"ANGEL'S CHAPEL" came to be because Chuck Hardin's wife Donna wanted a doghouse for Angel. Chuck had always wanted to build a church, and they reached a compromise. "I said, 'OK, you got it. I'll build you a doghouse,'" said Hardin. Angel couldn't be happier.

Pious canine keeps faith in her doghouse church

By SEAN ROBINSON

The Federal Way News "Weird Stuff" search heard the peal of heavenly bells this week, and found a one-room chapel with an angelic occupant.

Chuck Hardin always wanted to build a church.

His wife always wanted a doghouse for their Sheltie, Angel.

They compromised. "I kind of combined the two, made a doghouse church," said Hardin.

"Angel's Chapel," as the sign over the arched entrance calls it, has all the comforts any canine could ask for. Even Snoopy, with his philodendron and Van Gogh, couldn't complain.

It's double walled on all sides, and fully insulated. It has a watertight roof of asphalt shingles, and gutters to match. A miniature picket fence surrounds it.

It even has stained glass windows, with an added feature that human-type churches ought to consider. They slide open and shut. Hardin painted them himself. "I was an artist when I was a kid," he said.

The chapel on the corner of Military Road South and South 299th Place has gotten its share of gawkers since it went up in June. "I got some weird expressions off the road here," said Hardin. "The neighbors had fits watching me doing this."

Angel had no qualms about her new home. She was glad of the change. She used to sleep under a small boat that Hardin leaned up against the side of his house. It must have been a bit breezy, because she discarded it immediately when she saw the construction begin in her little yard.

"She took to it before it was framed," said Hardin. "She knew it was a doghouse right up

Candidates listen to land-use lecture

Legalities of vesting, downzoning explored

By KURT HERZOG

The desire for tighter land-use control helped give birth to the new cities of Federal Way and Sea-Tac.

But somehow a topic that can incite so much anger among residents about government decisions on zoning and development can put those same residents to sleep when community leaders sit down to create the documents that will guide such decisions.

One can literally watch concerned citizens' eyes glaze over and their heads nod off when the discussion turns to community and comprehensive plans, downzoning, vesting, NGPEs (native growth protection easements) and probably the most irreducible of all bureaucratized, "determination of non-significance."

But for residents who thought King County wasn't listening, they will soon have a chance to speak to a government body that the majority of residents in Sea-Tac and Federal Way thought would be more responsive: their own city councils.

Though many city council candidates have been active in local land-use issues, candidates got a primer lesson in land-use at an Association of Washington Cities workshop Tuesday.

Many of those issues have been covered in earlier news stories, but the workshop also covered two issues that are sure to be a political and legal hot potatoes.

LEGAL AND land-use experts discussed the legality of both vesting and downzoning.

Vesting will play a major role in both cities when development projects that were previously approved by King County's Building and Land Development Division (BALD) are built after the two communities officially incorporate.

There is some legal question about whether a new city can refuse to allow construction of a project in its jurisdiction even if the project is previously approved the project.

There has never been a case before Washington courts to decide just when a developer is vested, or in other words, has the legal right to go ahead with a project.

"Vesting is a major issue,"

Former council candidate aims for fire commission

By MELODIE STEIGER

Fred Jaber might be Jim Osborne, 24 years later.

Jaber, like Osborne in 1965, boasts financial acumen and an interest in public office. Like Osborne in '65, he has no experience with any fire department anywhere, but is running for the Board of Commissioners of Fire District 39 (Federal Way).

Osborne won his first race for the board in 1965, and has served on the policy-making body for all but five years since. Jaber hopes this fall to do the same, and in the process unseat Osborne, now chairman of the board.

Jaber says he has a better than 50-50 chance of pulling it off in the Nov. 7 general election (because only two candidates filed for the post, they will skip the Sept. 19 primary election). "I have nothing against my opponent, but that's what I feel myself and my supporters can do," he said.

Osborne admits he's surprised that Jaber, a relative newcomer to local politics, threw his hat in the ring. He warns that serving on the board is harder than it looks.

"If anyone is looking at (the post) for a title or just to be able to say they're a member of the board, they're looking in the wrong place," he said.

Dean Gullikson, another longtime commissioner who was recently appointed to the board after four years off for health reasons, gets a free ride on the Nov. 7 ballot. Nobody challenged the Twin Lakes resident for his seat.

OSBORNE SAID he first ran for a fire commissioner's post back in '65 when a friend also ran for the Federal Way School Board and didn't want to be on the ballot alone. Osborne won his race. The friend lost.

The office Osborne won back then made him a director of the Star Lake fire department, one of four that covered Federal Way from the 1940s to the late 1960s.

Over the coming years, all four eventually would consolidate into one, Fire District 39. Star Lake was the last to join, in 1980.

Osborne, 56, now chairs the five-man board of commissioners, composed of board members elected at large to six-year terms. The board meets once a month, at $50 per meeting, to oversee the workings of the district, which includes about 100 paid staff, 45 volunteers and a $7.9 million budget.

