THESE YOUNGSTERS may be jumping the gun, but it won't be long before they'll be boarding buses for the first day of school on Sept. 5. Inside today's Federal Way News you will find a special section devoted to back-to-school information, including this year's bus schedule. In addition, between now and Sept. 5, the Federal Way News will print stories on what's new at each of the area's 26 schools. For more, see page C-1.

Flag City

City's image sought in Old Glory array

By MELODIE STEIGER

It was one of those middle-of-the-night inspirations that brought it all together for Lynne Schow: Federal Way, City of Flags, she thought. Or, Federal Way, Flag City.

Either way, Schow said United States flags and Federal Way belong together. Row upon row of snapping, flapping flags in front of businesses, along roadways and near freeway entrances should give this new city the identity it needs.

U.S. flags would give visible meaning to the "Federal" in Federal Way, Schow said.

"And think of it, having two or three flags per block on both sides of the road, and lighted at night. Imagine how beautiful that would be," she added.

Schow says the ball is rolling on her City of Flags, and fast. She took the proposal to the Federal Way chapter of Soroptimist International, a businesswomen's club of which she is a member. "You'd have thought the Seahawks had scored a touchdown," she said. "They applauded and they cheered — and this was a business meeting."

Schow, a Federal Way resident and co-owner of All-Night Printery, says she's gotten equal enthusiasm from the Federal Way Chamber of Commerce, most city council candidates and several individual businesses, some of which already have informally agreed to foot some of the bill for flags and poles.

Schow says she's still waiting to hear from other service organizations, which she hopes will help sponsor the purchase of the flags and their upkeep. She's not too worried about their response.

"We've not heard a negative word yet," she said.

THE DETAILS of Flag City, as it's so far been called, are still sketchy. "We're still going on gut feelings," Schow said.

But a few things are certain. Flags, poles, installation and lights will cost about $800 apiece. And should the Soroptimists agree to take the project on, enough funding now exists for at least 10 flags.

Schow hopes to see the first 10, plus 20 more later, placed alongside Southwest Campus Drive, from First Avenue South

Legal tangle snarls early apartment control

By KURT HERZOG

Apartment complexes have become the universal whipping boy in Federal Way politics.

Many credit the deluge of apartment complexes — called multi-family development in land use jargon — with finally incorporating Federal Way.

They also have become one of the most important issues in the Federal Way City Council elections, with seven of the fourteen candidates supporting a moratorium, or temporary halt, to all apartment development in Federal Way.

In fact, even the candidates who don't support a moratorium say apartments are at best a necessary evil, providing affordable housing, but congesting roads, crowding schools and lowering property values.

Regardless of whether they support a moratorium or not, almost all the candidates say they want to control apartment development here. Most say they want to wrest control of growth away from King County's Building and Land Development Division (BALD) as soon as possible.

Controlling building permits for apartment projects will influence strongly when the city council decides to officially incorporate Federal Way.

THE CITY council will be elected Sept. 19 and will be sworn in on Sept. 30. The new council will have until March 10, 1990, to officially incorporate Federal Way. Several candidates say they want to incorporate earlier to prevent an even greater onslaught of apartments.

At the heart of the issue is a legal dilemma: Just when can the city refuse to allow more apartments? Can the city refuse to allow projects to be built even if developers have already applied for, and received, their building permits from BALD?

Or does Federal Way have to wait until it officially incorporates, shoving BALD out of the picture but allowing previously approved apartments to be built.

The answer is quite simple: Nobody really knows.

There has never been a legal challenge involving the refusal of a previously approved project by a newly incorporated city and opinions among land-use attorneys and other experts vary.

In fact, just when a developer is "vested," or legally entitled to go ahead with a project, was one of the subjects of a workshop council candidates attended last night sponsored by the Association of Washington Cities.

At an earlier AWC meeting, candidates were told by one attorney that developers are vested as long as they have

Hilyer dives into challenging race

By LYNN FRANCISCO

Bruce Hilyer is not always comfortable talking about himself.

He'd rather stay with the issues that he hopes will propel him into the office of King County Executive this fall.

"I'm used to being asked about me as a politician, but not about ME, as a person," he says with an uncharacteristically shy smile.

But the Democratic candidate finds it almost impossible to be coy or deceptive when asked what makes him tick.

And, before he knows it, Hilyer has revealed that he's "impatient, and action-oriented," and that he often has to force himself to slow down and think through a decision.

THAT WAS THE CASE with his decision to run for county executive.

He began thinking about the race more than a year ago, talking it over with friends and with his wife, Rhonda Hilyer, an executive with a local labor union.

Hilyer, 38, says he didn't listen when advisors told him the odds were high against a relative newcomer beating incumbent Tim Hill.

Group Health strike ends

Nurses thrilled with two-year pact

By LYNN KEEBAUGH

If the size of the party is any indication of the size of the success, Group Health Cooperative nurses gained a substantial victory.

"There was one big party," said District 1199 Northwest Union Treasurer Eileen Cody, after the nurses voted Sunday 601-5 to accept the latest contract offer from Group Health.

Nurses are pleased with the 19 percent pay raise to be phased in over the next two years and Group Health administrators are pleased to get back to business as usual.

"It's sad that it had to come to a strike and last as long as it did, but Group Health is happy with the new contract and happy it stays within the financial boundaries it set in April," said Don Glickstein, a spokesman for Group Health.

Besides disrupting service to Group Health's 434,000 members, the strike was costing the co-op heavily. Glickstein said Group Health spent between $2 and $3 million on strike replacements during the 5½ week walk-out.

Glickstein said Group Health officials are promising members they won't see their rates increased to make up for the loss.

"We're going to be looking for places where we can mitigate, or ease, the impact. It will probably be someplace like capital programs," he added.

The union's 1,300 Group Health nurses have more to be happy about than salaries, which will range from $28,371 for a beginning nurse to $43,285 for a full-time nurse with 20 years' experience by the end of 1991.

Nurses also received an income protection clause that will force Group Health to lay off nurses during slow times instead of cutting everyone's salaries. That was a major morale problem before the strike, Cody said. Nurses averaged 12 percent pay cuts when their hours were cut by one hour a day.

Also, an annual fund of up to $100,000 will keep nurses on the job or send them to continuing education if patient loads dip.

The contract also enhances nurses' ability to have a say in decisions that affect nursing, including staffing issues, said Glickstein. Group Health has always made that a priority, he said.

Glickstein said operations at most Group Health clinics, including the one in Federal Way, should be back to normal by the end of this week. Operations at Group Health hospital facilities should be back on track by the end of next week.

Fire department talks head to arbitration

By MELODIE STEIGER

Arbitration appears to be imminent in talks between Fire District 39 and its firefighters' union.

Negotiations between the two sides were declared at an impasse late last week, nearly two months after firefighters soundly rejected a proposed contract put forth by the negotiating teams.

Greg Brozek, president of the firefighters' union, nevertheless said he is hopeful that arbitration can be avoided. Selecting a professional arbitrator to draw up a contract could take as long as two months, he said, which may be enough time to come to terms with the department.

"If everyone wants, we can hopefully come up with something before then," Brozek said.

If binding arbitration goes into effect, both sides will agree to abide by a contract drawn up by an objective arbitrator.

A professional mediator was called into fire department negotiations in March, after talks had gone on for about a year. The mediator, supplied by the Public Employees Relations Commission, helped create the contract rejected last June, 65 votes to 4.

Brozek said back then that he expected the firefighters to turn thumbs-down on the proposal, although not by that large a margin.

He says now that the remaining differences between union and administration demands

Vote by mail would cure election woes

Washington is among eight states that have pioneered voting by mail. The results are mainly happy, and indicate the method will work in regular elections, increasing voter turnout while driving down the cost of the process.

Both of those facts are persuasive with voters, but so far, in King County, the method has been limited to special elections, like the one that secured cityhood for Federal Way and SeaTac in March.

Are incumbents elsewhere leery of the idea? Would it take away the incumbents' advantage? That's not likely. More likely would be the elimination of exit polls in national and statewide races.

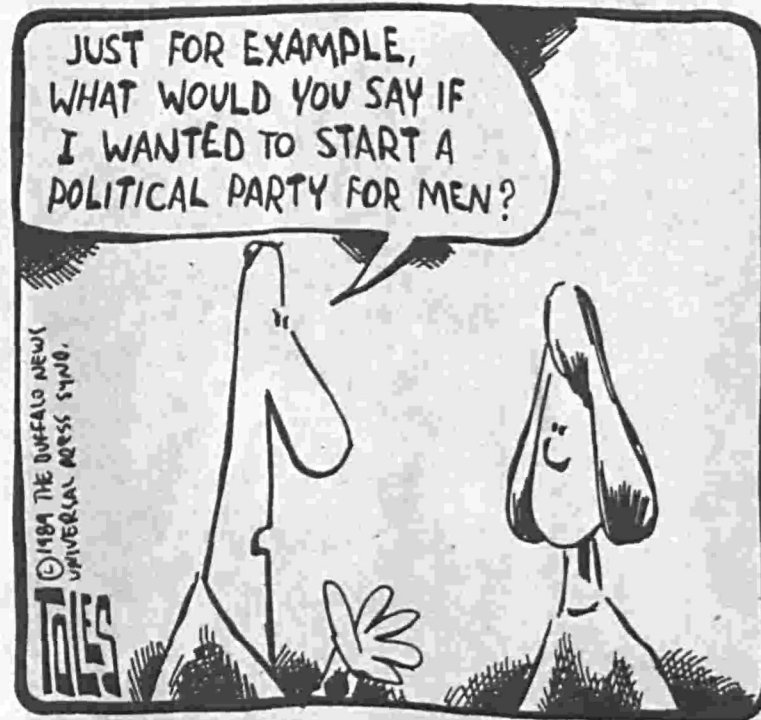

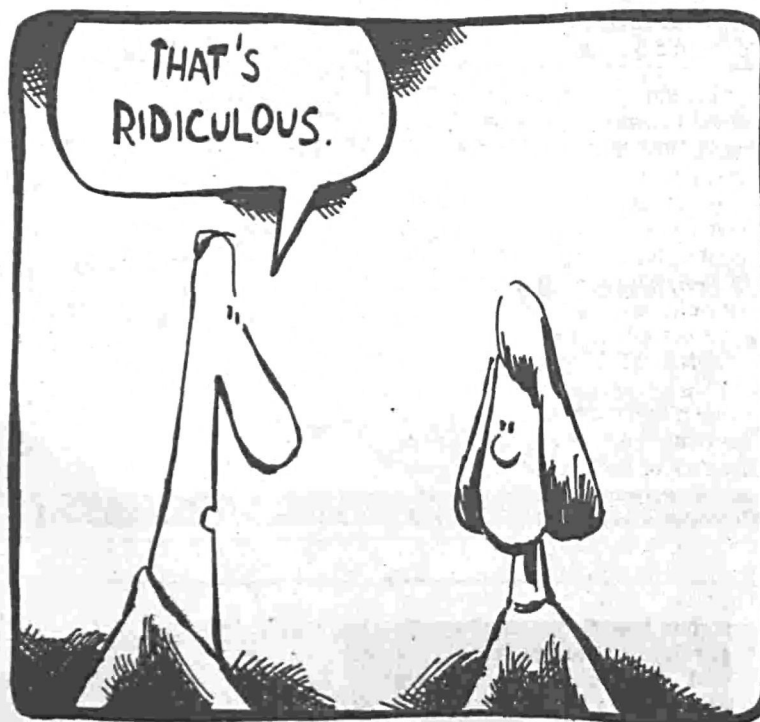

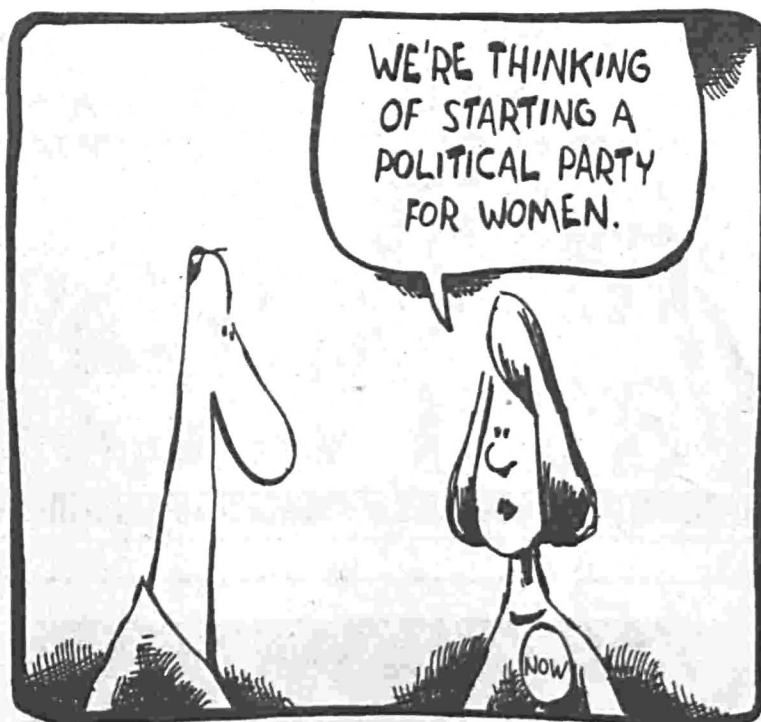

As those polls have forecast winners before voters could get home from the office, it has been mentioned as a main reason for not voting. It would be fine to have that reason removed, not only because it is offensive to have our prerogative taken from us by high-tech miracles that imply we are trivial. But also because we hear too many other reasons why voting is avoided.

The leading causes mentioned are that "it just doesn't matter," or that "none of the candidates is any good." Perhaps. But it occurs to us that voters might feel it mattered more if a mail-in ballot arrived with their tax bills.

As for candidates, they are only as good as we make them. In Seattle, voters will consider at least a dozen office-seekers in the mayor's race alone, another dozen for council. In SeaTac and Federal Way, 14 candidates each are on the ballot. There also will be elections for King County Council and the Port of Seattle.

Even assuming all the candidates are ill-equipped for the jobs they seek, it does not make sense to hand them high office because they spent more money, had a better public relations campaign, or exploited a low turnout. We urge voters to tell candidates and elections officials that voting by mail is a sensible remedy to several common election ailments.

If candidates know they can't buy the office, it might increase both the quantity and quality of those who seek office.

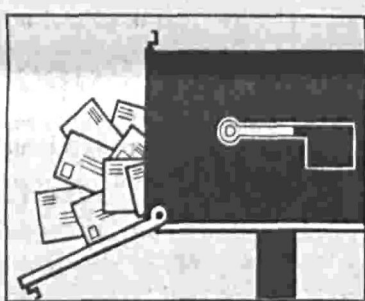

Brochure merits careful reading

Editor:
Last week in the mail I got a brochure from Lynn Templeton, who is running for Federal Way City Council, Position 7. It was pretty long, but I took the trouble to read it.

The brochure was thoughtful and covered nearly every point that one could wish a candidate to speak to, in more depth than is customary in campaign literature. I liked nearly everything I read. It seems to me that this young man (with whom I'm barely acquainted, by the way) is the kind of public-spirited person we must have on our new city's first council.

I've talked with a couple of people who say that Lynn Templeton is almost too good to be true — that he's too politically experienced and straightforward and honest to be elected. But Federal Way is not Chicago, and I can't believe we'd hold such qualities against him.

I hope that everyone who got his mailing has read it carefully. It's impressive. Lynn is impressive.

How ounce of beer made husband late

A friend wrote to tell me his bookshelf fell off the wall, dumping a load of prose on the floor, right in the middle of some television show he was watching.

"The first thing I thought of," he said, "was which ounce was the one that brought it down?" My friend is eccentric. He reads books about the theory of chaos. He imagines himself having a heart attack on the roof, and his mother having to carry him down.

But I am a tolerant man. I decided to test his theory of catastrophes around my own household. The other day, my son stepped on a barnacle and cut his foot. Rather than lecture him about wearing his sandals, I told him the crucial ounce in this case was his ignorance of the law of perspective.

"If a giant was walking around and stepping on people, you'd probably like to have a sharp little hat to keep him from crunching you, huh?"

He agreed, and looked at

me strangely.

