to indicate the number of strokes it would take the average local miniature golf pro to sink his ball.

The course is full of minor oddities of natural and supernatural consequences. We discovered the first of these phenomena at the third hole, where the obstacle is supposed to be a suspended post that swings directly over and inches above the hole.

It might have had more effect had the pole not been lying on the ground next to the hole, in the process of being painted.

At the fourth hole we learned a selective drought had hit Riverbend. All water hazards were bone dry while sprinklers sprayed an adjacent lawn. This reduced our fear of diving in for loose balls, but we had to wonder if depletion of the ozone layer was to blame for this ominous development.

WE CONCLUDED that another environmental factor—acid rain—was responsible for eroding the crumbling brick wall around the Evil Knievel ramp jump at the eighth hole. But we couldn't understand how this could be the same par as the straight 15-foot first hole or the skyscraper at the sixth hole.

But ours was not to wonder. Ours was to loop. Specifically, to loop-the-loop on the ninth hole, a feat that proved to be less intimidating than it looked.

Most miniature golf courses, in fact, are not as intimidating as they appear. All offer different maze setups.

Jazwieck's in Everett may have the best design. The Seattle Center and Riverbend courses are roughly the same, except Riverbend features pre-slashed divots in the tee-off area of each hole. MG's, also in Kent, is strictly for the young Billys and Biffs, with only a five-hole, indoor course.

Despite hitting my ball off the course twice on the same hole and my partner hitting his ball into a neighboring water trap, we shared a belief that we at least played better than the girl behind us in a USC sweater.

SEARS PRICING PLEDGE: Yes, we'll meet or beat the competition's current advertised price on the identical item. Just bring the competition's current ad to any of our Retail Stores.

This offer applies to current merchandise in our Retail Stores only. Excludes clearance, closeouts, Sears catalog, and special services such as eyewear and dentistry. Merchandise in this circular available at most larger Sears stores. Unless qualified, all prices are Sears everyday regular prices. A special purchase, though not reduced, is an exceptional value. # Mariners' scorekeeper uses good judgement

Steve Ellis sits unnoticed when he watches the Seattle Mariners play baseball in the Kingdome.

But each decision he makes affects Major League and American League records, as well as Mariner statistics.

Ellis, a 1967 Highline High School graduate, is the Mariners' official scorer.

Since the start of the 1986 season, he has been employed by the American League under the auspices of public relations director Phyllis Merhigey. In that time he has seen his share of surprises.

One such incident happened his first year on the job.

MILWAUKEE'S Robin Yount was at bat with one out and a runner on first base. The baserunner took off for second on the next pitch.

Yount struck out, stepped in front of the catcher and obstructed the throw. The runner was called out due to batter interference. Was there an error on the play? Ellis wasn't sure.

"I ended up calling the Elias Sports Bureau," he remembers. "The ruling was a double play with no error."

Ellis possesses an extensive background in sports and general news writing. He majored in sociology and minored in communications at the University of Washington after graduating from Highline.

As a Pirate, he scored for the baseball team, a continuation from his days as junior-high scorer.

Upon graduation in 1968, he served a summer as sports stringer for the Highline Times.

AS A HUSKY, Ellis covered high school and minor-college sports for the UW Daily.

After three-year stints as a Seattle Times sports reporter and an Air Force cadet, he joined the Times as a general news reporter in 1975.

A year later, he began freelance writing and string-ing for the Associated Press. He covered M's games regularly.

Midway through the 1984 baseball season, then-American League public relations director Bob Porter asked Ellis if he would be interested in filling the vacant scorers' job for the Mariners. He jumped at the chance.

Because AP considered his new duties a conflict of interest, he switched his stringing affiliation to United Press International. He still continues his freelance writing.

"YOU MIGHT SAY that I'm self-employed," Ellis says. "I cover the Huskies and Sonics as a stringer for UPI. I'm also in the Air Force Reserve."

When performing his scorers' duties, Ellis tries to exercise good judgment and consistency.

"My first couple of years were a little shaky," he admits. "I talked to the players a lot then. Now I do it less often. It's easier to be objective."

"In fact, the American League encourages a minimum of fraternizing with players. I think it's better for them and for me."

To make proper calls, Ellis takes into account such factors as velocity on grounders, the defender's normal range, and the speed of the batter and runner. The definition of "ordinary effort" is tough to judge.

Ellis follows a number of personal rules to help his scoring proficiency.

ONE IS TO watch the game carefully. Another is to make calls quickly. It's desirable to get the call recorded before the next pitch to avoid being influenced by the next play, he says. Also, the electronic media needs to know as soon as possible.

In the future, Ellis intends to cut down his scoring schedule to avoid burnout. Seeing the Mariners finally play .500 baseball has increased his enthusiasm.

"This job is every person's dream," states Ellis.

"However, you need to stay alert. Surprises like my Yount experience can occur anytime."