AS A NEW BOARD member, Osborne figured he would bring to the department his financial skills, honed by his job as a financial analyst for Boeing.

"Generally speaking, most organizations end up with a finance committee, because every organization needs financial help. But that's one of the skills most organizations don't have," he said.

Osborne left the Star Lake board in 1973 for a job overseas, but returned to Star Lake in 1978, where he now lives with his wife, Colene. He was appointed to the board again in 1978.

The father of four grown children said he has contributed more than financial savvy to the district through the years. He figures he puts 30 hours a month into various fire department duties, including serving on the King County Fire Commissioners' Association and King County 2000.

His first concern for the coming years, he said, is money. Future county levies for basic services could curtail the amount of money available to fire departments, he said.

"There is a serious situation in funding coming up," Osborne warned.

JABER WOULD like to have a crack at that issue, as well as

County team will study gang crime

Seattle police have been aggressively battling gang- and drug-related crime, and their effectiveness may push that activity out of the city and into unincorporated King County.

To be prepared in that event, the King County Sheriff's Department is developing a gang unit to study related crime and develop a departmental policy and procedure for handling it, said Chief Jim Nickel, head of the department's Criminal Investigation Division.

Nickel said gang and drug crimes are closely related and should be looked at together.

Six officers — one from each precinct, one from the Criminal Information Section and one from the Drug Enforcement Unit — will comprise the team, Nickel said.

"They will ferret out information from all levels of the department and formulate policies and procedures," he said.

What they come up with could be anything from a patrol-type unit to actively work on gang-related crimes, to a depart-mentwide plan of action should gang activity warrant one.

"It's really premature to guess what they might come up with," Nickel said.

The department has set a target date of Sept. 1 for the formation of the unit. It isn't known how long it will exist, Nickel said.

'Wired' haunts the memory

Belushi's tragic life chronicled

By SEAN ROBINSON

John Belushi has been dead for only seven years.

They've already made a movie about him. The voluminous star of "Saturday Night Live" and movies such as "The Blues Brothers" and "Animal House" has added perhaps the final milestone to his brief, tragic career: the quickest Hollywood regurgitation in history.

"Wired," loosely based on Bob Woodward's book of the same name, chronicles Belushi's meteoric rise to stardom, and his subsequent tumble into darkness. One early March morning in 1982, Belushi shot a "speedball," a deadly mixture of cocaine and amphetamines, into his arm and died.

Belushi was one of the first of the rash of deaths among celebrities and athletes due to cocaine. When it happened, the public was largely ignorant of the danger. Cocaine was still fashionable, the "drug of choice" among the elite. A lot has been learned since then.

It doesn't seem that long ago. That's what makes "Wired" painful to watch. The events are still so close to us.

Dan Aykroyd, Belushi's best friend, has opposed the production of "Wired." Belushi's brother James has condemned it. They think the film desecrates Belushi's memory. But Belushi's image is not their property. As friend and brother, they have moments that belong to them alone, that we will never know about. But Belushi's public life is the public's.

It's a safe bet Aykroyd and James Belushi haven't seen the film. No doubt they expect it to repeat the book's clinical examination of Belushi's self-destructiveness. The book didn't dwell on Belushi's per-

JOHN BELUSHI (Michael Chiklis) has a difficult time watching himself on the movie screen. But his guardian angel Velasquez (Ray Sharkey), who takes Belushi on a visit to his former life, has a great time in "Wired," the powerful film based on Belushi's brief career and tragic demise.

But the film is not clinical. Though it does not shy away from the drug habits (there were many), the rest of Belushi is there, too. There are positive moments, and Belushi is given the chance to defend himself against his biographer.

"Wired" resembles a twisted version of "It's a Wonderful Life." In this instance, it might be called, "It's a Wasted Life." It begins with Belushi's dead body being delivered to the morgue.

Belushi's "ghost" wakes up, frightened out of his wits, and flees the morgue screaming. He hails a cab, driven by a Puerto Rican guardian angel named Velasquez (Ray Sharkey). The two take a Scrooge-like journey through Belushi's life. It is both funny and frightening.

At the same time, Bob Woodward (J.T. Walsh) begins his investigation of Belushi's death, followed by the ghostly duo of Belushi and Velasquez. "He's gonna do the same thing for you that he did for Nixon," says the guardian angel. Belushi's response is unprintable.

The hindsight approach used by Earl Mac Rauch's screenplay and Larry Peerce's directing is compelling. It lends an appropriately absurd atmosphere to the film. At one point, Belushi and Velasquez sit in a theater and watch the famous cafeteria scene from "Animal House." Sitting in the midst of a howling crowd, Belushi watches himself.

Woodward's investigations lead him to a discussion with Aykroyd (Gary Groomes), and finally to the room where Belushi met his death. As he stands in the darkness, the scene unfolds in front of him. He sees Belushi's prone form on his deathbed, hacking away the last moments of his life. It's an eerie feeling.