The next day, my wife asked why I was late getting home from the golf course. Most guys would just admit they stayed for an extra beer. But I asked for a philosophical pause.

"Give me a moment," I said, "to determine what was the single most crucial variable here, the guilty ounce." As I stood there in the hallway, feeling sudsy and stupid, I hit on the solution.

"It must have been a beer commercial," I said. She was baffled. "You stayed to watch a beer commercial?"

"No, it was a commercial I saw when I was 15."

She used a similar logic on me when I asked why it cost $116 to wallpaper our daughter's bedroom. I said it seemed like an awful lot for wallpaper. She said I was missing the point.

The wallpaper, she pointed out, only cost about $32. The expensive part was the architect she hired to consult on the color scheme. "It was only over the phone, but at 80 bucks a minute, those architects add up," she said.

I could see that my friend's theory had some real value. It could even be applied to national problems like inflation or unemployment. Rather than blaming them on George Bush we could point to Norwegian interference — back in the days when they were trying to sail to Spain and stumbled on America.

In our own community, this theory could be used to account for gridlock. Rather than blaming the county planners, we could point to the invention of asphalt, or even to the development of combustion engines, or self-serve gas stations.

I will admit it is tough to identify the crucial ounce that led to some of our present problems. But this makes as much sense as most of the solutions offered by candidates lately.

A moratorium on growth, for instance, is like cutting down a tree to prevent freedom of the press. Besides, it ignores the crucial ounce in the disaster of unchecked growth.

The crucial ounce? I'm still pondering it, but I think it was a certain family in Twin Lakes. Things were fine here before they moved in.

We should be 'mighty proud' of local team

My trip to Spokane for the 1989 Washington Centennial Summer Games was well worth the trouble. Weather was excellent for the whole weekend, and I thoroughly enjoyed myself.

Gov. Booth Gardner should be complimented for having been there in person for the very impressive opening ceremonies and thus encouraging all the participants. I am sure his presence helped immeasurably to add to the spirit of good sportsmanship, fellowship and pride that was the theme of the entire event.

My granddaughter, Shannon Barrett, played with her volleyball team from Decatur and Federal Way high schools and everyone can be mighty proud of the efforts those girls put forth for the honor of their school. While it is true they did not win, they surely did their very best.

The first two games, the Federal Way Juniors played against teams that had played together for a long time and were quite good. Their obvious long hours of practice and playing together gave our girls a pretty rough time, most especially since they did not have this same advantage.

However, they did win their next game against a team with whom they were much more evenly matched. They lost the fourth game but the opposing team had a real battle on its hands as our girls really played well together and met them fairly, play for play.

Guest Opinion
By Bob Bunn

I truly believe the Federal Way team had the largest representation of interested onlookers, all of whom had come about 300 miles just to cheer them on. In my book, that says something mighty positive about how Federal Way-ites back their own. The team can be mighty proud of this fact.

Talking with coach Paul Jensen after the games, he told me they are thinking about holding this type of event every two years and also there is some talk about holding both summer and winter games every year.

In my humble opinion, this would be a very worthwhile and wholesome program that could prove most beneficial to each and every contestant. It teaches them at an early age that there is a great big beautiful world outside the confines of their home, school, community and that other folks, just like them, have much the same problems, interests and frustrations as they have. By the necessitated intermingling, they could even get some ideas or suggestions from their contemporaries that will prove helpful to them in their individual situations.

PHIL "BUZZ" BUSSMEIR is a little sheepish in the wake of an incident during which a boat fouled the lines of anglers at the Dash Point pier. Bussmeir was busy flying a kite out the back of the boat and the driver didn't heed his warning to stay clear of the pier. "Fellas, it won't happen again..." writes Bussmeir.

Kite flyer apologizes to angry anglers

Editor:
Apologies to the Dash Point fishermen who lost their lures to the propeller of a gray and white boat flying a stunt kite in front of the pier a few weeks past.

I asked the driver to stay out 200 feet so the kite itself would still be clear of you guys, but when I looked over my shoulder and saw the pier within close range, I realized I was not going to be very popular.

Upon taking the boat out of the water, I found at least five fishing lines around the prop. No lures survived the run to Des Moines, but I could remember the anger and anguish I have felt in the past while fishing from the pier.

Fellas, it won't happen again when we're out there. I hope that the next time your fists are in the air, you are saying, "Right on," "Go for it," or "All right!" instead of, $%&*#%$?!"

Campaign keeps Hilyer on the run

"I didn't want to know the odds. I wanted to hear how I could turn those odds around," he says.

He quickly learned that 14-hour days and virtual abandonment of his family, including 19-year-old stepson, Jeffrey and 4-year-old son, Brett, were the price of fighting the odds.

GONE ARE weekends spent in his favorite activities — salmon and trout fishing (this is the first year he's missed opening day of trout season), flying small airplanes and reading "mindless spy novels."

Gone, too, are home-cooked meals. Hilyer is the cook in his family, but his grueling schedule has forced the family to survive on take-out meals.

And, he shakes his head as he admits what a rare treat it was on a recent evening when he got home at 7 p.m. — early enough to take Brett swimming.

HILYER HAS EVEN abandoned his law practice for the duration of the campaign, living on his wife's salary and on savings.

But he says he knew there would be sacrifices, and he claims they are worth it.

Hilyer was born in Seattle, grew up on the eastside, and went to law school at the University of Washington. Currently he lives in Richmond Beach, in a pleasant home with an expansive view of Puget Sound.

His father, Gale P. Hilyer, was a well-known trial attorney in the Seattle area, before his death. His mother, Patricia Stotland, is still active in political causes.

HILYER'S DECISION to run for office was prompted in part by a conviction that the county is heading down an irrevocable path, with economic prosperity winning out over the environment.

"This place is changing, and the people (elected officials) we have now are not able to cope with the changes. If something isn't done soon, we're going to lose what's best about this place," he says.

Hilyer is a former legal counsel to Seattle Mayor Charles Royer, and his experience in that office convinced him that the county executive has more authority than the mayor to confront regional issues.

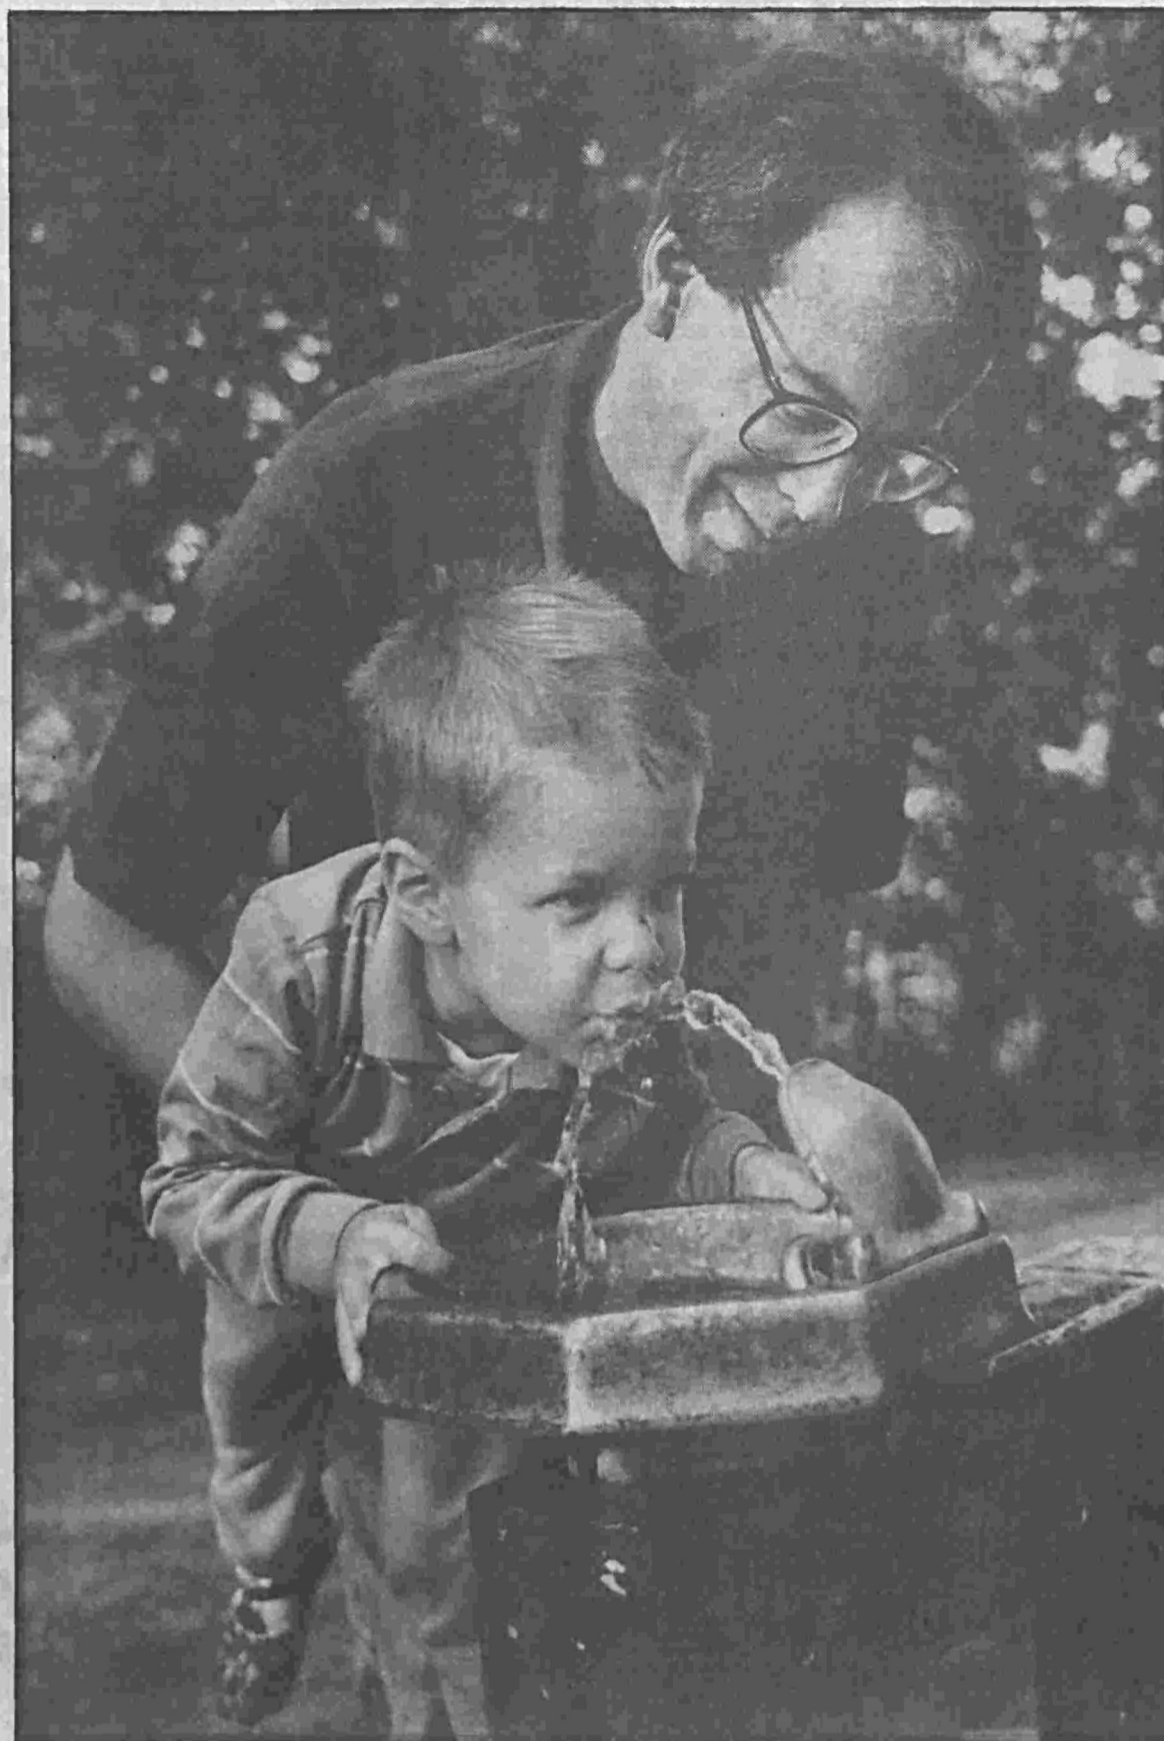

He doesn't fault the current executive for what he's done in office, but for what he hasn't done.

"The county executive should be the one office that looks out for the whole county. He should be working more closely with suburban cities; he should be the most effective person on the Metro council, he should work more with the legislature.

"The office has enormous potential, but so far, there's been very low performance," he says.

IN ADDITION TO studying the county charter, Hilyer says he is a voracious history buff. ("I've read everything written by Barbara Tuchman.")

"What he did (defeating the Nazis) was so important, and he did it with such class and strength. And, he was funny."

As the campaign rushes to a climax, in the Sept. 19 primary, Hilyer says he feels like a downhill racer, on a "dangerous, but thrilling ride."

"You're accelerating the whole time, and cutting sharp curves as close as you can."

"If you don't, you won't win."

Hilyer faces Democrat Marvin Durning in the primary. The winner of that contest will oppose Republican incumbent Tim Hill and Independent candidate Michael Shanks in November.

Durning profiled next

Bruce Hilyer is one of two Democrats who will vie in the Sept. 19 primary election for the right to challenge Republican Tim Hill for the King County Executive's seat in the Nov. 7 general election. In preparation for the primary, here is a look at the personal side of Hilyer, to be followed by a similar story on his Democratic rival, Marvin Durning, next Wednesday.

Fire officials seek grant for pool aid

If officials of Fire District 39 (Federal Way) have their way, two emergency medical technicians from the department will be on duty at the pool during next summer's Goodwill Games.

Although Group Health plans to offer health care for the games' athletes, Fire Chief Bud Thorson told the department's board of commissioners Thursday that department EMTs should be on hand in case of emergency.

"Group Health...is primarily there to look after the participants and deal with minor problems. If somebody falls off the diving board and hits his head, they'll call us anyway," Thorson said.

The fire department is seeking a grant from the Washington State Department of Community Development to help pay two off-duty EMTs to attend the 10-day meet. The size of the grant request has not been determined.

If the grant is approved, an aide car likewise would be at ready in case of emergencies at the pool, now under construction in West Campus, said Thorson.

Candidates call for contracting

All of the 14 Federal Way City Council candidates want the new city to contract for at least some municipal services.

Contracting for services, as opposed to creating a city department to run services such as street maintenance, is becoming an oft-talked-about issue in Washington. While many cities in California have contracted for decades, contracting is relatively new to this state.

Supporters say it's a way to save money. The city lets bids to private service-providers who then compete to obtain those city contracts. It's particularly attractive in a new city, such as Federal Way, because there are no existing bureaucracies that are politically unpopular to dismantle.

However, some opponents say contracting to a private provider makes it difficult for the city to monitor the quality of service.

In the last of this four-part series, the candidates explain in their own words their position on contracting for city services.

The Federal Way News will continue to cover the first-ever election of the city council with other stories on each of the seven council position races and an election wrap-up before the Sept. 19 election.

Position 1

Mary Gates: "My opponent seems to want to contract to avoid unions and to keep costs low. He never seems concerned about the quality of the work received when he discusses contracting; I support it when the quality for the price paid warrants it. Interim contracting makes sense with strict performance standards built in. I believe we need our own community planning and land-use experts but support library, police, fire, water contracts as a beginning."

Mary Gates

Bill Shortt

Bill Shortt: "My position is that 'contracting for services' should be a basic philosophy of city government. By contracting, we can hope to save our taxpayers very large amounts of money. Estimates run as high as 40 to 60 percent. What this means to us as voters is an opportunity to: cut taxes, buy lots of park land, finance projects that will enhance our quality of life."

"My opponent is in favor of contracting, but insists we will have a unionized city government."

Position 2

Mark Freitas: "My opponent would contract everything. He is a self-proclaimed anarchist. (No government equals good government.) While it is cost effective to contract in some instances, a case-by-case examination should be done. We are not Southern California, yet. That is the only thing that works, there. Here it is to our advantage to contract when: the city lacks staff with appropriate technical expertise (engineers, lawyers, police, fire), the city's workload will not support enough staff to provide adequate levels of service during vacations, sick leave, turnover, and when the workload is seasonal or unpredictable."