TJ grad gets a kick out of Olympic Sports Festival

By CHUCK MINGORI

One of Thomas Jefferson High School's premiere boys' soccer players recently brought home a gold medal from the 1989 U.S. Olympic Festival in Norman, Okla.

Shannan Seelig, a standout at Thomas Jefferson High School for the past three years who is headed to Illinois State University on a soccer scholarship, played for the winning West team at the festival, held July 15-30.

"It was just a great experience, something I'll never forget," said Seelig, who was a member of the 1988 Class AAA state championship boys' soccer team at Thomas Jefferson.

Seelig participated in a national training session at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., June 2-4 and later was one of 14 players in his age group selected to play in the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Seelig's West team defeated the East squad in the gold medal game, 5-2. As a participant in this year's U.S. Olympic Festival, Seelig will now be placed among a pool of players who will be selected for future A and B squads working toward spots on the 1992 U.S. Olympic team.

Soccer players must be under 23 years of age when the competition for the 1992 Olympic games rolls around. Seelig will be 22 years of age in 1992. Before the next Olympic games are held, however, there will be two more Olympic Sports Festivals — one in Minneapolis in 1990 and another in Los Angeles in 1991.

The Olympic men's soccer coach will remain in close contact with future Olympic hopefuls through their college teams.

Seelig is scheduled to leave for Illinois State University tomorrow. Practices will begin next Monday.

"If I have a good college season, hopefully I'll be in Minneapolis for next year's sports festival," said Seelig.

SEELIG WILL be in contention for one of the two defensive positions that opened up at Illinois State following the graduation of two key defenders. Illinois State finished just one game away from making the NCAA tournament last year.

"We're really looking forward to a good season," said Seelig. "Making the NCAA tournament is our goal."

Participating in the U.S. Olympic Festival was a moving experience for Seelig, who was one of nearly 4,200 athletes from the United States competing in 37 sports.

He was among those who were overwhelmed by emotion during a sensational opening ceremony attended by 76,014 people at Owen Field on the campus of the University of Oklahoma.

Spectators and athletes heard from former President Ronald Reagan. The opening ceremonies also included appearances by Barry Switzer, who resigned as coach of a scandal-ridden Oklahoma football team in June; 1978 Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims; Florence Griffith Joyner, who carried the torch into the stadium; Bob Hope; and the Oak Ridge Boys.

"It almost brings a tear to your eyes," said Seelig, who added that participating in the U.S. Olympic Festival is "like winning the state championship. And then winning the gold medal capped off a great two weeks. It made it all worth it."

SEELIG SAW plenty of playing time. He played the entire second half of the first two games, the entire third game and the second half of the gold medal game.

Seelig's West team beat the East, 2-0, in the opener and then added a 3-0 win over the South in its second outing. Because the West already had clinched a spot in the gold medal match, the West used a mixed lineup and held out many starters in the third game, a 2-1 loss to the North, prior to coming back to win the game for the gold against the East in the finale.

Also playing for the West from Washington were Clint Carnell of the Seattle Storm and Jeff Betts of San Diego State.

Seelig is no stranger to Olympic Development competition. He was a member of the U.S. West Regional U-16 team two years ago and also was on the U-17 team last year. Many of those same players were reunited for the U.S. Olympic Festival.

"It's almost like a reunion when we get together," said Seelig.

As far as the level of play, it was the best Seelig has been a part of as a player.

"That was the highest level of competition I've ever played in," he said. "It helped me a lot, because that's exactly how college is. It helps me get ready for it (college), so it's not a big shock."

Being part of the U.S. Olympic Festival also allowed Seelig to experience the Olympic movement first hand.

"It gives you a taste of what the Olympics are like and what they're about," he said. "There's so much emotion. It was great."

Humpy run is ready to hit Puget Sound

Dick Benbow

From the state Department of Fisheries comes word that the Skagit River is expecting a record run of pink (also known as humpy) salmon. A six-salmon limit is now in effect. Barbless hooks are required. All coho must be released as well as chinook between the mouth of Gilligan Creek and the mouth of the Cascade River.

Locally, pier anglers at Redondo have been hitting a few pinks. The technique caught my curiosity, so I checked into it last weekend. Preparation begins with her-ring strips filleted the night before and soaked in a hot-pink dye, the same kind used by steelheaders to give color to fish eggs.

The strips are hooked to a standard double-hook salmon tie so that they spin. The leader is shortened to 4 feet and attached to a 1½-ounce sinker with a sliding float, or bobber. A stop is set to hold the sinker below the float some 15 feet. The trick is to wait for a strike that solidly takes the float down. Some takes are like a trout nibbling worms and you must wait till the float pops under.

Out in the salt water I like to fish for pinks with a red buzz bomb. I buy a white, 4-inch light model and paint it red. In places where pinks mill prior to running up a river, you can hit fish usually within 40 feet of the surface on an incoming tide. Once hooked, they have an unusual habit of running a short distance and shaking their head, running off again and