Michael Chiklis as Belushi is uncanny. His resemblance is nearly perfect, and sometimes his red-rimmed eyes and gravelly voice capture Belushi so completely you almost believe the man isn't dead. It's an amazing performance.

"Wired" isn't an easy film. Seeing Belushi in his junkie misery is difficult, as are the machinations of Hollywood producers who perpetuate Belushi's drug habit in order to finish their shooting. But the film is also funny, and borders on tribute.

We are given all views of John Belushi, from the cop who dismisses him as "just another fat junkie who went 'belly-up,'" to the musings of his wife, Judith Jacklin Belushi (Lucinda Jenney) and the cold attitude of Woodward.

It doesn't answer the question of why Belushi destroyed himself. When Woodward asks the Belushi phantom why he put a needle into his arm, something he professed to fear, Belushi screams, "Because I needed it! Because it's mine!"

The journey through Belushi's life in "Wired" is a fitting metaphor. It captures the absurdity and senselessness of a loss that still hurts. We are left with Belushi's movies and reruns of "Saturday Night Live" as his only legacy. Among the reruns is a painfully ironic sketch where Belushi, as an old man, dances on the graves of his former co-stars, having outlived them all.

"Wired" is playing at Sea-Tac North. The rating is "R" for language.

AUBURN'S GOOD OL' DAYS start tonight and end tomorrow night, with dozens of entertainers scheduled in between. Members of the 50-man Entertainer's Harmonized Kings, a barbershop-style chorus, will perform at 10 a.m. tomorrow in front of Auburn City Hall.

'Good Ol' Days' will begin tonight

Yesteryear returns to Puget Sound tonight and tomorrow as Auburn's annual Good Ol' Days celebration gives the community "A Glimpse of the Past."

All participants and activities in the event will be tuned into the past, focusing on the days before white settlers came to the region through the early 1920s.

Activities begin tonight at 6:30 for "A Rompin' Stompin' Street Show" in Auburn's Pioneer Square next to JC Penney. Cloggers, square dancers, western dancers and ethnic dancing will be part of the entertainment. The Jam Packed Bluegrass Band also will play, along with Accordion Joe.

From 8-9 p.m., a mini Indian pow wow will be featured in the First Interstate Bank parking lot.

Then tomorrow, the celebration takes off. An 80-unit parade will start the festivities at high noon along Main Street. Dozens of covered wagons and buggies, pumper fire engines, pack horses and vintage trucks will parade past viewers. A U.S. Memorial Cavalry Unit, a Civil War Skirmish Unit and horse pack trains will fill out the procession.

Other events scheduled throughout the day include entertainment in Slaughterhouse Square (named for Lt. William Slaughter of the U.S. Cavalry, for whom the town was originally named).

A feature 'Uns Square will feature events for kids, including watermelon- and pie-eating contests, pony rides, a petting farm and games of yesteryear.

Other activities for kids and adults include a railroad memorabilia swap meet, a working telegraph office, sale and exhibit booths and an old-time movie festival at the Avenue Act I dinner theater. Some of the many entertainers scheduled to perform will be Kathy Sroufe, the Centennial Singers, the Heavier Than Air Players from Green River Community College and the Sea-Tac Harmony Kings.

For more information about the festival, call the Auburn Area Chamber of Commerce at 833-0700.

At the Movies

"THE ABYSS"

James Cameron, director of "The Terminator" and "Aliens," has come up with the rarest of combinations: A special-effects movie with a plot. "The Abyss" concerns a group of commercial divers recruited to save a foundering nuclear submarine. They find a good deal more. The writing is good, the acting excellent, and the effects are superlative. Even though the ending is overdone, "The Abyss" is a visual treat, with a good deal of suspense thrown in. Playing at Gateway Center and Southcenter. Rated PG-13.

"BATMAN"

Devotees of the Dark Knight will have minor quibbles with Tim Burton's vision of the Caped Crusader, but not many. Though he's too gadget-oriented and not much of an athlete, this Batman is the grim creator of the night envisioned by his creator, Bob Kane. The effects are tremendous, and rescue a mediocre plot, highlighted by a forced and unnecessary love story. Michael Keaton brings an interesting quirkiness to Batman's character. There may be too much of Jack Nicholson's Joker, but so what? He's brilliant. Rated PG-13. Playing at SeaTac South.

"WHEN HARRY MET SALLY"

Director Rob Reiner has given moviegoers treat. His perception of male/female relationships is realistic, sometimes gritty, and almost always hilarious. Billy Crystal and Meg Ryan are wonderful as a couple who start out hating each other, forget each other, then survive years of platonic friendship, and eventually...well, see the film for yourself. Playing at SeaTac North and at Lewis and Clark, it's rated R.

MARY ELIZABETH MASTRANTONIO has an encounter with a non-terrestrial intelligence in "The Abyss."