Mark Freitas

Joel Marks

Joel Marks: "I cannot speak for my opponent, only for myself. The city of Federal Way needs to be a long-term contract city. This means that all services should be contracted either publicly or privately. Some of these services would include: city engineering, private, city planning, private, street maintenance, private, parks maintenance, private, animal control, private, police department, public contract, accounting, private, administrative services including computer service, private, city attorney, private, building, public."

Position 3

Jo Asbury: "To avoid expensive municipal bureaucracy and to assure a smooth transition, contracting to provide traditional city services is the best approach. I am opposed to additional taxes and more government means more taxes. I am opposed to and would not support a utility tax. It makes sense to contract."

Jo Asbury

Debbie Ertel

Debbie Ertel: "I haven't heard my opponent's position. Since we will initially have to contract for all services, we will have a unique opportunity to test contracting in a variety of services. This will allow the city council to assess which contracted services best meet the needs of the community and which services would better serve the community as a municipal service."

Position 4

Elaine Cook: "Our position seems basically the same except I would begin with almost all services contracted. At this time I do not believe parks and recreation needs to build a bureaucratic structure to be effective. I believe we can be more responsive to the public and save more money by contracting."

Elaine Cook

Jim Webster

Jim Webster: "I am not sure what my opponent's position is on this subject. I see where the city will have to contract much of the services at first while the new city gets up and running. This will give us a chance to analyze how effective the contracting for these services works."

I believe the citizens of Federal Way expect and deserve quality services from their new city and it will be the city council's responsibility to ensure that whatever services the city provides, that they are needed, of quality, and at the most reasonable price while ensuring the quality."

Position 5

Jim Handmacher: "We are being elected to obtain the best municipal services at the lowest possible price. To accomplish that, we must consider private contracting, contracting with public agencies, and providing the services ourselves. My opponent has stated that he believes the city should contract for all services. In taking that position, he has lost any leverage in negotiating those contracts with the county. If we have no alternative, we will pay a very high price."

Jim Handmacher

Bob Wood

Bob Wood: Wood did not return his questionnaire.

Position 6

John Ridley: "My opponent wants a city police department. However, I choose contracting for police services as the better way. Effective law enforcement is regional and cost effective — no duplicating costs for SWAT or bomb teams, homicide squads, identification/communication systems. Fire district annexation appears best, but I'm undecided. I would contract for most city services to save tax dollars for other projects — senior center, parks, cultural arts center, and etc."

John Ridley

Bob Stead

Bob Stead: "At the present time it appears that police services should be provided to Federal Way under contract with King County. The building and land-use functions of the city should be provided by the city. Other services should also be explored, each service evaluated as to how the service may best be provided. The city council should not contract where it is more expensive, where the voters wish direct control, or where the contractor does not meet the minimum requirements for the job. The city should contract where the service will be provided at a reasonable price, where a large capital expense is required, and where an economy of scale or expertise is required."

Position 7

Lynn Templeton: "In regards to contracting, I have been much more specific: Contract with the county and other providers for police, public health, coroners, animal control and most maintenance (lights, trees, signals, sweeping, etc.). Annex Fire District 39; provide our own planning and parks departments."

Lynn Templeton

Phil Watkins

"We also have another very distinct difference: He has already put negotiations with King County backwards through a self-serving and inflammatory letter to Councilmember Bruce Laing. My independence, non-partisanship, and commitment to community, rather than personal ambition, is unquestioned."

Phil Watkins: "Contracting for the delivery of municipal services should be the guiding philosophy of our new city. "By contracting with other local governments and with private vendors for services, we can avoid building a large city bureaucracy and the tax increases that will inevitably follow. Competitive bidding for city contracts will provide the best service at the lowest cost."

"When the voters adopted cityhood, they were seeking local control, not more government and higher taxes."

We all know what it's like to be angry. Yet some people literally "fly off the handle", leading to a potentially abusive situation and putting themselves at risk of heart disease and other illnesses.

To help individuals deal effectively with anger and to express it appropriately, the Rader Institute Eating Disorders Program at Auburn General Hospital is offering a FREE class on Anger Management on Saturday, August 26 from 10 am-11 am at Auburn General Hospital. Council to rush for land-use control received their building permit before the official incorporation date.

Not only that, but developers are also probably vested if they have just applied for a building permit from the county.

"If a permit application is filed, then you're pretty much stuck with that," said Wayne Tanaka, who specializes in municipal law with a Seattle law firm.

HOWEVER, local land-use activists are skeptical, and say the city may not be helpless when it comes to controlling developers who have already applied with the county.

"A lot of developers think that if they get applications in they'll be issued (permits)," said Dick Burris, a member of DIRE (Development Impact Resistance Exercise), a local land-use watchdog group that was formed specifically to monitor the rush of apartment projects expected after incorporation.

Burris hopes the new city council will try to get a definitive legal opinion on when developers are vested.

Burris said there has been rush of applications for multi-family development in Federal Way for about a year. DIRE president Debbie Ertel said the rush is intensifying now as developers are getting nervous about just when they will be vested.

Proof of that recent rush may be elusive, but there are hints. In the first five months of this year, the county issued permits for only 261 units in Federal Way. However, in the last three months, the county has, or will soon, issue permits for another 560 units.

BALD's State Environmental Policy Act (SEPA) Center, which initially reviews the environmental impact of proposed developments, hasn't noticed a rush specific to Federal Way.

Although the SEPA Center doesn't keep track of just how many projects will go on line, any increase in apartment development is probably occurring all over the entire county, said Ralph Colbee, center director.

Fire Marshall Ed Coutts, with Fire District 39 (Federal Way), keeps track of the number of units proposed for Federal Way. There hasn't been any recent rush, he said. Rather, the increase began in earnest about two years ago and hasn't slackened off.

In 1986, only 278 units were approved; however, in 1987 and 1988 combined, permits were approved for 3,384 units. In 1988 alone, Federal Way became the home to 40.5 percent of all the multi-family units approved in unincorporated King County.

Trying to get in under the wire is apparently something developers don't want to talk about. Calls to the Seattle Master Builders Association went unanswered. But in an earlier story, association spokesman Don Davis said that while builders may be more cautious about building in Federal Way, developers haven't been jumping into the market to beat incorporation.

Whenever the area does incorporate, developers can bet it will be a lot tougher to get an apartment project approved in Federal Way.

That's got residents east of Interstate 5, outside of the city limits, worried that development will be shuffled into their backyard. Several eastside residents are forming their own community council to monitor development. Founders point to a rezone recently proposed for 15.5 acres on Military Road South just south of Peasley Canyon Road.

If approved, the rezone would allow construction of 276 apartment units on the site.

IT'S FOR that reason that another eastside group is considering annexation to Federal Way. REACT (Residents East of I-5 Annexation Consideration Team) may also become even more amenable to annexation if the eastside becomes a focus for development.

However, depending on when that annexation happens, it may still be too late to stop any projects proposed for the eastside.

The answer to just when the new city can begin controlling its land-use destiny may be resolved only by a protracted legal battle.

Stars and Stripes may line city streets to the Goodwill Games pool at about Sixth Place Southwest. Businesses and individuals would be asked to help pay for some of those flags, and the Soroptimists probably would be assigned upkeep, she said.

More donations would be sought to place flags at major entries to Federal Way, such as the South 320th Street off-ramp from Interstate 5; business owners would be encouraged to buy and install their own flags.

HOMEOWNERS LIKEWISE would be urged to contribute to Flag City by installing flags and flag poles, or affixing smaller versions of Old Glory to their homes.

The goal?

Advisors sought to help seniors

"We're dreaming of 1,000 flags," said Schow.

Schow credits some of the immediate enthusiasm for her idea to a recent effort to add an anti-flag burning amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

"It's given some emphasis to the project. Even if you hadn't thought much of the flag before, you get possessive when it's threatened," Schow said.

That immediate enthusiasm for the Stars and Stripes should last, however, when Federal Way residents get a glimpse of what Flag City could be, she theorized. The enthusiasm must hang on if Schow is to fulfill her dream of 1,000 flags — she figures the project will take 10 years to complete.

"But I think people will be impressed by it. And besides, neighborhoods and at convenient times. A six-hour training course is provided.

what's more 'Federal' than the flag?" she said.

Schow and the Federal Way Soroptimists encourage questions and suggestions about the proposed Flag City. For information, write to the Soroptimists at P.O. Box 4353, Federal Way, WA, 98603, or call Schow at 839-1755.

Huge flag here all along

If Flag City should come to be, several places in Federal Way will be ahead of the game. Flags already are in place at schools, fire stations, King County police Precinct 5 and the post office.

But one banner has them all beat — the Stars and Stripes that waves over Weyerhaeuser corporate headquarters, just east of Interstate 5 at South 338th Street.

The mammoth banner, positioned over a man-made pond, is 30 feet tall and 50 feet wide, and hangs from a 120-foot-tall laminated wood base and pole. The base and pole weigh 9,400 pounds and were made at Weyerhaeuser's Cottage Grove, Ore., plant.

By the way, your eyes don't play tricks on you in the winter. The Weyerhaeuser flag does indeed shrink. Although the flag is not taken down nightly, four or more maintenance workers lower the large flag at the end of summer and raise a slightly smaller one for the cold-weather seasons.

"Otherwise, the wind would just tear that big one to little pieces," said a representative of Weyerhaeuser's maintenance department.

Man kills self after alleged sex crimes

A Federal Way man killed himself Friday night or Saturday morning, apparently despondent over allegations he molested his wife's sister and exposed himself to young children.

King County police report the 22-year-old man killed himself by taping a hose from his car's exhaust into the window of his car and asphyxiating himself by running the car as he sat in the driver's seat.

Two days earlier police took separate reports of alleged indecent exposure and indecent liberties. The manager of the apartment complex in which the man was living with his wife called police Thursday afternoon when three young girls complained the man exposed himself to them.

The manager said he went to the man's apartment, but the man fled, jumping from a third story deck to get away.

That same day his wife's 12-year-old sister told police he had been molesting her as she stayed with the couple while her mother was on vacation. The molestations occurred between Aug. 10 and Aug. 17, the girl told police.

A police officer found the man's car at an undisclosed spot somewhere near West Campus at 7:30 a.m. Saturday. The officer said she tried to rouse the man from outside his locked car by pounding on the windows.

When she got no response, she broke into the car. She said she found no pulse, and fire department aid units confirmed that, declaring the man dead at the scene.

A note to his wife was found and turned over to the King County Medical Examiner's office. His wife told police her husband had been despondent over his recent trouble with the law and she had not seen him since 6:30 p.m. Friday.

Woman's boyfriend beats her viciously

A Federal Way woman had a fight with her boyfriend early Sunday morning, then walked an hour-and-a-half to get home, only to have him waiting there to beat her.

Police responded at 5 a.m. to a neighbor's call that a fight was going on in the apartment upstairs. Police discovered the 23-year-old woman lying on the floor and the apartment trashed.

The woman said she and her 27-year-old boyfriend had been drinking earlier, and ended up in a SeaTac restaurant. There they fought and her boyfriend left in her car, forcing her to walk home, she told police.

Once she arrived home, she found her apartment vandalized. When she opened a closet door, her boyfriend jumped out and began slapping her and pulling her hair hard enough to rip out clumps, she said. He also beat her with a guitar strap.

Police found the woman with a swollen, bruised face, welts and possible internal injuries. She was taken to St. Francis Community Hospital where she was treated.

The boyfriend was arrested and booked into the King County Jail for investigation of second-degree assault and second-degree malicious mischief.

Union urges board to lend an ear may be overcome if the department's Board of Commissioners hears both sides of the issues.

He made such a plea at the Aug. 24 meeting of the board, asking that at least one board member meet with one representative of both union and district management.

"You should at least hear our side of what's going on in negotiations. You obviously hear the (administration's) side, but for all the time we spend I can't believe we have no contract yet," he told the five-member board.

Ed Coutts, assistant fire chief, said only that the chiefs have a responsibility to report their view of negotiations to the board. He said he likewise hopes that arbitration will be avoided.

"We would be happy if that could occur," he said.

Details of any contract proposals or negotiated items have not been made public. The union can negotiate for wages and working conditions for its 75 members.

Firefighters have been working without a contract since late December, when their three-year contract was up. Negotiations frequently have dragged on past the length of the old contract in the past, once for a year and a half.

Firefighters are bound by a no-strike clause to continue to serve despite the lack of a contract.

Firefighters are now paid between $22,952 and $33,696 per year. Captains, also affected by negotiations, are paid up to $39,756.

Boys of summer

It's the life, to be 14 and fancy-free

By KURT HERZOG

Ah, awkward youth. Too young to drive, too old for day camp, but with a whole summer to kill. Fourteen-year-olds Robbie Smith and Brian Vance are best friends and major dudes who hang out at Steel Lake most of the summer. These water rats have got all the angles scoped. Sure there's not much to do when school's out, you don't have your driver's license and you're not old enough to hold a steady job.

But, despite their age-imposed predicament, their possibilities are anything but limited. With unrestricted access to the lake — Robbie's grandparents Helen and Bob Ratcliff live on the south side of the lake and his mother on the north — the two create their own world, hatching schemes to get rich quick, explore sunken treasure and even meet fabulous babes.

In a way, Steel Lake becomes their Mississippi River. With apologies to Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer, each day is a new adventure for the two friends.

ONE SUNNY afternoon a few weeks ago, the two teens' first order of business was a money-making scheme cornering the market in a still-untapped field: pulling up lily pads.

This summer the lily pads in Steel Lake have been growing like...well, lily pads. Those who own lakefront property aren't fond of swimming amidst the green tendrils anchored to the bottom 10-15 feet below.

Robbie and Brian proposed pulling up the pads for whatever their neighbors thought the chore was worth.

Donning their masks, snorkels and fins, the sea hunt began.

After about 30 minutes, they were tired and bored with the job. Their net profit was $15.

"Not bad for half hour's work," said Robbie. Later, another neighbor paid them off in fireworks, which provided even more entertainment, albeit shortlived. Then it was off for sunken treasure. They'd been exploring the wreck of a sunken rowboat off the public swimming beach for a couple of weeks.

A ROW past the swimming area gave them the opportunity to say "hi" to a lifeguard.

"She's pretty cute," Brian said. Later, they plotted an underwater assault on the leaking craft of two friends from across the lake.

"Uh, oh," Brian said. "Here comes bigmouth." "Let's go tip 'em over," Robbie suggested. Robbie and Brian took mercy upon their rivals, but their sneak attack set off a good-spirited round of insults, most of them too salty to repeat.

If anything, Robbie and Brian's reign over the lake is a testament to young energy. That's energy that could be inclined to get them in in trouble in other circumstances or places.