"DEAD POET'S SOCIETY"

Imagine, if you can, Robin Williams underplaying a role and you have a thoughtful, poignant portrayal in a thoughtful, poignant film. Williams takes a back seat to his students as a free-thinking nonconformist literature teacher at a stuffy, staid conformist New England prep school. The film is bright, uplifting and tragic as it extols the virtues and dangers of the motto, carpe diem, or seize the day. Rated PG, it is playing at Gateway Center.

"INDIANA JONES AND THE LAST CRUSADE"

"Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" won't disappoint devotees of the George Lucas/Steven Spielberg hero. The imitable Indy (Harrison Ford) gets tangled up with Nazis, religious fanatics, and his own father (Sean Connery) while searching for the legendary Holy Grail. The plot is thin, the action predictable and the suspense non-existent, but the stunts are routinely breath-taking, and Connery adds some spice to the formula mix. Rated PG-13. "Indiana Jones" is playing at SeaTac North.

"PARENTHOOD"

It isn't easy to make movies about family life without descending into the syrup-laden well of sentimentality. "Parenthood" manages to avoid all the clichés that generate labels like "the feelgood movie of the summer." It features an excellent ensemble cast, nifty plot twists, crisp direction of a good screenplay by Ron Howard, and the best performance of Steve Martin's career. It's also very funny. "Parenthood" is playing at SeaTac North and at Lewis and Clark. The rating is PG-13, for mild swearing and some double entendres.

"UNCLE BUCK"

"Uncle Buck" is another John Candy belly flop. The prodigious comedian's talents are wasted in this John Hughes

Groups audition for talent

The Federal Way Philharmonic, the Burien Little Theatre and the Tacoma Youth Symphony Association will hold auditions for their upcoming seasons.

Brian Davenport, conductor of the Federal Way semi-professional orchestra, is looking for string, percussion and horn players. No audition date is set yet, but interested musicians should call 935-0719 and leave their name, telephone number and the name of the instrument played.

Auditions for the first show of the 1989-90 season at the Burien Little Theatre will be at 7:30 p.m. Sunday and Monday, Aug. 27 and 28. Roles are open for two women, four men and one boy about 8-years-old in Larry Shue's "The Nerd," opening in October.

The auditions will be in Room 11 of the Highline Community Center at 425 S.W. 144th St. in Burien. Appointments and prepared audition pieces are not required. For more information, call Al Reamer, producer, at 244-3513.

The Tacoma Youth Symphony Association's auditions for the 1989-90 concert season are set for 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, Aug. 28 through Sept. 6.

The five-minute audition for musicians ages 8-21 will consist of sight-reading and an unaccompanied prepared solo, and will be in Building 7 at Tacoma Community College. Call 627-2792 for an appointment and information.

Selected musicians will be placed in either the Tacoma Youth Symphony, the Tacoma Young Artists Orchestra, the Tacoma Junior Symphony, the Tacoma String Symphony or the Symphonic Winds Arts Training program.

Intiman stages 'Born Yesterday'

The Intiman Theatre Company continues its 17th season next week with "Born Yesterday," Gary Garson's 1940s comedy about social corruption.

Set in Washington D.C. in 1946, the play opens with Harry Brock, junk dealer, and Billie Dawn, his "dizzy blonde" girlfriend. She is somewhat rough around the edges at important social functions, and Brock hires a teacher to teach her a few basic skills.

Teacher Paul Verral, a reporter from the "New Republic," teaches her self-respect as well, however, which tames her in to the true nature of her crooked boyfriend.

Directed by Elizabeth Huddle, Intiman's artistic director, the show will star many Intiman veterans. Ticket prices range from $7 to $18 and are available by calling the Intiman box office at 626-0782 or Ticketmaster at 628-0888.

Concert opens Tacoma season

The Tacoma Philharmonic will open its 53rd season tomorrow with a concert by the Santa Fe Chamber Music Festival.

Nine guest artists will perform music by Mozart, Debussy and Brahms. Call the Pantages at 591-5894 or Ticketmaster at 628-0888 for more information.

Open ARMs helps women to recover from abortion

By WENDY CULVERWELL

With all the energy both sides of the abortion issue are pouring into their arguments, it may come as a surprise to learn that anyone is involved in it in a quiet way.

But Open ARMs — a national ministry to women who have had abortions — isn't out to draw attention to its political position, although it is "pro-life."

What's at issue, said Sue Liljenberg, from whose Federal Way home the ministry was launched, is that abortion is an intensely emotional issue with the potential to wreck the lives of women who have them.

Liljenberg speaks from experience as a 17-year-old in Kansas, she had just graduated from high school and was planning her wedding when she found herself pregnant after her first sexual encounter.

Her fiancé issued an ultimatum: the baby or him. That, compounded by a family planning counselor's assurances that abortion was safe and legal and that the baby was nothing more than a tadpole, helped her to make her decision. She had a legal abortion.