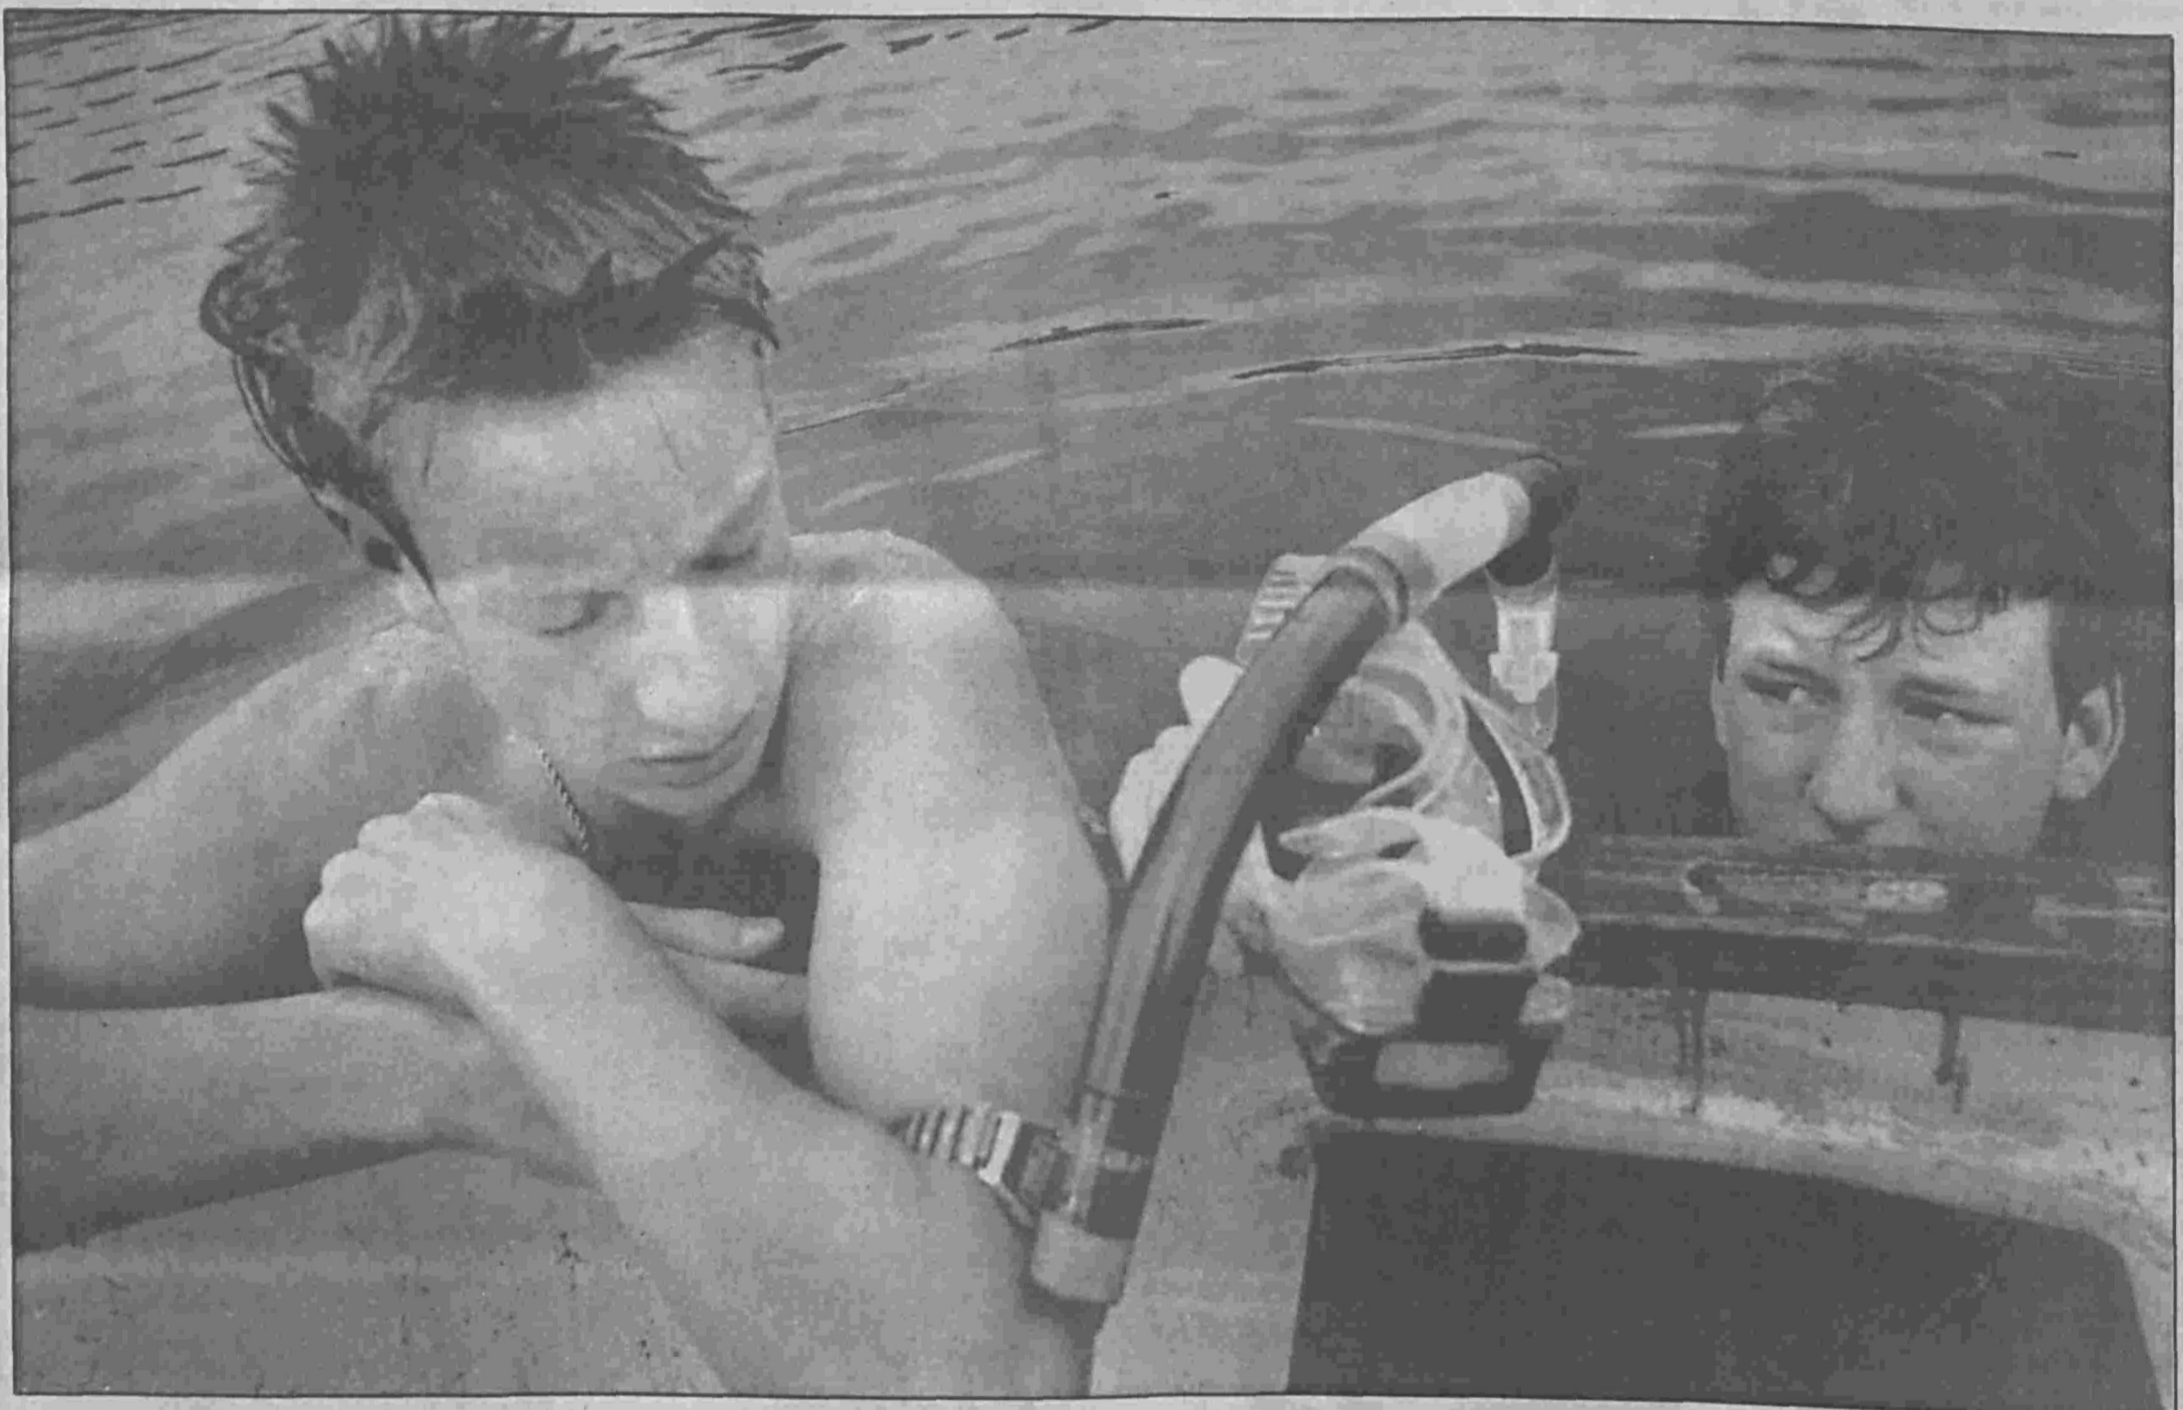

However, their elders consider the lake a safe place. "I gave up worrying about them a long time ago," said Robbie's grandfather, Bob Ratcliff.

Brian's mother, Julie Vance, occasionally comes to the lake to keep watch, but she too says she doesn't worry about them.

EACH DAY is an adventure when Robbie engages in a variety of sea hunts, salvage operations and searches in Steel Lake.

AS LONG AS there's been teen-agers, there's been the oft-asked question, "What do you want to do now?" Even if Robbie Smith (left) and Brian Vance, both 14, occasionally disagree on what their next adventure should be, an argument quickly turns to laughter after a well-turned insult.

AFTER AN aborted sneak attack to tip over a friend's boat, Brian escapes back into the lake. The friends, David Edings (middle) and his buddy Adam, were understandably perturbed by the assault.

IT'S NOT EASY goofing off all day long, but somebody has to do it. After a day of snorkeling and harassing their friends, Brian (left) and Robbie shake off the day's tension in Robbie's grandparents' hot tub.

Boys of summer...

"I'd rather have them here," she said, "then getting into drugs and booze."

If the two young men are keeping in line, it's just best to let them be, Vance said.

But even Tom Sawyer had Aunt Polly and it's Helen Ratcliff who keeps a watchful eye from her living room and decides when it's time for the two boys to call it a day. Without the voice of reason, one could imagine the two partners growing gills and living in the lily pads.

If you can't leave your garden, vacation in Oregon

I'll be the first to admit it. Our family is a bunch of travel wimps. We hate to sit in a car for long periods of time. We sleep better in our own beds, and half of us still get cranky without a nap.

After hearing this confession you can better appreciate the research involved in finding a suitable family vacation spot.

Our vacation trips have got to be short — no more than a couple of days, because of our garden. We have to choose a place that caters to kids — they outnumber the adults. And for a real vacation, we need a place where we can afford to eat out.

Packing up groceries, cooking and washing up is too much like the daily routine back home. This no-cooking rule cancels out camping, but doesn't quite land us in the lap of luxury at some ritzy resort or high price hotel.

It did put us on the Oregon coast in the oceanfront town of Seaside. Figure on a four-hour drive from Seattle.

Seaside is a colorful community that serves a lot of sizzle with its steak. The beach is clean, sandy and free from the roaming autos that are allowed on the Washington coast.

Marianne Binetti

There is more sun and less rain than up north, but another difference is in the variety of diversions Seaside has to offer.

Main Street in Seaside runs almost to the ocean with a turnaround at the end. This makes it a popular town to cruise around. On warm summer evenings, souped-up cars put on a parade as their proud owners strut their stuff.

There is also a wide sidewalk that runs parallel to the ocean offering miles of family walking or biking.

Branching off of either side of main street are gift shops, restaurants and a favorite with all kids — the family fun arcades. Miniature golf, skee ball, bingo and a sea of quarter-gobbling amusements give Seaside a noisy carnival atmosphere that lasts well after dark. Our children loved it.

Down the highway 8 miles from Seaside is the more sophisticated community of Cannon Beach. A haven for artists and writers, Cannon Beach boasts another string of shops and malls full of classy and more expensive touristware.

Good taste and refinement drips from the Cannon Beach shops, but Seaside is definitely a more family-oriented town.

We enjoyed splashing in the waves at Cannon Beach, but when supper time came, we had the good sense to head back to Seaside for dinner at a funny-sounding restaurant.

The Pig 'N Pancake is a welcome break from fast food and stand-in-line ordering, and the prices are so reasonable you won't feel guilty about not packing in those groceries from home.

Our waitress served coloring books and crayons to the kids after collecting their orders from the large children's menu. They don't serve liquor at the Pig 'N Pancake but they serve up generous portions and efficient service.

Be warned that this restaurant is so popular for breakfast that you'll see a line forming outside its doors even before church lets out.

It was our choice of lodging that saved us from the long breakfast lines in Seaside. We stayed at the Huntley Inn, blocks from the ocean, but close to our budget.

The rooms included something more important than an ocean view to a young family — sweet rolls and juice in the lobby every morning.

The continental breakfast held off their appetites until lunch time and was almost as popular as the indoor swimming pool and jacuzzi with our youngsters.

Seaside also hosts a motley crew of beach cabins that are popular with thrifty travelers. Since this was one vacation that we didn't want to hassle with housekeeping, for an extra $20 dollars a night we were happy with the Huntley, and the fact we didn't have to sweep sand off our floor or crumbs from our table.

Vacationers who really want to live it up can stay at the more luxurious accommodations with an ocean view. There is a wave of new hotels washing up along the beach and The Shilo is one of the nicest in town.

Located between the beach and the businesses, The Shilo has become a popular destination for honeymooners with its beautiful dining room and ocean front bar.

Call the Seaside Chamber of Commerce at 1-800-444-6740 for information about the Huntley Inn or Shilo, or if you're interested in renting a condo or beach cabin.

There was one other unique service Seaside hotels now offer. Visitors that miss their videos can make a phone call and have a VCR delivered and hooked up to the TV in their room.

The delivery service also includes two movies you choose from a menu. The price is under $15 and you don't even have to worry about finding the place to return your videos. You just leave the whole works at your hotel for pickup the next day.

Since the weather was cooperative we didn't need to exercise this option, but it's nice insurance for when rainy weather dampens the spirit of an ocean visit.

The road to or from Seaside is along coast Highway 101, and we discovered a great spot near Astoria. Follow the signs to Fort Stevens just south of Astoria and plan to spend at least an hour at the museum, rose gardens and historic bunkers at this park.

The underground ammunition rooms and look-out posts that were constructed for World War I and World War II are fun for kids to explore, and will tire them out for the long ride home.

The fort has excellent picnic facilities and camping spots are close by at the state park.

Our weekend escape went so well we might even try another family trip. You're already headed in the right direction when you pick a great destination.

GATE program to be at Lake Grove

The sod is taking root on Lake Grove Elementary School's playground, but when school opens this fall, there will be fewer feet to flatten it.
The predicted enrollment is 575, down 25 students from last year's 600. Principal Carol (Golden) Whitehead attributes the slight decline to the recent boundary juggling necessitated by the addition of Silver Lake Elementary School to the Federal Way district.

Our Schools

Gifted students will be attending GATE (Gifted and Talented Education) classes at Lake Grove this year, so the total number of students could actually top last year's figures at times.
In addition to the GATE students, Lake Grove will be joined by several new teachers. Tammie Baily has been hired to teach first grade. Mary Clingan has been transferred from Twin Lakes Elementary to teach fourth grade, and Karen Oie is the new music teacher. Terry Beck will instruct the GATE students.

The building has a fresh coat of paint on the inside as well as new carpets, blinds and an intercom system. The library and the outer office have been completely renovated.
The playground has new sod and the swingset now has pads underneath it.

Whitehead said the school will be getting a half-time counselor and a half-time Chapter One teacher, but neither has been hired.
Remodeling is still underway at Lake Grove, but Whitehead promises, "We will be done."

Besides GATE, Lake Grove has a Primary Intervention Program (PIP), which provides intervention services to low-income students at state expense.

Whitehead said the school's primary learning goal is to integrate its language arts program. Reading, writing, thinking and speaking skills will be taught together.
Lake Grove is at 303 S.W. 308th St. Its number is 941-1250. School hours remain 9 a.m. to 3:10 p.m.

Mirror Lake's top goal is discipline

Mirror Lake Elementary School will lose more than 100 students when kindergartners head back to Panther Lake Elementary, their home school.

Principal Pat Smithson expects about 560 students this fall, down from last year's total of 614. New students to the district and boundary changes make up the difference.

There are several new teachers at Mirror Lake this year. Karen Foster was hired as a first grade "levy" teacher, meaning she was hired under the plan to reduce first-grade class sizes. Stacey Killian is another newcomer to Mirror Lake, but hasn't been assigned to a grade yet.

Two new teachers are transfers from within the Federal Way School District — speech therapist Mary Gillis from Nautilus Elementary and Dorothy Schedvin, a first grade teacher from Brigadoon Elementary, round out the Mirror Lake teaching team.

Capital improvements to the school include two portables, which are scheduled to arrive in September, and a new soccer field.

"It's growing nicely out there," Smithson said.

Mirror Lake has a variety of special programs, including a before- and after-school Kids' Club, funded by a grant from the Weyerhaeuser Co. and directed by the Federal Way Boys' and Girls' Club. The enrichment program is being given a trial run at Mirror Lake and will expand to other schools if it is successful, Smithson said.

Also in the building are an English as a Second Language program, an Early Prevention of School Failure program, Chapter One and special education. As with last year, Mirror Lake will offer breakfast to its students.

Discipline is this year's top learning priority, Smithson said. It is followed by an emphasis on language arts integration. Language arts — reading, writing, speaking and thinking — will be taught in an uninterrupted block of time. Other goals include cooperative learning and computer skills.

Mirror Lake is at 625 S. 314th St. Its phone number is 839-4600 and school hours this year are 9 a.m. to 3:10 p.m.

Illahee adds six new instructors

Illahee Junior High School has a number of new teachers and programs for students this year.

The school will have the district's first full-time program for students it considers at risk for involvement in drugs and alcohol. Other schools will begin the program next semester.

The school will also have other programs aimed at increasing students' self-esteem including a "Glad To Be Me Day."

It will also be using new texts and learning programs, according to Joe Pope, Illahee principal.

Enrollment is expected to be up slightly this year from 750 last year to 800.

school include Vince Blausen, a part-time counselor, Lorraine Clare, language arts, Andre Buchan; math, Tracy Lange, language arts, math and art, Meredith Ziltner will transfer from Federal Way High School to teach careers, and Steve Moll will teach choir.

There were no physical improvements completed at the school this summer.

Learning goals for the year are to continue to improve students' self-esteem and to work on remedial education with needy students.

School hours this year are 8:05 a.m. to 2:35 p.m. Illahee is located at 36001 First Ave. S. The phone number is 927-3073.

Micro-grilling makes barbecuing a zap

When you want barbecued chicken for dinner, but don't want to spend hours in the kitchen, turn to your microwave oven and outdoor grill for help. Microwave the chicken until almost fully cooked. Then transfer it to a hot grill to brown and take on a barbecue flavor. For leisurely cooking, talk your spouse or a friend into taking charge of grilling while you microwave a side dish, toss a salad and make dessert.

Precooking chicken in the microwave means shorter grilling time, less worry of undone chicken with a charred coating, and less flare-up during grilling.

To microwave chicken, first cut it in serving-size pieces. You could just quarter it or leave it whole, but then grilling time is longer. Arrange pieces or quarters with thickest parts to outside edges on a meat rack. (Place whole chicken breast-side down.) Cover with waxed paper. Microwave on High power, allowing about 7 minutes per pound. Rearrange and turn pieces, quarters or whole chicken over halfway through cooking for even cooking. Drain chicken before transferring to the grill.

To grill chicken, have grill preheated or coals ready so chicken can go directly from microwave to grill. Use medium setting or place chicken 4 inches from coals. Turn chicken over and baste occasionally with a marinade or sauce until chicken is golden brown.

Today's recipe for Mediterranean Micro-Grilled Chicken calls for marinating the chicken pieces in a highly flavored sauce. The sauce—or marinade—adds a tangy, exotic touch. For the most flavor, marinate chicken 4 hours or more. In today's recipe, the marinade is intense in flavor, so even a 15-minute soak at room temperature will yield tasty results. Be sure to refrigerate chicken in marinade if it must stand longer than 15 minutes.

For safety's sake, I like to cook the marinade before using it for basting. Bring the mixture to a boil and let it boil a minute or two. This insures that raw chicken juices are fully cooked, so there'll be no danger of food poisoning when marinade is used for basting chicken even towards end of grilling.

Making the other parts of this meal takes about 20 minutes or less. Quick Green Rice calls for instant "minute" rice and fresh chopped vegetables. It cooks in about 5 minutes. It's a delightfully light and mild-flavored bed for grilled chicken or for other grilled meats. Turtle Brownies start with a microwave brownie mix that cooks in less than 5 minutes, too. (Or it can start with already-baked brownies.) Both rice and brownies need standing time after cooking—the rice, to finish absorbing moisture and to finish cooking without getting overly soft, and the brownies, to cook done in the center without dry edges and to cool for easy cutting.

Microwave rice first and let it stand tightly covered. Microwave brownies and, if necessary, let them stand during your meal. Add topping and pecans right before serving.

Mediterranean Micro-Grilled Chicken
 1/2 cup wine vinegar
 1/4 cup soy sauce
 1/4 cup lemon juice
 1 tablespoon Italian seasoning
 2 1/2- to 3-pound broiler-fryer chicken, cut in serving pieces.

Garnish: lemon slices (optional)
 In a dish large enough to hold chicken, stir together vinegar, soy sauce, lemon juice and Italian seasoning. Add chicken, turning to coat each piece. Cover and refrigerate 4 to 12 hours, occasionally turning chicken and basting with marinade.

Drain chicken. Pour marinade into microwave-safe 1-quart measure or bowl; reserve. Place chicken, skin-side up, on microwave meat rack. Cover with waxed paper. Microwave (High) 10 minutes. Turn chicken over, rearrange and re-cover. Continue microwaving (High) 5 to 10 minutes or until chicken is almost done.

Transfer chicken to hot grill or let stand while heating marinade. Microwave marinade on High 2 to 3 minutes or until boiling; then boil it for 1 minute. Grill chicken 4 inches from coals (or on medium setting) about 20 minutes or until golden brown and done. Turn chicken over and brush generously with marinade several times during cooking. If desired, garnish with lemon slices. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Each serving — 1/5 of recipe: 226 calories, 38g protein, 7g fat, 1g carbohydrate, 277mg sodium, 126mg cholesterol.

Note: If desired, remove skin from chicken before marinating. Then be extra careful not to overcook when grilling, or chicken will be dried out.

Quick Green Rice
 2 green onions, thinly sliced (separate green tops from white parts)
 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
 2 tablespoons olive oil or butter
 1 1/2 cups instant rice

Cancer Information Service for WA
 1-800-4-CANCER

1 cup chicken broth
1 cup chopped fresh spinach
1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley
Salt and pepper to taste
 Place white parts of onion, green pepper and oil in microwave-safe 2-quart casserole. Cover with lid or plastic wrap. Microwave (High) 1 to 2 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir in rice and broth. Re-cover and microwave (High) 4 to 5 minutes or until rice is barely tender. Stir in spinach and parsley. Season to taste. Cover and let stand about 5 minutes. Serve hot or warm. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

If desired, substitute 1/2 to 1 cup thawed frozen green peas for spinach.
Hint: This reheats well. Microwave (High) about 2 minutes per cup of rice. If necessary, stir in a tablespoon of water.

Each serving — 1/4 of recipe: 134 calories, 3g protein, 7g fat, 15g carbohydrate, 207mg sodium, 0 cholesterol.

Turtle Brownies
1 package microwave brownie mix or refrigerated ready-to-microwave brownies
4 tablespoons caramel topping
1/2 cup pecan halves
 Prepare brownies as directed on package. Remove brownies from microwave and set pan on countertop. Cool at least 10 minutes. Drizzle with caramel topping; carefully spread over brownies. Top with pecan halves. Cut into squares to serve. Serve warm or at room temperature. Makes 9 servings.

 Each serving: 250 calories, 2g protein, 12g fat, 8g carbohydrate, 239mg sodium, 34mg cholesterol.

You may substitute already baked or micro-baked squares of brownies. If brownies are cool, be sure caramel topping is at room temperature or warm so it will spread easily. If desired, before adding topping, heat brownies on High, covered with waxed paper for about 15 seconds per brownie.

Cool weather, wind stimulates a fishing frenzy

Though we may look at the cloudy and cool weather as something unjust or unfair, Mother Nature is definitely signaling the fish that fall is on the way. As water is cooled and oxygenated with the blustery winds, fish are stimulated to begin going on a feeding frenzy. Just as a bear puts on fat for the winter, fish also need to begin packing it away.

To take advantage, a lot of anglers will have to turn their back on the salmon activity in the sound and look to some of their favorite trout and bass lakes.

Things develop in the fall the same way they did in the spring. The smaller, more shallow lakes are impacted first by the heating or cooling effect. Right now, if you can put your salmon gear up long enough, some pretty good trout and bass fishing is available.

Dick Benbow

For trout fishing, the key remains finding the insect activity that heightens during and right after a cold front. The shallow bays on the north and east sides of ponds and lakes are more directly affected by wind and weather, so that's a good

All participants will receive a free lunch and commemorative souvenir. An orientation will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 20, at the Federal Way REI store, 2565 South Gateway Center Place for those interested learning how to become involved.

Cooler weather brings freshwater fish frenzy place to head for first. The same is true for bass fishing. Often, this year's batch of perch, bass and bluegill fry become food for big bass.

It may be hard to take your eyes off the fishing reports from the bay, but the lakes can and will give up some giant fish through October. Once Labor Day passes, a lot of lakes don't get the boating and water-skiing traffic that keeps them churning all summer.

Several examples come to mind about how to prepare for this kind of fishing. My log book for September shows a hatch of yellow-bodied insects on Trout Lake in Federal Way. A 14- to 16-size hook, yellow stonefly is an excellent copy of the natural. Look for rising trout in the northwest corner of lakes in the evening. Have a spinning rod with a small Rapala in silver or perch finish. Bass hang shallow on the docks and pads in the late afternoons on the northeast side.

Fall means back to school. If you've ever wanted to learn to tie your own flies, now is an excellent time. Fall classes are filling now at both the The Clearwater Angler in Federal Way and The Green River Fly Shop in Auburn.

Western looking to build on winning seasons

Having put together two straight winning seasons, Western Washington University now wants to break into the upper echelons of the northwest small college football ranks.

Seven defensive and six offensive starters return for first-year head coach Rob Smith from last year's 5-4 team, which placed fourth at 3-3 in the Mount Rainier League of the Columbia Football Association. Seven of those players also started in 1987 when the Vikings finished 4-3-2.

"We're going to be an exciting, competitive team," said Smith, who was the defensive coordinator last season. "But it's not going to happen overnight. We need to avoid injuries and pick up our new schemes as quickly as possible."

Leading the way for Western are two seniors — Puyallup graduate Kelly Susee at free safety and running back Scott Lohr out of Olympia.

Susee is a two-team All-CFA first-team selection. He has 11 career pass interceptions, having run two back for TDs.

Lohr has led the WWU Vikings in rushing each of the past three years, picking up a total of 2,192 yards and 23 TDs. He also has one touchdown reception and needs only four more TDs to break former All-American Pat Locker's school career record of 27. Locker played from 1976-79.

THOMAS JEFFERSON

graduate Rob Knutsen is a newcomer at Western who is also a running back.

Knutsen, a sophomore, may only stand at 5-7, 165 but he was still a big ground gainer for TJ's Raiders in his high school career. After graduating from TJ, Knutsen spent his freshman season at Walla Walla Community College.

Other two-year starters besides Susee and Lohr are senior wide receiver Mike Carrington (Mount Tahoma), offensive linemen Kevin Beason (Sehome) and Jeff Bakkom (Bellingham), junior defensive end Cory Heins (Cascade) and senior defensive back Mike Minnehan (Clover Park). Heins has led the team in sacks (14 total) the past two years, while Minnehan paced the squad in interceptions (four) last fall.

Another key player back is senior tight end Kirk Schneider (Woodinville), who led Western with 36 receptions last season.

But Smith and the Vikings aren't sitting pat, having picked up a number of top-flight recruits. Heading the newcomers are two freshmen — running back Mike Wagner of Hawthorne, Calif. and defensive back Shane Volkman (Lake Stevens).

Wagner totaled 2,228 yards in rushing and receiving and scored 29 touchdowns as a high school senior and was named the South Bay Player of the Year by The Los Angeles Times. Volkman, who redshirted at Boise State last year, was an All-State pick in 1987.

AMONG THE other athletes on the team are senior linebacker Marty Starkovich from Puyallup and free safety Shawn Pepper of Fife.

Starkovich is a 5-10, 200-pound senior who has lettered twice at Western, while Pepper is a 6-2, 195-pound sophomore.

Rudy Grandbois is a 5-10, 240-pound senior defensive tackle and defensive end from Kennedy. Grandbois went to Yakima Valley Community College after graduating from JFK, and has lettered once at Western.

Evergreen grad falls in love with rugged sport

By ADAM WORCESTER
Let's make the ground rules perfectly clear.
You do not play rugby if you mind your face getting scraped up, or your fingers crushed, or your bones broken, or maybe your ear sliced off.
You don't play serious rugby unless you invest hundreds of dollars and hours in the sport, year round, without pay.
John Knutson has broken his shoulder. He's busted his ribs. He's fractured his leg. He's suffered a concussion. Once, he saw a New Zealand opponent stomp on a teammate's face and sever half his ear.
"It's not for everybody," Knutson admits. "But I love it. I wouldn't do anything else."

BECAUSE THE ball may only be passed backward, each play resembles an option quarterback one-on-one with a defensive end.
"This is tough. You have to have body strength, your lungs have to be in good shape, your legs, everything. It's a good game to play after high school," Knutson says.
In nine ensuing years, the sport has taken him all over the globe, to England, Jamaica, France, South America.

"I can go anywhere in the world and stay for free, because a rugby player will put me up," Knutson says. "They'll find you a job, help you get settled, do anything for you."
Knutson plays center, the rugby equivalent of a halfback or fullback.
Since joining Old Puget Sound Beach five years ago, his career has been a dizzying succession of honors: all-state team, all-Pacific Northwest team, all-Pacific Coast Grizzlies, junior national team and, finally, the U.S. Eagles national team.

LAST FALL HE traveled with the latter squad on an historic tour of Russia. It was one of his least-fun foreign excursions.
"It's a third-world country. Everything was ugly, ugly, ugly," Knutson says. "Borsht sucks, and their milk tastes like frozen yogurt. They couldn't even fry eggs right."

The scene was even more appalling on the rugby field.
A Romanian referee assigned to the game flew out the morning of the Eagles-Soviet match. A Soviet official filled in.
"We saw the Russian coach pay him before the game. It was just incredible," Knutson says. The hosts won, 31-16.

IN SUMMER rugby teams play with seven men on a side, or "7's." Games consist of seven-minute, non-stop halves.
In fall and spring they play normal 15-a-side games, with 40-minute halves. Beach plays these home contests in Sealth High School Stadium.
Knutson says 7's games emphasize speed and are not as KNUTSON IS captain of Old Puget Sound Beach, the most successful rugby club in the state. He has played the game ever since he graduated from Evergreen High School in 1980.

Following a Wolverine career as a football wide receiver-defensive back and a North Puget Sound League wrestling champion, the 6-foot 2-inch, 195-pound Knutson wanted a sport to keep the competitive juices flowing.
One day he was playing basketball in Georgetown when the man he was guarding told him, "You'd make a good rugby player."
Knutson took him at his word and tried out with Seattle Rugby Club. He had found his sport.
"I loved it. The first game I ever played I scored two tries. I got to tackle people again," he says.
Tackling in rugby is not like tackling in football. Rules prohibit players from blocking and from wearing pads.

Seattle hosting biathlon

The national Coors Light Biathlon Series will come to Seattle for the second year Sunday, Sept. 10, attracting top pro athletes and an expected 700 amateurs to Lake Sammamish State Park near Issaquah. The event, a run-bike-run format, will feature world champion biathlete Ken Souza, from Encinitas, Calif. Race time is 7:30 a.m.
The Coors Light Brand of the Adolph Coors Company is in its second year of sponsorship of the only national series dedicated to the fastest growing multi-sport event in the country. This year the ninth stop on the tour, Seattle, was a part of the inaugural series circuit and was a popular city last year.

"According to participants who follow the series and compete in several markets, Seattle was by far the most scenic city on the tour," says race director Steve Hamilton. "Word spread about the beauty and hospitality of the Northwest among national competitors and this year we expect athletes to be arriving from as far away as New Jersey, Dallas and Atlanta. They really like the feel of competing here."
World biathlon champ Ken Souza, who won the Seattle event last year and is currently undefeated in the '89 series, will return to defend his Seattle title. Souza will join hundreds of local athletes, many of whom will be racing in their first biathlon. Most runners can cycle and most cyclists can run, which may explain why more than 10,000 participants were involved in the inaugural series in 1988.