"I bit that, hook, line, and sinker," she said.

BUT HER abortion solved few of her problems — she and her fiancé soon broke up, and one of the abortion's after effects was a serious infection. Within 15 months, she gained 100 pounds and took up the habit of shopping in maternity stores, even though she was no longer pregnant.

Everything she had dreaded came true — she lost her fiancé and had to come clean with her parents. Promiscuity and substance abuse were to become a way of life for years. The pro-miscuity, she explained, was part of her desire to become pregnant again.

In the lingo of Open ARMs (Abortion Related Ministries), the desire to become pregnant again is known as the "atonement baby."

That fact that abortion is legal does not negate many would-be mothers' need to grieve for their baby, she said. But when you add that to the guilt they may feel for having voluntarily terminated the pregnancy, the result can be a newly-recognized syndrome among post-abortion women, Post-Abortion Trauma. It has the symptoms of intense guilt, depression, anger, promiscuity, the desire to have an atonement baby, suicidal urges, substance abuse and eating disorders. It can be triggered years after the abortion by such factors as the birth of a child or the inability to become pregnant.

OPEN ARMS is a Christian ministry for women who are hit by the syndrome. It helps them to come to terms with their feelings through the teachings of Jesus. When it was being formed several years ago, Liljenberg said, there was a strong feeling that Jesus was at its center.

Women who find their ways to Open ARMs are invited to join a Bible study. Even among women who don't consider themselves Christian, the reaction is usually, "I'll do anything to get over this," Liljenberg said.

She became a Christian in 1982, and soon met another woman in the same situation at a symposium in Seattle. The two shared their experiences and came to the conclusion that something needed to be done. With the help of others, Open ARMs was on its way. It is now headquartered in Indianapolis and has 32 chapters in 15 states.

Open ARMs offers a formal 12-week support group and study materials prepared by Open ARMs leaders. The support group and materials are offered for free. The organization operates on individual donations.

The women, led by a counselor who has been through the same experience, learn to deal with their feelings and to forgive the people who may have pressured them into having abortions.

A major goal of the support groups is to enable the women to "let go" of their babies. Some give them names and identities, which makes it easier, while others find the catalyst they seek in constructing some sort of memorial, such as a small flower garden.

Liljenberg knows of a woman who had a mother's ring made with stones for each of the children she had and the one she didn't.

BESIDES her Open ARMs duties, Liljenberg chairs the Woman's Right to Know Initiative campaign. Though it is a pro-choice initiative, she believes women who are fully informed about the physical aspects of abortion will opt for another solution. The initiative requires that women be offered a full description of the procedure, the status of the fetus, the possible harm to her own body, and the alternatives to abortion.

Infertility is the side effect Liljenberg has had to deal with in the 18 years since her abortion. Now 35, she has never been able to have children of her own, and because her husband has children from another marriage, the couple doesn't stand much chance of adopting. She is hopeful surgery might prove helpful.

"If I had known abortion would make me infertile, they couldn't have hogtied me and done it," she said.

She uses the same logic when confronted by the pro-choice argument that women will seek back-alley abortions if Roe vs.

Wade is overturned. Most women, she said, simply won't put their bodies in that kind of danger.

"If a woman will do that, she has bigger problems than just being pregnant," she said.

New support groups will be starting next month. Typically, a counselor will tell her own pastor about Open ARMs and ask if she can hold her meetings at her home church. So far, Liljenberg said, no pastor has turned Open ARMs away.

A group met at Auburn's Bible

Baptist Church last spring, and with excellent results, said Sherrill Westerlin, a secretary at the church. Bible Baptist is preparing a home for unwed mothers, so the ministry fit right in with its pro-life agenda.

Though Open ARMs began in Federal Way, the greatest demand has come from north and northeast Seattle. However, Liljenberg is hopeful that word of mouth will spread word of her work here at home. For information about Open ARMs, call 839-4525.

When the school started in 1964, it was staffed by the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur and at one point included grades one through eight. In 1970, the school was reduced to six grades, but demand has mandated that the upper levels be reincluded in the curriculum.

The school is now staffed by lay teachers, lead by principal Virginia Wetli.

LET FAITH HELP YOUR CHILDREN LEARN THE RIGHT THINGS

It will soon be school time for your children and/or teenagers. In addition to the clothes, shots, eye exams and other preparations for the classroom, you must resolve to make sure that what they learn will be the right things. You will need to keep your eyes and ears open. When away from the normal curriculum, they may be put under pressure (and at an astonishingly early age) to try drugs, join in gang activities, or engage in other very undesirable pursuits.

The schools and law enforcement authorities will do their best to counteract all these enticements, but the task is becoming harder. It is up to you, the parents, with the aid of your House of Worship and its Sunday School, to combat these evil influences and make sure your children are safe from them. They are likely to need all the help you can give them.

Many a dangerous temptation comes to us in line colors that are but skin-deep.