The Seattle biathlon consists of a five-kilometer (3.1-mile) run, a 30-kilometer (18.6-mile) bike trip and a second five-kilometer run. Competitors may enter individually or as a two-member team. The winning time is expected to be just over an hour.
Hamilton Events is providing the race direction. For entry information, call (206) 828-3544.

Rugby player has traveled the globe rough as regulation matches. But a practice session last week seemed plenty brutal.

At one point in a scrum, a teammate tackled Knutson particularly hard.

"He's one of my best friends," says Knutson. "He was down, I got a good punch in and said, 'Knock that — off.' Then we shook hands."

Beach averages one fistfight a practice, which is forgotten about as soon as it ends.

"PEOPLE THROW punches all the time," Knutson says. "It's easy to cheat because there are 30 guys on the field and only one referee."

No one swings at Knutson during practice, however. "If they hit the captain they know they won't play next game," he quips.

In the course of his rugby travels Knutson has spent thousands of dollars, including annual $180 dues to the United States Rugby Football Union. He once suffered a concussion, whiplash and a dislocated shoulder on one tackle.

Many players quit after a couple of years. What keeps Knutson coming back season after season?

"Male bonding," he says. "It's being with the guys."

Knutson won't be with the guys much longer, though. Even he has found it difficult to balance rugby with a social life that includes a wife, new house in Kirkland and a job with Costco.

"BY THIS TIME next year I'll be retired," he claims.

But just because he is retiring does not mean he is leaving the game. He will continue to help out with Old Puget Sound Beach, which has won the 26-team Northwest Union 16 of the past 18 years. One day he would like to coach the sport.

"It's sent me all over the world, so I have to give something back to the game. That's the attitude we're trying to foster," says Knutson.

You don't play rugby unless you love it. If you love it, you give something back.

It's part of the ground rules.

Beach volleyball gains popularity and sponsorships

From the sunny shores of Southern California, the birthplace of fad, fancy and fashion, comes the latest new-age sport, pro beach volleyball. It's an interesting combination of spectacle and sport, which may be emerging from the bushes into the big time.

The Association of Volleyball Professionals 1989 tour stopped off at Alki Beach last weekend to show off their style. Mike Dodd and Tim Hovland walked away with $12,500 for winning the Seattle Open, and about 2,500 fans walked away having seen the best volleyball players in the world.

In the past 13 years, volleyball has grown from being a sport where players duelled it out for dinners and cases of beer, to a multi-million dollar business. The top money winners on this year's tour have already earned over $100,000 in prize money, and several times that amount in product endorsements.

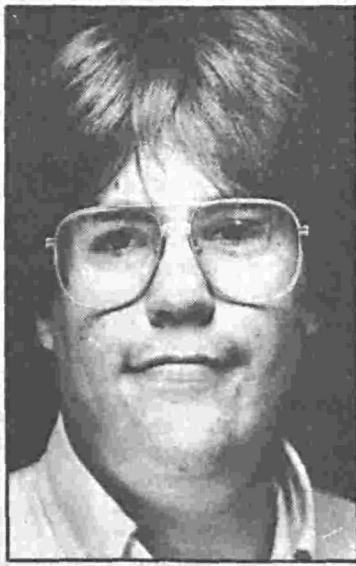

Pro beach volleyball has become a big money sport primarily because it is an advertising and marketing medium for sportswear and alcoholic beverage companies. The Miller Brewing Company, the tour's primary sponsor, is putting up over $2 million for this year's tour, including $50,000 in prize money for last weekend's tournament at Alki.

Sinjin Smith, the top ranked player in the world, and president of the AVP, hopes to see the sport achieve the same level of recognition that professional tennis currently enjoys.

"That's definitely the direction it's headed," Smith explained. "The only difference between volleyball and tennis is that here, the player's association is in charge of the tour, so our path will be smoother than that of tennis."

When asked if pro beach volleyball's appeal is based more on the players or the marketing media, Smith was diplomatic. "You'll have to ask the fans about that," he said. But with the sport becoming more popular on a national level, some tour sites draw much larger crowds than others, and for varying reasons.

In California, where most of the players live, and where beach volleyball has been like religion since the 1930's, the fans recognize the players, love the sport and turn out in droves. But when the tour moves outside its native state, reaction varies, often according to the marketing influence of the sponsors. AVP publicists noted that one reason Seattle was on the tour was because it was a good Miller Lite market. About 2,500 fans showed up. A month ago, the tour hit Milwaukee, Wis., Miller's home turf, and 25,000 fans turned out to watch.

Marty Niland

the beach. Among them are designer sportswear for sale at the tournaments, PA announcers who lead crowds in "Tastes great, less filling" chants, and the ever popular bikini beauty contests.

But whether you agree with those tactics or not, you have to admit two things. First, sexism and commercialism are not exclusive to this sport. Look at other professional sports and you'll see the same thing, in various forms of subtlety.

Second, even with the sideshows, the end product, the quality of play, is good.

How good? Well, when Cliff Monson of Bellevue and Brock Olson of Oregon, the two top beach players in the Northwest, teamed up to grab one of three spots open to local teams last weekend, they lost their first two matches 15-8 and 15-10, and were spectators for the rest of the tourney. The same fate befell the two other Seattle area teams as well.

"For a local team to win a tournament like this would be like a local tennis player winning at Wimbledon," said Monson, the top ranked beach volleyball player in the region.

The tour's top players certainly show why they're so far ahead of the locals. Fans who came to Alki last weekend were treated to more long volleys, featuring diving digs and sky high spikes, than a whole summer's worth of amateurs could provide.

The final match was no less exciting than earlier play, as Dodd and Hovland rallied to defeat Olympic hero Karch Kiraly and tour veteran Brent Frohoff.

Frohoff and Kiraly were sent to the losers bracket by the eventual champions, and came out in the finals with revenge on their minds. Using Kiraly's power, and several soft shots over their opponents' blocks, Frohoff and Kiraly forged an early lead and looked as if they would send the match into a 7-point tiebreaker by winning the first game. But Frohoff suffered severe leg cramps with his team ahead 12-8, and all of a sudden it was a two against one game.

Kiraly played his heart out and, if one had been selected, certainly would have named MVP. He single-handedly prevented Dodd and certainly Hovland from running away with the match. Kiraly and his wounded teammate succumbed 15-13, but Dodd and Hovland had to earn every point. They had the serve at match-point five times before they could put the winning point down.

The quality of play in the tournament showed that beach volleyball is a real sport, not just a media creation. But before it gets up there with professional tennis, it has some credibility to gain. Signing a network TV contract would be a big step. AVP volleyball is currently televised by Prime Ticket, which syndicates to local cable companies. ESPN carries the big matches.

They could also stand to lose the bikini contests, and put the smaller women's association, which has about 10 percent of the prize money the men have, on the same tour, like the tennis pros they hope to catch.

Still, they are working hard. Pro beach volleyball has top players, big money and star power (George Brett and Chip Hanauer took in some action last weekend). They've even got a movie deal, with some of the top players getting on-screen appearances.

With a little polish, pro beach volleyball may soon be up among the bigger pro sports.

Finally, taking care of your car is no big deal!

Geiberger wins GTE golf classic

By GERARDO BOLONG

Playing with great control and determination, Al Geiberger held off a Frank Beard challenge on Sunday's front nine to capture the $350,000 1989 GTE Northwest Classic at Inglewood Country Club.

Geiberger played near-flawless golf while carding a tournament record 12-under par 204 to claim a check for $52,500.

Beginning the final round with an eagle 3, the 51-year-old Californian still had Beard by only one shot for holes seven through 11. Geiberger had 11 consecutive pars at one point. Birdies on two of the last three holes settled the issue once and for all.

"This is especially rewarding because I let a few slip away this season," a calm Geiberger said. "That plants a few doubts, and then you have to climb the hill back."

"This week I've had a special determination, I don't know why... Today I just felt I had control of myself."

Only a misguided tee shot on the 380-yard, par-four 17th hole marred the round. Trapped in the trees, Geiberger settled for a bogey 5.

Beard, who earned $30,000 for the runner-up spot, three-putted and bogeyed the 375-yard, par 4 11th hole.

"Obviously, I'm pleased," Beard said. "I got off to a good start, which I had to do. But so did Al. If I could have made one of those putts at eight or nine it might have changed things."

Senior tour leading money winner Orville "Sarge" Moody closed with a nifty six-under par 66 to claim third place at eight-under par 208.

Seattle's Don Bies tied for ninth with three others at 212 after shooting an even-par 72. Ken Still of Tacoma tied for 33rd at 219. Seattleite Ted Naff tied for 45th at 221.

Playing out of Bay Hill, Florida, Arnold "the King" Palmer settled for a tie in the 20th spot with a 215 total.

Marshall honored

Donny Marshall from Federal Way High School was selected the junior division most valuable player (even though he played in the senior division all-star game) at the Central Washington University boys' high school basketball camp.

The West outscored the East team 53-33 in the all-star game as Marshall finished with 26 points. Federal Way's B.J. Miller led the East with 12 points.

Miller also took home most improved player awards in the senior division.

Chad Krilich of Decatur High School won Player-of-the-Day honors in the sophomore division earlier in the camp. He ranked among the leaders in five different categories. He was third in scoring (34), fourth in rebounding (19), fourth in assists (seven), fourth in field-goal percentage (14-23) and third in free throw percentage (6-7) in two games of competition.

Federal Way's Ricci Greenwood scored eight points to lead the East team during a 45-37 loss to the West in the junior all-star game.

Marshall, who will be a junior at Federal Way High School this fall, also earned Player-of-the-Day honors earlier in the camp. He scored 33 points in two games while playing in the senior division and also ranked second in rebounds with 15 and second in steals with four.

What's new?

Change will mark year

By MELODIE STEIGER
Issues, additions and edicts. Some are ongoing headaches, and some are happy surprises for students, parents and district administrators. All of the following surfaced within the last year, and some will be seen for the first time when schools open Sept. 5.

This year's issues, additions and edicts to watch for include:

Class size

Class sizes probably won't shrink this year. For that to happen, says Superintendent Richard Harris, schools would have to be bigger to hold more classes with fewer children in them. But the district has vowed that young students will have more certificated (teaching) staff available to them throughout the school day. The district plans to up its present ratio of teachers-to-students in kindergarten through third grade from 46 per 1,000 to 51 per 1,000, in part to take advantage of state money for such staff increases. Changes are being worked out now, said Harris, and they may include more aides in the classrooms, and more counselors in grade schools.

Activity buses

Junior high students can enjoy a little more time at school this year with the advent of after-school activity buses, intended to make school clubs and athletics accessible to more students. Schedules have not yet been set, but the buses will leave all five junior highs in the late afternoon or early evenings. Hand-in-hand with activity buses will come more activities for students to join. Superintendent Richard Harris says school administrators are working on that.

Complaints

A citizen complaint policy approved by the school board in spring offers a complaint sheet, Form 1170, to all citizens at all local schools. The form asks details about the complaint, and requests possible solutions to the problem. If dealings with school employees have been exhausted, the form will be sent to a district assistant superintendent for action. If necessary, next will move to the superintendent.

New books

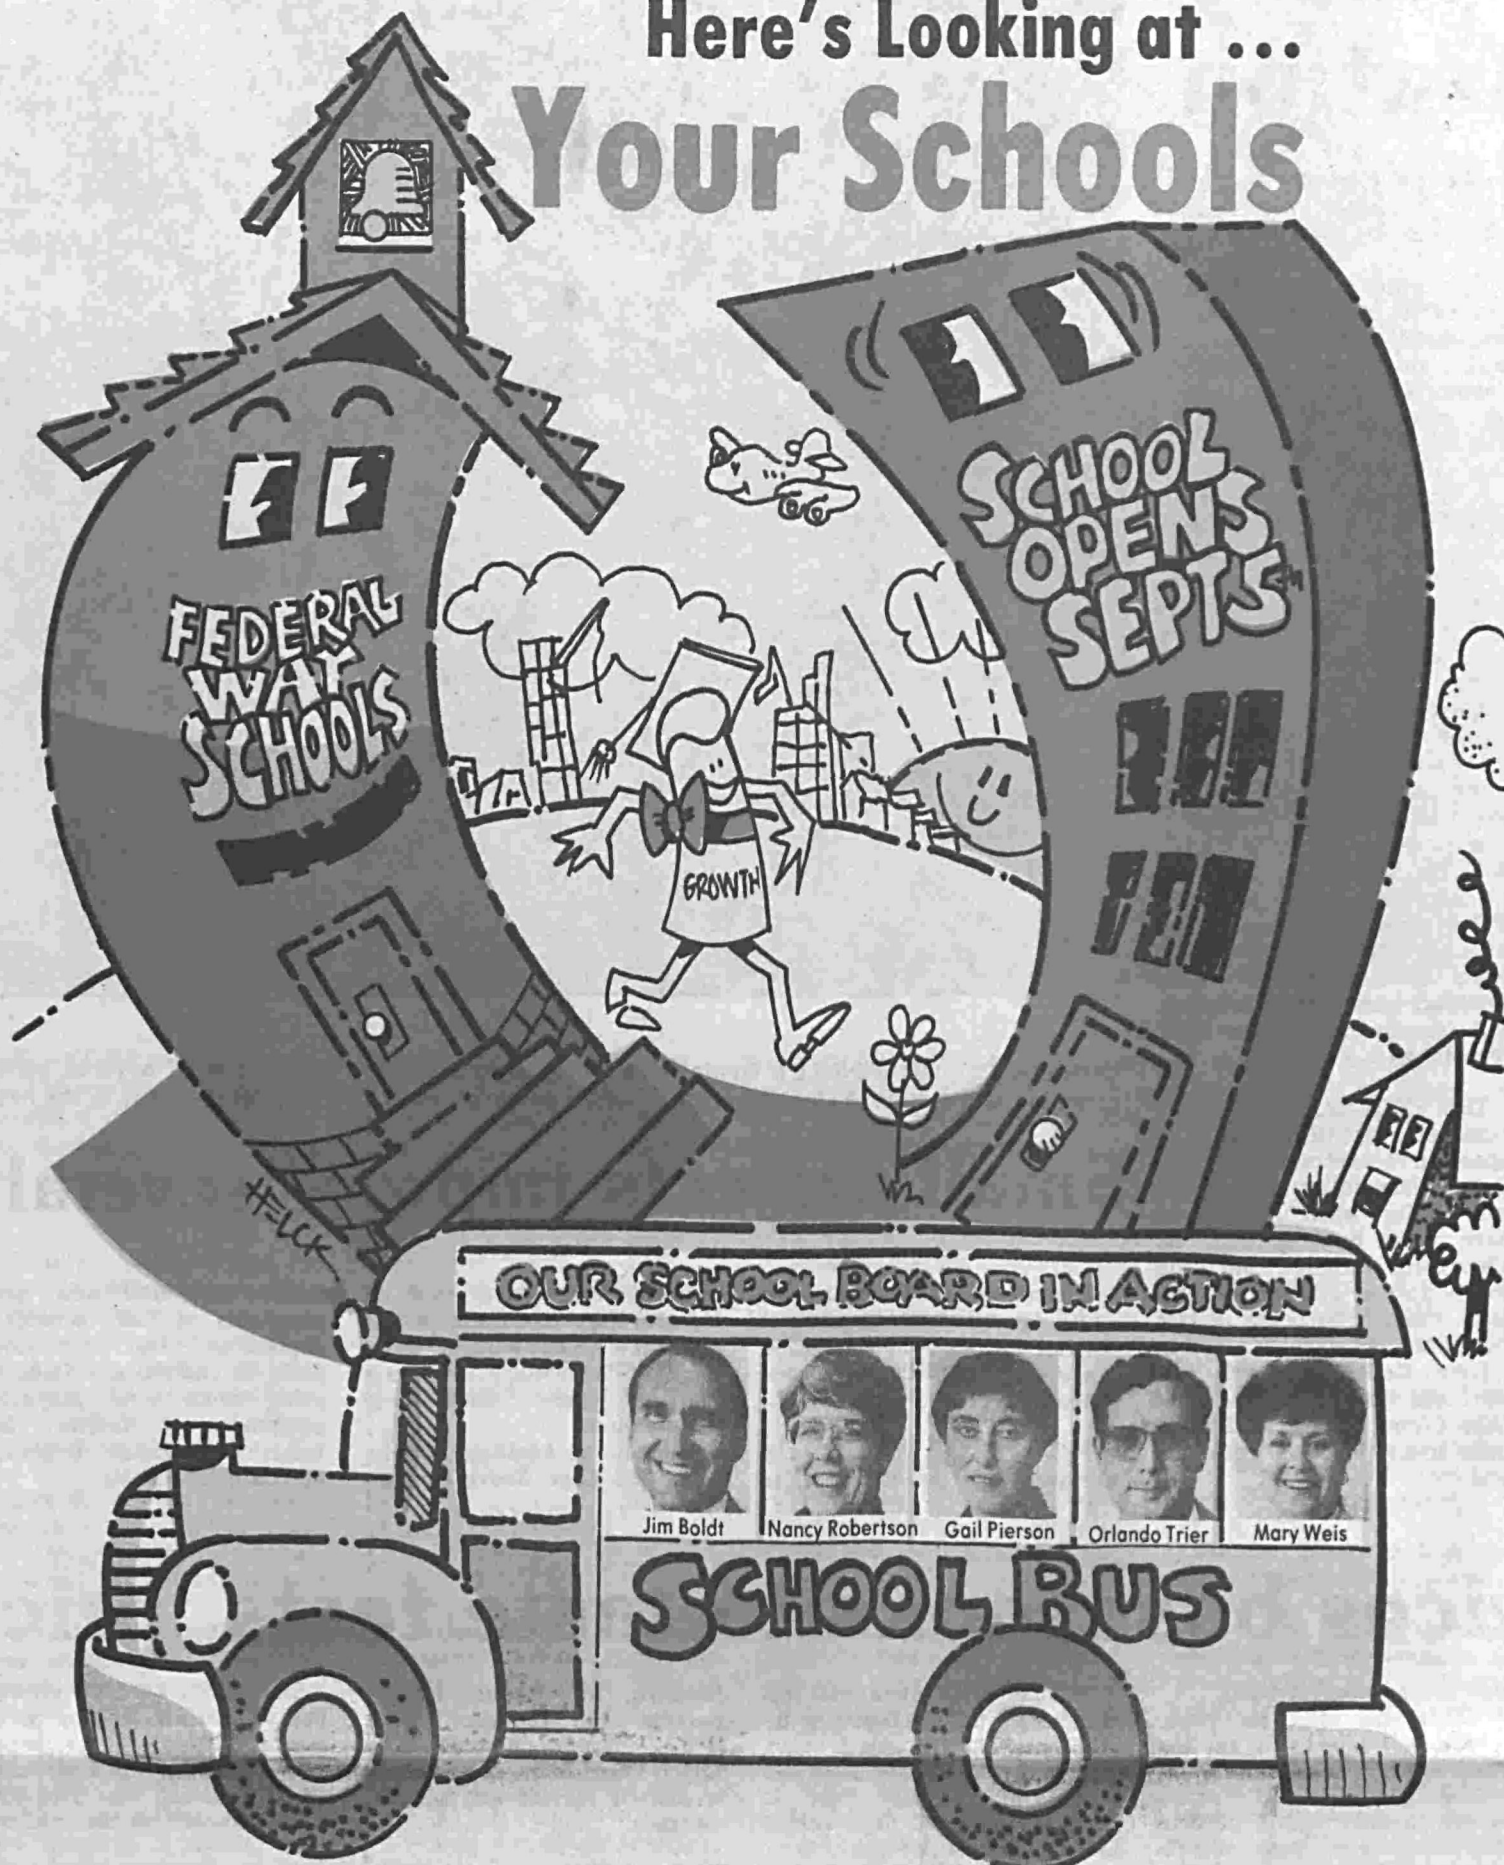

They've been thoroughly studied and school-board approved, and now they're ready for the classroom. Thousands of new textbooks covering mathematics, calculus, French, German, Spanish, Japanese, reading and science will be distributed to elementary, junior high and high school students in September. The district will order more than 8,000 reading books alone. Approximate cost of the total package: $506,000.

Assessment

A pilot program of voluntary drug and alcohol assessments for students worked well enough at Illahee Junior High last year to convince school bosses that such assessment should be offered at all local junior highs and high schools, as well as Lakeland, Lake Grove, Brigadoon, Wildwood and Valhalla elementary schools. The program includes testing, evaluation, family conferences and some counseling for students believed to be involved in drug or alcohol abuse. The assessment program will begin in September for Illahee and the high schools. It will begin in February at the remaining junior highs and five elementaries.

Here's Looking at ... Your Schools

Another 'O' word

Options in the offing, Harris says

By MELODIE STEIGER

Richard Harris admits he may be overusing his favorite word, "opportunity."

"The assistant superintendents are starting to call it the 'O' word," he said sheepishly. ... So Harris, the superintendent of Federal Way schools, is introducing a new "O" word in conversations about the coming year.

Federal Way has options for creating new schools to handle skyrocketing growth, Harris says. The school district can give students options for after-school activities. District bosses can start considering options that would make school more compatible with the demands of today's students, such as flexible hours.

All of which suggests a third "O" word — "open," as in "open mind." Harris feels the district has made some headway in the more practical aspects of running the district, such as finances and facilities. Now it's time to explore, and keep an open mind.

"We're going to use self-study to decide what we can do, what we're doing now and ways to improve," he said. "Our attitude should be that we're not satisfied with status quo."

HARRIS, 52, was hired by the Federal Way School Board two years ago when longtime superintendent Milton Snyder left to take a national education job. Harris, a father of three grown children, and his wife, Jan, moved from their Pierce County home to a Federal Way neighborhood, near Thomas Jefferson High School, a stipulation of the superintendent's $77,438 per year contract.

The new superintendent took over at a time of general dissatisfaction with district fiscal operations — schools had undergone mid-year spending "freezes," and a $3.6 million modernization project at Decatur High School had gone awry.

Well, the freezes are over, says Harris, and the district's modernization program to update buildings is well nigh complete at local schools.

It's time to start looking elsewhere for needed improvements.

"It should be fun," said Harris.

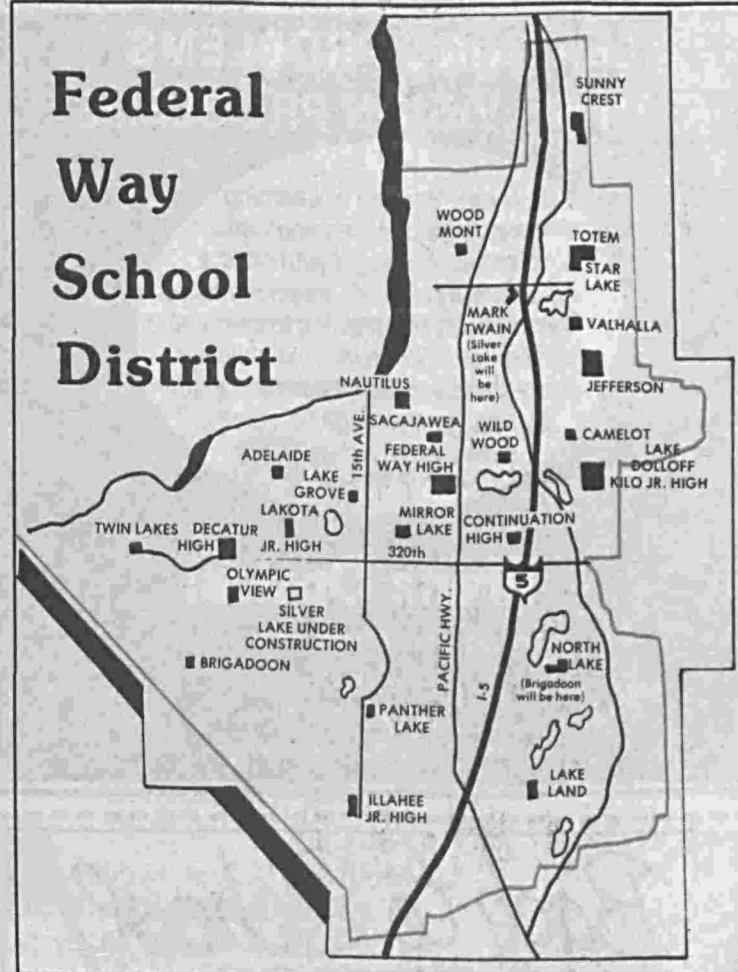

THE DISTRICT'S many options start with facilities. New schools certainly will be needed even after Silver Lake elementary starts up this year, says Harris, but that need not mean stamping out buildings with cookie cutters.

School administrators, the school board and various district committees might also consider adding a magnet school, for instance, with special classes for students all over the district. Or the district may need another junior high sooner than another elementary school.

Then again, the district may take the more obvious route and open a second new elementary in fall 1992, with its students housed at the old Mark Twain Elementary School in 1991-92.

Richard Harris

THE FEDERAL WAY SCHOOL DISTRICT consists of 26 schools spread across 40 square miles. This special section of the Federal Way News is intended to help residents learn more about the district in anticipation of the first day of school Sept. 5. For more information contact school district headquarters, 31405 18th Ave. S. Call 941-0100 or 927-7420.

"There are many possibilities out there, and these are decisions that will involve staff and community residents," Harris said.

ALSO UP FOR consideration: Improved computer systems for district management, which eventually would tie together schools and district headquarters; expanded graduate follow-up studies; trades and sales of district-owned, unusable land for potential school sites; and flexible hours for students and teachers.

"That last one's a biggie. But I have the job, as superintendent of facilities, to look at that," said Harris. "Maybe there are other ways to structure the school day that would work well for students and staff."

Harris says he's also looking forward to this year's new pro-

Fresh faces fill key posts

By MELODIE STEIGER

The Federal Way School District personnel department is going full-speed in these waning days of summer vacation, hiring at least 75 new teachers for the coming school year.

But at least the district's administrative staff is in place, says Roger Smith, personnel director.

The personnel department has filled several highly visible posts over the summer. The most visible of those is the director of fine arts, a job taken by Linda Gohlke.

Gohlke takes over a controversial part of the school district curriculum. Teachers and parents have complained for several years that, in the wake of steady levy failures in the 1970s, vocal and instrumental music education are not up to par.

Gohlke, who began work here in July, says it's still too early to say exactly what's in store for music or any other fine arts program here. She has filled seven open music positions in the district, and plans to participate in a forum on fine arts to be held in October.

Gohlke, a Seattle resident, will arrange budgets, schedules and curriculum for all fine arts, from music to dance. She has been a doctoral student at the University of Washington School of Music Education, and her UW degree combines music and education.

WORKING CLOSELY with Gohlke will be Carl Buchholz, new district activities director who until recently taught social studies and global education at Decatur High School. Buchholz has replaced Gary Brines, interim director, who is now considering a job with the Washington Interscholastic Activities Association.

Buchholz will work out of offices at the Federal Way Memorial Stadium. His new job entails scheduling and securing locations for activities at all Federal Way schools.

Schools rely on volunteers

At the behest of the Federal Way School Board, the school district calls together several citizens' committees throughout the year to study various aspects of district curriculum and operations.

Federal Way residents might be asked to examine a recent issue for a short time, such as four-year high schools or an upcoming levy. Several standing committees also advise the district throughout the year on long-range programs, such as vocational education, special education and textbook adoption.

About 250 parents to date have volunteered to serve as Key Communicators. The Key Communicator program targets parents who can be called by the district should an incorrect or incomplete rumor about schools be passing through the community. The volunteers are given the latest information from the school district and are asked to make it available to anyone concerned about the issue at hand, said Judy Wall, communications director for the district.

Volunteerism for any committee is not limited to parents of local students — Federal Way residents with grown children or no children are encouraged to participate in district studies.

Anyone interested in being named to a committee is asked to call Wall or Kathy Purcell at school district headquarters, 941-0100. Residents can volunteer for particular committees or leave their name and area of interest, in case an appropriate committee is formed.

The list of names will be forwarded to the person in charge of the committee, who then will choose members.

Seven schools undergo heavy modernization

By MELODIE STEIGER

Modernization at Federal Way schools is in a state of flux as the school year nears, with some projects in the throes of heavy construction and others just getting their final touches.

Jake Walker, director of facilities for the school district, has reported that most work at the seven schools now under construction is on schedule. Work on Thomas Jefferson High School's main entry, as well as its cafeteria and main offices, is the only largest of three exceptions.

Modernization is an ongoing project, designed to update all 26 existing schools in Federal Way. Construction and new equipment for each school is paid for by a combination of state funds and bonds approved by local voters.

CONSTRUCTION is now in progress or just finishing up at the following schools:

- Thomas Jefferson High School, where snags in roof and walkway construction have pushed back the use of the cafeteria, main offices and little theater to late September or early October. The rest of the $10 million project is on schedule, Walker said, and school will open there on time. Work will continue as students attend classes and is to be complete a year from now.

- Federal Way High School, where asbestos abatement is complete in portions now under construction, and lathing and plastering has begun in the shop and one wing. Construction has also begun in the gymnasium, offices and music rooms. The $10 million project is on scheduled to be complete in December 1990. Students will attend classes during construction.

- Sacajawea, where work is somewhat behind in areas because of snarls in rebuilding bathrooms. Walker has said the delays will not affect school opening or classroom schedules. The $3.3 million job is expected to be done in December.

- Brigadoon, where major demolition is complete in some areas and work on gas lines, cedar siding and a new roof has begun. Brigadoon students and staff will stay at the old North Lake Elementary School until winter. Brigadoon's $1.5 million project is scheduled to be substantially complete Dec. 1.

- Twin Lakes, Nautilus and Lake Grove elementaries, where modernization projects of varying sizes are winding up in time for students' return, according to Walker. Twin Lakes' modernization has been behind schedule for weeks and will come in close to the wire, however, and some minor work will remain to be done after school starts.

THE FEDERAL WAY School Board also recently agreed to go ahead on reconstruction at Lake Dolloff Elementary School, the last of the "open" schools to have walls built between its classrooms. Bids are now being sought for the $1.5 million project, which is to begin in late December and end next August.

Lake Dolloff students and staff will stay at the old North Lake Elementary School while their school is under construction.

Small projects improve several schools

Mid-size and small repairs are going on all over the school district while modernization continues full-force at seven schools.

The school district's maintenance department is finishing up a new roof on Decatur High School and has put a new roof on one wing of Olympic View Elementary, according to Rod Leland, director of maintenance.

Students at Adelaide, Mirror Lake and Lake Grove elemen-

taries will find new grass playfields at their schools in September. And new safety pads, to cushion any falls, are going under some playground equipment at Nautilus, Star Lake, Twin Lakes, Brigadoon and Camelot schools.

The old Mark Twain Elementary School, which will house Silver Lake students this year, is getting a new roof and new structure. And six new portable classrooms are being shipped to various elementary schools in early and late September.

Food services boss looks to taste tests, price hike

By MELODIE STEIGER

Mary Gallier figured she knew how a corn dog should taste. After all, she is director of the Federal Way School District food services, which serves a million meals a year to students and staff.

But she seemed something about corn dogs — or rather, students' views on corn dogs — at a districtwide taste test last spring.

"This corn dog was goeey, so I marked it low," Gallier recalled. "But a high school student tried it too, and he looked at me as if I was crazy, like, 'You don't know what a corn dog should taste like.'"

That discovery led to one of several changes in food services at Federal Way schools this year. Later in the school year, it will be students of all ages taste testing the food offered at local schools instead of adults. Some students helped out last year, but the emphasis will be on children's tastes this year, Gallier said.

And there's no telling what the results will be. Gallier notes that pizza is still the perennial favorite of local lunchgoers, "Try as we might to change that," she sighed.

THE FOOD services department works out of the central kitchen, a large brick building sandwiched between Federal Way High School and Federal Way Memorial Stadium. About 100 employees stock the food, cook it and ship it out five days a week to all 26 schools.

Gallier says the quantity of food that passes through the building is staggering — to stock frozen food alone, central kitchen employees order a semi-truckload of food.