Growth issues confront cities

said Jim Tracy, director of the county's Parks, Planning and Resources Department which oversees BALD. "There is no specific case law."

King County has approved permits for hundreds of apartment units that will be built sometime after the city councils are elected Sept. 19.

Many Federal Way City Council candidates have campaigned on their opposition to more apartments. While the council may be initially inclined to impose a moratorium on the approval of any more apartments in Federal Way, it might have reservations about denying the construction of projects already approved by the county.

Such a denial could result in a protracted and expensive legal battle.

ANOTHER ISSUE that's sure to incite the legal wrath of developers and property owners is downzoning. Downzoning is a governmental decision to rezone a parcel of property to a less intense, or lower-density, zone.

An example would be rezoning an area zoned for multi-family (apartments) to a single-family zone. Property that has a higher-density zoning designation almost always can be sold for more money.

Some property owners call downzoning unconstitutional because it deprives the owner of potential income.

Downzoning is strongly opposed by the Seattle-King County Association of Realtors, which endorsed four of the 14 Federal Way City Council candidates and four of the Sea-Tac candidates.

The association endorsed candidates only if they agreed with the association's position that there should be government compensation for property owners who had their land downzoned.

Although downzoning is controversial, downzones almost always stand up in court, according to Wayne Tanaka, an attorney with a Seattle law firm that specializes in municipal law.

A CITY COUNCIL must have logical and factual reasons to downzone that are provable in court, Tanaka said. But, in fact, a council's reasons "have to be cotton-picking crazy to lose on this issue," he said.

In one recent lawsuit, the courts upheld a Bellevue City Council decision to downzone some property that lowered the land's value from $60,000 to $2,500, Tanaka said.

Other legal experts had more common-sense advice on land use. Attorney Jim Haney advised candidates that they're going to have to adopt a land-use plan immediately after they take office.

That means the councils will probably have to adopt the county's comprehensive plan as a whole and then go about the arduous task of amending it as they see fit.

Another official advised the councils to hire land-use planners with thick skins.

"There are a lot of citizens out there that are expecting disaster," said Kay Shoudy, a planning consultant with a private firm. "You're going to have conflict. That's healthy...this is a representative democracy and you have to listen to all the people."

front." Perched in the entryway, she is content, though she is the only parishioner.

"If anyone wanted to build one of these, it only cost $15," said Hardin. "Every bit of that's scrap wood."

It's hard to believe when you look at the little chapel's perfect siding, painted doors and stained-glass. Hardin said he plans to add a lawn, paint the picket fence and perhaps put a real bell in the steeple. This Christmas, Angel's Chapel will be strung with lights.

"It's really going to be pretty," said Hardin.

Belknap looking for spot on World Team

WHEELCHAIR ATHLETE Rusty Belknap is a nice guy off the track, but a fierce competitor on the track.

By CHUCK MINGORI

Being confined to a wheelchair hasn't stopped Rusty Belknap from competing in athletic events or keeping a sense of humor.

Belknap just completed a tremendously successful series of summer wheelchair races by competing in the Wheels & Heels of Fire last weekend, the Centennial Games two weekends ago and the Junior Nationals held earlier in San Jose, Calif.

He's now waiting to find out if he was selected to the World Team that will go to the World Games in Miami, Fla., Dec. 4-10.

"After hearing the criteria for choosing, I should be a shoe-in, so to speak," said Belknap, explaining they are looking for those who have fared well in different sports and in track.

Belknap is an amputee who placed first in his 16-18 junior division to earn $300 in cash and 22nd overall out of 220 men and 30-some odd women last weekend at the Wheels & Heels of Fire over the Evergreen Point Floating Bridge.

That event is billed as the largest wheelchair race in the world with competitors from nine countries. The 9.3-mile race (or 15 kilometers) started in front of Husky Stadium and went across Lake Washington.

Prior to that, Belknap, 17, captured five gold medals in the Centennial Games and possibly would have had more had he been allowed to compete in more events.

Two weekends before, he got seven gold medals, five silvers and one bronze at Junior Nationals at Deanza College in San Jose. Included in his collection of gold medals at Junior Nationals was one he won in the javelin to set a national mark.

BELKNAP, WHO will be a senior at Federal Way High School, previously had his name in the national record books for the breaststroke in swimming, the 4 x 100 meter relay in track and the javelin. Although his national marks in swimming and on the relay have been broken, he still holds the national mark in the javelin at the Division C level as well as owning the one he broke at this year's Junior Nationals at the D Division level.

Belknap competes in Class 3 for amputees and those with spinal bifida. Other classes are designed for those who are quadriplegics and paraplegics.

"It's been said to be the hardest division," said Belknap of his Class 3 division.

Belknap, who had to have the lower parts of his legs amputated when he was 5 years old after a rare form of meningitis turned to gangrene, likes his chances of making the World Team.

"Since I swept track in D Division (at Junior Nationals) we just naturally assumed I'll make the team," he said.

Belknap also won what is known as the Prince of the Straights race at Junior Nationals, which is an event for the eight fastest competitors in each division in the 100-yard dash.

"The attention encourages other people in chairs to get out and try something. I'd really like to see more people racing," said Rusty Belknap.

"This year was just a really good year for me," said Belknap, "because I won the 100 at the Prince of the Straights and the 5,000. That's why I'm pretty sure I'm going (to the World Games).

"This year I got kind of sick of losing and decided to train, so it's went really well."

Before this year, Belknap said he trained only two times per week, but he has increased that to five times per week this year.

ALTHOUGH HE'LL be a senior at Federal Way, Belknap is not sure whether he'll be able to graduate from there this year, because he hopes to move to Las Vegas and train with coach Barbara Chambers.

Belknap is not sure when he'll be able to go, though, as it will take training money from the National Amputees Association to pay his way.

"They want to find people that are coachable and possibly can beat Craig Blanchette (the top competitor) next year," said Belknap. "My coach thinks I can, so she took it in front of the board and is trying to get some money."

Rusty's parents, James and Linda Siegel, and his grandmother, Helyn Nelson, are his biggest supporters.

"My parents, they're really into it," said Belknap. "My mom takes in all my races. It's kind of tough because there's not a lot of sponsors out there and most of it comes out of her own pockets."

Belknap did receive some financial help from Boeing, which put up $500 to go toward his new three-wheeler, which is valued at about $1,700. He has received some donations from others as well, but most comes from his parents.

He's also drawn some financial help from the maker of his sporty, three-wheeler Shadow wheelchair, Jim Martinson of Puyallup.

"I told him if I didn't start getting a little bit of help from him, I'd try somebody else's chair," said Belknap. "He decided to keep my business by paying my airfare (to Miami)."

Belknap said his new 14-pound wheelchair is much easier to steer because of its light-weight front end, but it also was harder to get used to at first compared to his previous four-wheeler model.

"I flipped over the first time I started," he said. "It scratched up the paint job, too. That kind of irked me."

BELKNAP HAS gained a lot of media attention as a wheelchair competitor. Although he doesn't go out of his way to gain publicity, the attention can only help other handicapped people, he said.

"The attention encourages other people in chairs to get out and try something," he said. "I'd really like to see more people racing. I think there are only about 20 in the state who race."

Belknap has set some high goals for himself, including possibly making a trip to the World Games in Holland next year and possibly to make the 1992 Olympic Games in the 1,500. But another goal seems more important to him, and that is to surpass Craig Blanchette as the top rider. Blanchette is considered the foremost wheelchair racer in this country.

"But hopefully if training goes well and I get to move down to Las Vegas with my coach, Craig's going to be looking right over his shoulder at me," said Belknap.

Adult soccer camp slated

The Tacoma Stars' Neil Megson will host a coed soccer camp for adults 20 years of age and over. Registration will be held Aug. 26, Saturday, at Roadrunner Sports, 2132 S.W. 336th St., Federal Way, in the Twin Lakes Village. For more information, call 838-6541 or 927-7561.

Judson resigns as boys' coach

By TIM CLINTON

After leading his team to five state titles in the last seven years, Jim Judson has resigned his position as Thomas Jefferson boys' soccer coach.

Judson will stay on as a teacher with the Federal Way School District — most likely at TJ.

"I wanted to spend more time with a business my wife and I are working on, and more time with my family," said Judson. "I really wanted to dedicate more time to the development of the business."

Judson, who has children ages one and four, is working with the Microdiet program.

"I get to coach and work with people who have determined that they need to diet," he said. "I'm delighted to have the opportunity to look ahead, and not to the past."

Judson has more than enjoyed his past eight years as the Raiders' head coach, however.

Judson, who also coached the TJ girls' soccer team three years prior to 1988 and led that team to the state playoffs each year, has coached the Raider boys to seven straight playoff appearances.

The only TJ team to not make the playoffs under Judson was his first in 1982, when he took over the Raiders after one year coaching at Federal Way High School.

JUDSON finished with a 126-10-10 coaching record to show for his eight years at Thomas Jefferson, with his team taking state titles four consecutive years from 1983-86 and then again in 1988.

Meanwhile, the Raiders won the South Puget Sound League championship every year but 1988, when they finished second to Lakes but went on to win the state title anyway. Their only tie for the title was this past spring, when they finished with the same point total as crosstown rival Decatur.

Between the start of the 1983 season and a loss to Kentwood in the first round of the state playoffs in 1987, TJ went a national record 94 games without a loss.

The Raiders also won a national record 69 straight contests after a tie with Puyallup in 1984.

"Getting the national focus with the records was the frosting on the cake," said Judson.

Thomas Jefferson marched through 68 straight South Puget Sound League matches without a loss or a tie before absorbing a 1-0 loss to Lakes during the 1988 season.