More than taste tests will change for food services this year. The district's breakfast program will include eight elementary schools this year — Camelot, Lake Grove, Mirror Lake, Olympic View, Star Lake, Sunnycrest, Wildwood and Nautilus — as well as continue at Federal Way High School. The menu of those breakfasts will expand, too, with more protein items offered.

Students will see a "City Burger" on the menu this year, named in honor of Federal Way's impending cityhood.

"We'll still offer the basic burger, but this one's got the whole works," said Gallier.

THE DEPARTMENT also has moved to milk with 1 percent milkfat, rather than the 2-percent milk served in past years. Gallier said whole milk still will be available upon request.

Gallier also has announced that food prices will rise this year, due largely to inflation and last summer's drought in the Midwest, which raised the price of fruits and vegetables.

Reduced-price lunch costs will not change, but the following increases will be in place:

- Elementary school breakfasts will rise from 50 cents to 60, and high school breakfasts from 60 cents to 70.

- Elementary school lunches will rise from $1 to $1.10, and junior high and high school lunches from $1.25 to $1.35. Staff lunches will be $1.75, up from $1.50.

- Single servings of milk will go up from 25 cents to 30.

The food services department is watchdogged by The Lunch

Concern, an organization of parents who represent most schools in the district. The Lunch Concern meets monthly to discuss service and suggest changes.

The Lunch Concern offers a hotline number for any parent with a question or concern about school lunches. The line is staffed by a parent, who then takes that comment to the food services employees.

The number, which changes every month, is printed on the school district menu. Menus are distributed monthly at each school.

Introducing the Federal Way School Board

Here is a closer, and more personal, look at the five people elected to oversee operations of the Federal Way School District — the Federal Way School Board.

Mary Weis

Age: 42.
Occupation: Homemaker.
Residence: Marine Hills (Director District 1). Born in Tonopah, Nev. Has lived in Federal Way for 10 years.

Moved here because: "It's a beautiful area close to my parents and close to my husband's parents."
Family: Husband Kurt, son Bill, daughter Angela.

Favorite book, movie, weekend activity: The Bible, "Rain Man" (this year), entertaining family and/or friends at the family cabin."

Special interest as board member: "Advocating for patrons' priorities for education."

What today's kids need most from education is to: "Learn how to research and gather information and then how to analyze and apply it in life."

If I could ask every parent one question it would be: "How can schools help you teach your children?"

If I could tell all parents one thing about education, it would be: "Be closely involved in your child's education and seek ways to work with your child's teachers, right on through high school."

The teacher I best remember is: "Larry Griffith, my 10th grade contemporary world problems teacher. He demanded that I be able to verbalize 'why' I believed something and he required that I get involved in working for something in which I believed."

The best lesson I learned in school was: "To seek to understand people and their motivations and to respect differences."

Orlando Trier

Age: 44.
Occupation: Pastor at Light of Christ Lutheran Church.
Residence: Kilt Corner (Director District 5). Born in Fort Wayne, Ind. Has lived in Federal Way for 3½ years.

Moved here because: "God led me to accept the call by the Mission Board of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod to begin a new congregation."

THE FEDERAL WAY School Board is the policy-making body of the Federal Way School District. Its five elected members meet the second and fourth Mondays of each month at school district headquarters to approve spending and set the course for the district. Seated before the most important influence on their child's learning experience. Consequently, I feel they need to be an active participant in our public schools."

The teacher I best remember is: "My third-grade teacher. From her I learned that art was more than a time-filler — it was exploration and expression. That music was more than singing — for someone who doesn't carry a tune this was important (I could be successful as we marched around the room). That recess was something to be enjoyed by the teacher too, as she joined in our games and fun with us, teaching us new games and developing our leadership. All this sounds so ordinary, but for this 8-year-old, in that rural, one-room school, she instilled the value of the individual to the whole."

The best lesson I learned in school was: "See previous answer."

Jim Boldt

Age: 39.
Occupation: Lobbyist.
Residence: West Campus (Director District 3). Born in Kennewick, Wash. Has lived in Federal Way for 8½ years.

Moved here because: "I liked the location. My wife did, too. I worked in Olympia. She worked in Seattle."

Family: Wife Valerie, son Robbie.

Favorite book, movie, weekend activity: "You Can Negotiate Anything," "Alien," fishing and crabbing with my son.

Special interest as board member: "Planning, schedules and budget."

What today's kids need most from education is: "Support, encouragement, to like to learn."

If I could ask every parent one question, it would be: "What is the parent or guardian's responsibility in public schools?"

If I could tell all parents one thing about education, it would be: "That it actually, it would be over by the time kindergarten starts, and our schools are only as good as the community, parent and guardian support."

The teacher I best remember is: "Mrs. Neuman, ninth-grade core class, diagramming sentences."

The best lesson I learned in school was: "Average won't make it."

significant."

The best lesson I learned in school was: "I could accomplish anything I wanted to, as long as I was willing to listen and put in the effort."

Nancy Robertson

Age: 50.
Occupation: Chemist.
Residence: West Hill of Kent (Director District 2). Born in Worland, Wyo. Has lived in Federal Way 11½ years.

Moved here because: "I like the scenery, the climate and recreational opportunities."

Family: Husband Juan, son Bruce.

Favorite book, movie, weekend activity: "Crossing to Safety" and "Riding the Iron Rooster" (recent favorites), "A Man for All Seasons, and being outdoors (hiking, gardening, sightseeing, attending sporting events).

Special interests as board member: "My main interest is in curriculum and methods of delivery. I also have a great deal of concern in the best ways of helping our 'at-risk' children."

What today's kids need most from education is: "First, a sense of caring and concern from the staff and their peers. And they need to learn 'how to learn' and have a 'love of learning.' If these are in place, we can teach them anything."

If I could ask every parent one question, it would be: "How can the schools best work with you to help your child succeed in school?"

If I could tell all parents one thing about education, it would be: "Model a love of learning to your child and then show interest in what he/she is learning."

The teacher I best remember is: "My high school chemistry teacher. He made the class very interesting and challenging. He inspired my interest in the mysteries of science."

The best lesson I learned in school was: "The joy of learning and the tools that make the ever-changing technologies available to me."

Gail Pierson

Age: 48.
Occupation: Retired home economist.

What's new this year

AIDS study

Lessons about the deadly disease AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) will be going strong in local classrooms this year, following last spring's introduction. Students in grades five through 12 will study and discuss the disease, which is spread mostly through sex with a victim or the sharing of infected hypodermic needles.

Parents may waive their children's participation in the lessons, after discussion with school personnel.

New hours

If your child was at school bright and early at 9 a.m. each morning last year, beware. It's likely that bright and early is 35 minutes later this year, since 13 local elementary schools have switched daily schedules.

Lakeland, Lake Grove, Mirror Lake, Nautilus, Olympic View, Panther Lake, Silver Lake, Twin Lakes, Wildwood and Camelot elementary will be in session from 9 a.m. to 3:10 p.m. this year. Brigadoon, Adelaide, Lake Dolloff, Star Lake, Sunnycrest, Valhalla and Woodmont will be in session from 9:35 a.m. to 3:45 p.m.

Continuation High School, the district's alternative high school, will start 15 minutes later than in the past, at 7:45 a.m. All other secondary schedules will be unchanged.

More students

Talk of escalating enrollment has taken on the tone of a "Swamp Thing" movie ad in the past year — "It came from NOWHERE, but it continues to GROW beyond CONTROL...AAAUGH!"

Well, this year's sequel is bigger and better than ever. The district enrolled 16,300 students last year, and expects 400 more in the coming school year. And even the addition of Silver Lake Elementary School will not stop the VORACIOUS enrollment BEAST that threatens take over your schools, ROOM by ROOM...AAAUGH!

Silver Lake

Silver Lake Elementary School, Federal Way's first new elementary in 17 years, makes its debut this fall — almost. The Silver Lake building, to be located at 1310 S.W. 325th Place, will be under construction this school year and opened next fall. But Silver Lake students, culled from Panther Lake, Olympic View and Lake Grove elementary, will attend classes this year at the old Mark Twain Elementary, near Star Lake.

The staff of Silver Lake already has been selected by Mary Pachek, principal of the new school, and a PTA is forming now.

School 18

School bosses insist that enrollment is far from over, and to prove it, they've launched plans to build the district's 18th elementary school. If all goes well, the school will open in fall 1991.

A district committee is charged with the task of choosing a site for the school immediately, if not sooner. Likely targets for the search are south Federal Way, where kids are popping out of school seams, and the Star Lake area, where enrollment is likewise skyrocketing.

These are listing, by school and bus route, of all currently approved bus stops in the Federal Way School District where transportation service is provided.

To insure smooth operations, the following suggestions should be followed:

1. Students should embark and disembark at the stop closest to their home.
2. The time listed is the Expected Arrival Time at the stops. Students should be at their bus stops at least five (5) minutes prior to the listed time, but no more than ten (10) minutes. This will insure no loading delays, and at the same time should reduce noise, confusion, and vandalism at the bus stops.
3. Students should wait OFF the roadways.

Adjustments to the routes may be necessary during the school year. Notification of any adjustments will come through the school principal, the bus driver, or both.

Panther Lake will build new identity

Federal Way's new elementary school, Silver Lake, won't be the only school trying to foster a sense of community this fall.

With about 60 students cut out of its service area by the new school, Panther Lake Elementary School will be working hard to recreate a sense of family.

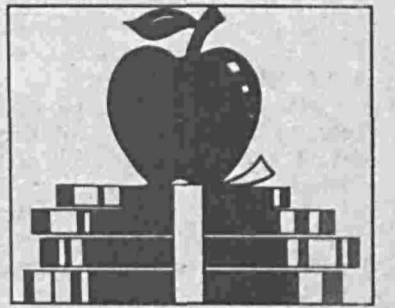

"We are going to be a different campus in the sense that we will be missing part of our student body," said principal Sharon Stenersen.

The district expects 640 students to attend the West Campus school this fall. Panther Lake is among the schools hit the hardest by new development. Last year's enrollment hovered around 700 students.

Visitors probably won't notice the school's major improvement — roof repairs. "We're just getting everything spiffed up," Stenersen said.

New faces at Panther Lake this year include students in the special education program who were housed at Wildwood Elementary School. There also will be a new kindergarten classes at Panther Lake this year.

Marguerite Granger and Nancy Tilly transfer from within the district to teach the kindergartners. Karla Anderson and Sue Walker transfer from Wildwood with their special education students.

Nancy Tracy has been hired to be the school's librarian and James Anderson transfers from Nautilus Elementary to be Panther Lake's custodian.

Learning goals for the year include self-esteem building and integrating studies. For example, reading skills will be emphasized during history lessons.

Panther Lake is at 34424 First Ave. S. Its phone number is 838-1340. School hours have been changed to 9 a.m. to 3:10 p.m.

This is one in a series of stories on each of the Federal Way School District's 26 schools that will run between now and Sept. 5.

Snow days make up for chilly weather

The Federal Way School District and teachers' union set aside two open school days each year in case of snowfall.

If snow or some emergency closes school during the year, the time may be made up those days. Otherwise, students and staff will have those days off.

Snow days this year are Friday, Feb. 16 and Friday, May 4.

In case of snowfall, announcements about school closures or late starts are made every half hour starting at 5:30 p.m. on six local radio stations: KVI (570 AM), KING (1090 AM)

KJR (950AM), KTAC (850 AM), KIRO (710 AM) and KOMO (1000 AM).

The school district asks that parents not call the schools or radio stations for snow information because the lines likely will be tied up. Parents who leave home early are also advised to have their children continue listening to the radio on snowy mornings, in case any late changes in schedule are made.

The decision to close schools is made by Superintendent Richard Harris, based on road condition reports by the district transportation department.

PTA year focuses on arts, family challenges

By MELODIE STEIGER

Donna Frey says several local PTA units have told her loud and clear that they want to try a joint project this school year, under the umbrella of the districtwide PTA Council.

"They haven't decided what that project will be, but they want to do it," she mused with a chuckle.

That suits Frey just fine. One of the Kilo Junior High parent's goals last year when named president of the Federal Way PTA Council was to foster grass-roots projects begun by the PTA units at local schools.

The PTA Council that Frey heads is the support system that ties together PTA units at 23 Federal Way schools, including the new Silver Lake Elementary School.

Representatives from each school PTA meet eight times each year at council meetings, held the third Thursday of every month at various locations

Donna Frey throughout the district. There, they share information about each unit's activities, such as successful fund raisers and schoolwide parties, as well as information about the workings of the state and national PTA organizations.

The executive board of the council includes Frey, Linda Moshier (first vice president), Sonya Krehbiel (second vice president), Anita Niccum (secretary) and Erma Hanson (treasurer).

PTA units at each school likewise have their own officers, as well as several committee heads.

THE COUNCIL'S areas of interest this year, selected by members of each unit, are arts education in public schools, improved communication, cycles of anger and challenges to family living. Several PTA projects conducted this year will focus on those issues, said Frey.

The first project for arts in education this fall probably will be a community forum covering fine arts and music in local schools. A featured speaker at the as-yet unscheduled forum will be Linda Gohlke, who was hired this summer to head the fine arts curriculum.

Frey said the aforementioned joint PTA project probably will focus on challenges to family living. It might take the form of a guest speaker, talking about the PTA in relation to Federal Way cityhood, or the family and changes in the community.

Also in the works this year are three night meetings for the PTA Council. Frey said they have been tried unsuccessfully in the past, but parents have complained that daytime meetings are difficult to attend.

"It's worth a try," she added. THE PTA COUNCIL and its 23 units will also continue with several ongoing projects this year, including:

- The PTA Clothing Bank, which supplies slightly worn outfits for local needy students.

Contributions of child-size clothes are taken at each school that has a PTA. Potential recipients of clothing can call their local school for more information.

- Business memberships in the PTA, available for $25 per year. The memberships entitle businesses to display a decal proclaiming their support, a certificate of membership and the council's monthly newsletter.

- The "We Care" program, also sponsored by St. Francis Community Hospital and some parent booster groups. The program encourages parents to pledge that any student get-togethers at their homes will be drug- and alcohol-free, and well chaperoned. The parents' names and phone numbers will be listed in a school directory, so parents can communicate with one another.

PTAs are in place at all but Kilo Junior High, and Decatur and Continuation high schools. Kilo has a Parent/Teacher Service Organization and Decatur has a booster club.

Anyone wishing to join a parent/teacher organization can contact members through any local school, said Frey.

Salesky, Stevenson take district posts

Robertson will take over the job of assistant principal at Decatur High School. The post was left open when Brenda Renrick resigned to take a job at another district.

Robertson taught fourth and fifth grades from 1983 to last spring at Brigadoon, where he was principal designee under Ed Novak. He coached several teams, from football to track, and served as a principal intern during the 1988-89 school year.

FEDERAL WAY resident James Stevenson has been tapped to head the school district's transportation department. Rod Leland, formerly director of that department as well as district maintenance, is now solely the director of maintenance.

Stevenson, a 1955 graduate of Federal Way High School, most recently has worked as coordinator of transportation at the Educational Service District 121, a cooperative service shared by several school districts.

His new duties include overseeing bus scheduling and maintenance, bus purchases and personnel.

Gwen Salesky has been named coordinator of elementary special education for the district, a post filled by an interim director last year. Salesky has for the last 15 years been education/handicapped/mental health coordinator for the Tacoma School District's Head Start and Early Childhood Education and Assistance program.

In Federal Way, the Tacoma native will oversee the work of school psychologists, hire special education teachers, coordinate some in-service programs for teachers and set special education budgets.

Time to look for ideas, new options, Harris says

grams, to be paid for by the district's $70.3 million budget, including activity buses for junior high students, and voluntary drug-and-alcohol assessment for students, which will be in place at 13 schools by winter.

"Some would question if (offering assessments) is the right role for schools. My response would be that if we can salvage any kids and convince them to get their education, that's what we need to do," the superintendent added.

All new ideas will get a good looking-over, especially by the policy-setting school board, Harris said. And ideas are just that — ideas — until they are put into action, he added.

"Ideas are the first step. We're just saying that some things should be reviewed and analyzed. I have to say, let's keep an open mind about ways to improve instruction, because that's what we're all about," he said.