"THE (Los Angeles) Lakers were the team of the 80's in the NBA, and TJ was the Washington state soccer team of the 80's," said Judson. "It was like a dream. Everything that happened was the fulfillment of a dream. It was a gratifying and heart-warming experience."

Judson gives most of the credit for the accomplishments to his players, however.

"It takes talent to win, and to repeat like that you have to have a lot of talent," he said. "I had the opportunity to be with athletes who executed and made it all possible. They really made things happen and didn't let up until the end of a match. They knew hard work was the key to their success, and didn't say die."

Judson turned in his resignation at the start of the 1989 season, but did not make the decision public until after he guided the Raiders to the SPSSL co-championships and the state quarterfinals.

"I made the decision prior to the first regular season game," he said. "That took it off my mind. I wanted to let them know the outcome of the season had no bearing on the decision. Then we went on and had an acceptable season."

The decision was not made on the spur-of-the-moment, he points out, and it is not without regrets.

"It is disheartening to step down, and it took awhile to come to the final decision," he said. "It didn't happen overnight. But it's time to go on to something else, and for someone else to have the opportunity to step in. I'm sure TJ will continue to be successful."

UPS-PLU game set Sept. 14

The table has been set to again bring Tacoma football fans the annual University of Puget Sound and Pacific Lutheran University battle in the Tacoma Dome.

The game, which reportedly draws the largest crowd for NAIA football in the nation, will be held on Thursday, Sept. 14. The game will be the seventh played in the Tacoma Dome, although the rivalry between the Loggers and Lutes dates back to 1926.

In 1977 and 1978 the game was played in the Kingdome in Seattle. The Loggers lead the series 43-15-5, although the Lutes won the 1988 contest by a 30-7 margin and lead the series of those games played in the Tacoma Dome.

Tickets for the game go on sale on Monday, Aug. 28, at the Tacoma Dome Ticketmaster office, the Pacific Lutheran University Student Center and the University of Puget Sound athletic department offices. Ticket prices are $10 for reserved seating, $6 for students and general admission seating will be available for $7 the day of the game only at the Tacoma Dome.

A group of 10 local area businesses have stepped forward to provide financial assistance to insure the rivalry continues in the Tacoma Dome.

The sponsors include First Interstate Bank, Pacific First Federal, Pierce County Medical, Puget Sound National Bank, Simpson Tacoma Kraft, Tacoma Athletic Commission, US West Communications, US West Cellular and the Weyerhaeuser Company.

many others before the district. Like Osborne, he says his financial skills would help him find solutions to problems, as well as make department decisions. Like Osborne, he has never been a firefighter. "You don't have to be a fireman per se — it's a basic decision-making job, and I think

I have the educational background to allow me to do that," Jaber said. "I'd like to see the department have sound financial decisionmaking when working with other political jurisdictions in the new city." Jaber, a customer sales representative for Hertz, lives with his wife, Diane, and 2-year-old son in south Federal Way. He grew up in the Sea-Tac area, obtained a degree in business administration from Willamette University, and moved to Federal Way a decade ago. He has been a representative for the Federal Way Community Council and an area chairman of the Republican party. He also is a member of the Lebanese-American Club. HE WAS ONE OF more than 30 original candidates for the city council of Federal Way, but lost the primary race for Position 2 to Mark Freitas and Joel Marks, who will vie on the Sept. 19 ballot. He was disappointed at the loss, he said, but now wants to apply his cityhood zeal to the fire department, which must deal with the workings of the new city.

Like Osborne, he feels the city council will choose to urge voters to annex the city into the fire department, a move which would leave the department largely unchanged. Otherwise, the city would have to contract for services or create its own fire department. "I'd like to see (annexation) happen because the city will have enough headaches to handle beside the fire department," Jaber said. Jaber claims confidence in his campaign, but admits longtime commissioner Osborne could pull out enough votes to beat him. In that case, he said, he'll probably return to school, maybe to become a teacher. "I guess I won't be crushed," he said.

Realtors make additional donations

By KURT HERZOG

More checks are in the mail from the Seattle-King County Association of Realtors to four candidates in both the Federal Way and Sea-Tac city council elections. The association is donating $250-$500 to each of those candidates. It earlier donated the same amounts to most of those candidates for the primary election.

commercial or apartment zones, to lower-density zones, such as single-family. The association did not endorse any candidates who were against government compensation for property owners who had their land downzoned. Downzoning could play a key role in the land-use policies of the new councils. Some council members say it may be a necessary step to control runaway development in the new cities, while others say it would unfairly deprive property owners of potential income.

In Federal Way, the association will donate $500 each to Position 1 candidate Mary Gates, Position 2 candidate Mark Freitas, Position 5 candidate Bob Wood and Position 6 candidate Bob Stead. The association earlier Land-use issues have been the most-discussed subject in Federal Way City Council races. The councils in both cities will be elected Sept. 19.
